Many reports have been coming in regarding fall colds and, in a few cases, bronchitis, in newly housed pullets. This may in part be due to the very warm and changeable weather. Fall colds, when pullets are in confinement, may be treated with permanganate of potash. Use enough to color the water a deep red color. Withhold the water from the flock until ten or eleven o'clock, depending upon the time of the year and the heat of the day. The birds will then be sufficiently thirsty to crowd around the pan and disinfect each other in their efforts to get the water.

A few drops of kerosene may be placed on top of the drinking water as a treatment for colds. A 10 per cent solution of Argyrol is good for individual treatment; use a medicine dropper and place three or four drops in the eyes, nostrils, and throat. For severe cases of colds or bronchitis, use "B-K" in the drinking water—at the rate of 1 cupful to five gallons. Withhold the water and force the birds to disinfect, each other as with the permangate of potash treatment.

Black antimony, used at the rate of 1 ounce per 100 birds per day, is also recommended. This may be fed in the dry mash.

CONIFEROUS TREES AS A FARM CROP

Profitable crops may be obtained from the poorer areas on many farms by planting coniferous trees. Even in small sizes the conifers may be sold at a profit as Christmas trees, and in the large sizes they have assured market for lumber or pulpwood. As a class they promise earlier and larger money returns to the farmer than other kinds of trees. Conifers are also very effective as wildbreaks. And although they grow best on rich, deep, well-drained soils, some species of conifers—the pines in particular—will ordinarily take hold better than hardwoods on poor soils such as worn-out fields or pastures, sandy, cut-over and burned-over woodlands, and areas with shallow soil.

Information on how to obtain trees for planting, as well as complete instructions for producing home-grown seedlings, for planting them, and for caring for the plantation, are given in Farmers' Bulletin 1453, just issued by the department of agriculture under the title, Growing and Planting Coniferous Trees on the Farm.

Eighteen states listed in the bulletin now operate nurseries or provide in some other way for distributing tree seedings for planting. These states usually furnish the seedlings at cost or free. Good planting stock can also be obtained from commercial dealers.

With the possible exception of two or three species of hardwoods, nearly twice as much saw-log timber can be taken from a fully stocked merchantable stand of conifers as from a similar stand of hardwoods. Conifers can be matured in greater numbers per acre, and their straight, unbranched trucks yield more saw logs. In general, therefore, for timber production conifers are the best choice for farm planting.

NEW DAIRY COURSE

Starting October 19, the extension service of Connecticut Agricultural college will inaugurate a correspondence and radio course in dairy farming, open to all dairy farmers and others interested in dairying. The course will consist of a series of 25 lectures to be sent out weekly and is the first effort of the Connecticut Agricultural college to conduct a correspondence course.

It is not necessary that a dairyman have a radio in order to take advantage of this course, although all lectures will be sent out by radio in advance of being mailed to subscribers. The first lecture will be put on the air on Monday night, October 19. Each Monday night following, at the same hour, succeeding lectures will be given. It is expected that the lectures will be printed in time for mailing out the following day.

POPPING OF CORN CAUSED BY MOISTURE IN KERNEL

The reason for the popping of popcorn is that it contains moisture, says Scientific American in answer to an inquiry. When the corn is heated over the fire this moisture is turned into steam. Owing to the fact that the kernel of the corn is surrounded by a hard, dense shell this steam cannot escape. Therefore, the pressure rises, and when this pressure more than equals the strength of the shell the corn literally explodes. As a check on this phenomenon, if you will try to pop some corn which has been slowly dried you will find it does not pop.

The puffing of rice and wheat is done according to the Anderson patents. The moist grain is heated to a high temperature under pressure; this pressure is then suddenly released. The result is a sudden explosion of the steam and gas inside the grains. The nutrition division of the department of agriculture has made numerous tests regarding the digestibility of puffed or popped corns.

Pepper Mint Oil Rarer

Peppermint oil in this country has become such a rare product that prices have gone up as high as $20 a pound against the average price of $4 and $5 a ton a few years ago. Almost the entire output of the United States comes from St. Joseph County, in the northernmost part of Indiana. Frost coming earlier than usual is responsible for the present shortage to a large extent.

Give people what you think they want instead of what they ask for and you will make a lot of enemies.

POETRY

MY CANDLE

I have a little candle,
Sealed in a box it glows;
Its light hath many colors,
No other mortal knows.
It flickers, is not steady,
And daily oft it beams;
'Tis only at its brightest,
Lighting up my dreams.

My candle, ah, I know not
From whence to me it came;
My heart it is that feeds it,
My little taper flame;
Yes, by my blood 'tis nouriahed;
'Twere dark unless 'twere brought.
Suppose my heart stopped beating—
I shudder at the thought!

Sometimes the queerest fancies—
I hate them!—come to me;
And through the dreadful riddle,
Somehow, I cannot see:
Deprived me of my candle
Would straightway cease to glow;
And I, unless 'twas shining—
What could I see—or know

I struggle and I struggle,
And it is all in vain—
How can a man distinguish
Twixt mind, and soul and brain?
Deprive a viol of its strings—
Its soul of music dies.
And now about the human lute—
Will it be otherwise?

How clumsily I say it!
My words are all awry;
And do you catch my meaning?
I'm not afraid to die.
But, oh, my flickering candle—
Alas, I'm wracked by doubt;
I dread, I dread the moment
When its light—goes out!
—Samuel Minturn Peck in Boston Transcript.

Fame

All over the world we sing of fame,
Bright as a bubble and hollow;
With a breath men make it and give it a name;
All over the world they sing the same
And the beautiful bubble follow.

Its rounded, splendid, gossamer walls,
Hide more than our fairy fancies:
For here in the vaulted, antique halls,
'Mid oriel splendors, a light foot falls,

And men will die for a glancing eye,
And toil that tarries never,
More, far more, than look and sigh
For men will fight, and men will die,
But follow it on forever.
—James Herbert Morse.

In the congregation were delegations from the G. A. R., and the Sons of Veterans. The local members made the trip in the automobiles of William H. Whitehead, Herbert Rennard, Charles R. Kloss, Albert Airey and Earle M. Wood.

The heavy gale which went along with Saturday's storm, tore off one of the big limbs of one of the elm trees on Norwich avenue. It fell directly across the sidewalk and had to be removed by men in the employ of the Ponemah mills. The gigantic lone oak in the lot at the corner of South B street and Hunters avenue, which has resisted many a storm in its day, had several of its largest branches torn off by the wind. At the rogue grounds on Ponemah heights, havoc was played with the oak grove, many of the finest trees surrendering their boughs to the storm.

TOWN MEETING WILL BE CALLED UPON TO VOTE ON ANNUAL BUDGET

The annual town meeting, which was adjourned from election night a week ago Monday, according to the usual custom, will be held this (Tuesday) evening in the town hall when the citizens will be called upon to vote the appropriation of the amounts needed to conduct the town's business, as recommended by the selectmen.

The total of estimated expenses for the current year is $333,316.83 as compared with $324,700 a year ago, but the selectmen are able to recommend a tax of eight mills, which is half a mill less than was recommended a year ago. This is possible largely because there is a large net balance carried over amounting to $19,163.96 and there is $15,000 of uncollected taxes shown in the estimated receipts, which is $5,000 more than the corresponding item a year ago.

The largest number of the regular estimated expense items are at the same figure as they were a year ago, but in a few there are charges. The amount for widows' pension is set at $4,500, which is $500 more than a year ago. The item of interest is $12,000, which is $3,000 less than last year.

Election expenses were estimated at $8,500 last year. This time that amount is cut down by $3,500. The sinking fund is to have $20,000 placed in it which is $10,000 more than last year. Street lighting shows an increase from $5,500 to $7,500. In the item for state tax there is a reduction of $5,000 as the figure this year is $25,000 as compared to $30,000 a year ago. An additional appropriation of $3,000 for the assessors office is shown, as the total asked for is $7,800 as compared with the figure of $4,800 last year. An item of $1,000 for the town health office is a new one in the list of estimated expens. The sum of $600 asked for the Taftville fire engine company is $400 less than last year and $650 for the Yantic fire engine company is $150 more than last year.

The town school committee is asking for an appropriation of $281,263.92 as compared with $275,785.70 last year, which calls for 12 3-4 mills which is three-quarters of a mill more than a year ago.

CLEARS UP MYSTERY IN CAPT. ROSTAD'S DEATH

The mystery concerning the manner in which Capt. S. M. Rostad, Noank yachting master, whose dead body was found floating in Fishers Island sound a week ago, met his death, has been cleared away by County Detective William E. Lewis after an investigation that he had pursued during all of last week. The county detective has learned that Rostad was drowned on the night of Sept. 22, when he fell from a launch in which he, with Captian Dix, skipper of the yacht Radiant, owned by Clifford R. Hendrix of Fishers Island and New York city; Joseph Main and William Corey, the latter two residents of Mitchell street, Groton, were enroute from Noank to New London. County Detective Lewis is satisfied that the drowning was entirely accidental and has so reported to Coroner J. J. Desmond at whose instigation the investigation was undertaken.

When Rostad's body was found floating off the entrance to Stonington harbor, much speculation was caused because of the fact that he had not been reported missing. Notice of the finding of the body appeared in the papers and several days elapsed without any light being shed as to the manner in which he met his death. The only information that the town authorities of Stonington were able to gather was that Rostad, with a man known as Captain Dix, had left Noank on Sept. 22, ostensibly to go to New York. Satisfied that the case required more than passing consideration, Coroner Desmond requested County Detective Lewis to take the matter in hand, with the results mentioned above. The detective has succeeded in tracing every movement of Rostad on the day that he met his death.

Seeking a machinist to do some work on the yacht Carnquipa owned by Mrs. Frazier of Hartford, of which he was skipper, Captain Rostad came to New London on the morning of Sept. 22, according to County Detective Lewis, and here met Captain Dix. Together they went to the residence of Joseph Main, Mitchell street, Groton. Dix having information that Main could secure a machinist. Corey, a motor machinist, residing next door to Main, was called upon, and all four journeyed to Noank where Corey inspected the motor of the yacht and agreed to undertake repairing it.

It was late when the men concluded the inspection of the yacht and the four started for this city in a motor boat with Captain Dix at the wheel. Off See Far Reef, Rostad, according to the statements of Dix, Corey and Main, arose to cross the deck of the craft, fell overboard when the motor boat gave a sudden lurch. A life preserver was thrown to him but before the motor boat could be turned about the motor stopped and it was several minutes before it could be started again. The life buoys was located but Rostad had disappeared, and after searching for him for some time without success, Corey, Main and Dix continued on to this city. Main and Corey in affidavits made to County Detective Lewis stated that they had failed to report the drowning of Rostad because Dix informed them that he knew the man's relatives and would see that they were informed.

But Dix, according to the detective, was called suddenly to New York, and, apparently left without reporting the drowning of Rostad to the authorities. Whether any further action will be taken in the matter remains with Coroner Desmond, with whom the county detective has filed a detailed report of the results of his investigation. The report is being considered by the coroner.

NAVY DAY CELEBRATION ON SHIP AND SHORE THE 27TH

Preparations have been made by the navy department and the navy league for the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the birth of the United States Navy on Oct. 27, the sixty-seventh birthday of Theodore Roosevelt.

President Coolidge has approved the proposal for the celebration and Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, has decided to set the day aside for an "at home" on board all warships and at naval shore stations in order to give the public a chance to become acquainted with officers and men and learn something about the preparations for national defense.

At the request of the navy league, the navy department will order all naval vessels that can be spared to ports on the Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific coasts. Most of the ships on the Atlantic side will be engaged in their autumn target practice in Cuban waters, but many ships will be available for the celebration on the Pacific coast where the greater strength of the navy is concentrated.

D. A. R. Work at Ellis Island.

Another appeal has come to the D. A. R. from Ellis island. The government recognizes the splendid work of the Daughters of the American Revolution in supplying handwork to the alien women detained at Ellis Island. These women formerly were a very serious problem. Nervous from a trying voyage and not understanding the reason for their detention, suspicious of those about them whose babel of tongues only added to their confusion, they were troublesome. Under the sympathetic guidance of the Daughters of the American Revolution, who have furnished them profitable handwork, they have quieted down. Each chapter is asked to send a box this year containing thread for lace, new goods for aprons and children's dresses and wool for sweaters.

FINED FOR RESISTING AND FIGHTING POLICEMAN

In the city court Monday morning James Bush, 44, colored, was fined $10 and costs for intoxication and $15 and costs for resisting an officer. Officer Frank Gwiczdowski, late Sunday night, saw Bush looking into a window of a house on North Thames street. He accosted the man, who addressed him in abusive language, claiming that he was looking into his own window. Under the circumstances the officer arrested Bush who then put up a fight. Earl Vera, who happened to come along went to the aid of the officer, and Bush, who got his clothes torn in the battle, was landed in a cell at police headquarters. Later it was found that Bush was really peeking into a window of his own home. But the fight he put up when taken in charge resulted in the two fines Monday morning. The fines, which with costs totaled $35.50, were paid.

Raymond Thompson, 21, of this city, and Daniel Regan, 28, of the Submarine base, Navy Yard, were before the court charged with evading payment of $6 in taxi fares. The charges were nolled after they had agreed to pay the taxi fares.

NORWICH TOWN

At the October meeting of the Dorcas Home Missionary society of the First Methodist Episcopal church, held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. George Manning of Yantic, the annual election resulted as follows: President, Mrs. James B. Aldrich; vice president, Mrs. Albert G. Miner; secretary, Mrs. Stanton W. Brown; treasurer, Mrs. George Manning. Mrs. William Weaver was elected chairman of the work committee. During the afternoon members served on patch work. Later refreshments were served by the hostess.

Mrs. Manning usually entertains the society each year in June, at its closing meeting; but owing to ill health the annual session was deferred to the first fall meeting.

Rev. James B. Aldrich, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, conducted a religious service at Norwich State Insane Hospital, Sunday morning, prior to his regular church service.

At the morning worship at the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Aldrich preached from Luke 10.42. "But one thing is needful; and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her."

Joseph Olsen was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening, when the topic was "They First Gave Their Own Selves." A stewardship meditation, II Corinthians 8:1-15.

At this service, there was special music by the junior choir of twelve boys and girls, under direction of Miss Florence M. Bennett, who accompanied at the piano for the singing.

This chorus of mixed voices and was recently organized by Miss Brown.

Rally Day is to be observed at this church Sunday October 18th, with a special program, in charge of Mrs. Richard Carter, chairman of the committee in charge.

The regular Sunday evening preaching services which were discontinued through the summer, are to be resumed by Rev. Mr. Aldrich November 1st.

The thank offering meeting of the Foreign Missionary society of the First Congregational church, is to be held Wednesday afternoon at 3:30, in the chapel. At this meeting there will be news of interest from Gertrude S. Avery, a missionary in India. Members are to contribute articles on Thanksgiving.

The final rehearsal for the Abduction of Daisy White, by the Men's class of the First Congregational church is to be held Wednesday evening in the chapel.

As a result of the several localities being canvassed to remind members of Rally day, also to solicit the attendance of several who do not regularly attend Sunday morning worship, there was a good showing at the First Congregational church and Sunday school Sunday.

The committee in charge, Clyde M. Beebe, chairman, Thomas H. Bacheler and Henry F. Frazier, was assisted by a number from the church membership, in calling on members of the parish on New London turnpike, Town street, Scotland Road, East Town St., Canterbury turnpike, Otrobando avenue, West Town street, and various localities in the city, where members are scattered.

The canvassers all did well in covering the territory assigned them, many social calls with renewed friendships being the result of the week's work. At the Sunday morning worship there were members in the congregation, who had not been present before in a long time.

The pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached a splendid sermon, "Forward Steps in the Kingdom," was the theme, with Scripture reference in II Samuel.

During the session of the Sunday school, Miss Susan Hyde's class of young women, the women of the Dropped in class and those from the class formerly taught by Mrs. Edwin Hutchinson, consolidated and made one very large class, taught by Thomas H. Bacheler.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening had for its leader, Ralph H. Marsh. The topic assigned was "They First Gave Their Own Selves" a stewardship meditation II Corinthians 8:1-15. For the midweek service of conference and prayer Thursday evening, in the Congregational chapel, the topic is to be, Our Work Through the State Conference. Mathew 10:5-27.

By invitation of Miss Florence M. Bennett, a former member of the Lookout committee, of Norwich Christian Endeavor union, several members of that committee were pleasantly entertained Friday evening, at her home on Vergason avenue. Among those attending were, Howard Bushnell of Occum, and Miss Jessie E. Hyde and George F. Hyde, of Washington street. The evening was spent in sociability, during which the hostess assisted by her sister, Mrs. N. Gilbert Gray, served cocoa and fancy wafers.

After the guests had arrived it became known that the date was the birthday of Dr. Gray. Two fine birthday cakes were cut and distributed by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Crowell; formerly of 197 Laurel Hill avenue, are occupying their new home on Town street, recently purchased from Walter Durr and Miss Rose K. Durr, R. N.

A new home is being erected on the former Deacon Edward A. Huntington property, Upper Washington St., for the family of Sidney P. Smith, who will occupy it upon its completion.

Don't Say
You Can't Sleep
—You Can

If your health and nerves are to be maintained at the full vigor, which makes life worth living, you must get proper sleep. The number of hours you sleep is not as important as the depth of your sleep. You should be able to fall asleep almost as soon as your head touches the pillow and sleep without a break until morning. That kind of sleep is the greatest aid to health, beauty, vigor and strength.

And you can do it. Those who are troubled with fitful, broken slumber have found that this condition is changed as soon as they begin to use a new preparation called Neura.

Neura is an easy-to-take pink pellet that contains no opiates or any harmful or habit-forming drugs. Neura quiets the too active brain, soothes the shattered nerves and brings the sweet, profound sleep of childhood. And best of all, you can get Neura from Lee & Osgood Co. or any good druggist with an absolute guarantee to return your full purchase price if you do not get wonderful results from the use of the very first package.

RAILWAY CLERKS RECEIVE ULTIMATUM FROM A. F. OF L.

Brotherhood With 91,200 Members is Threatened With Suspension Unless Within 90 Days It Transfers Certain Members of Its Organization to the International Brotherhood of Teamsters—Vote of 23,845 to 3,895 Came as Culimination of a Long Jurisdictional Feud Between the Unions.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 13.—(AP)—The Brotherhood of Railway clerks, with a total membership of 91,200 today was suspended from the American Federation of Labor unless within the next ninety days, it transfers to the international Brotherhood of Teamsters, all drivers, chauffeurs, stablemen and garage employes, heretofore under the jurisdiction of the clerks. The vote to suspend was on a roll call, 23,845 to 3,895.

In a signed statement given to the press, after the convention had adjourned, five of the six delegates of the railway clerks declared they would decline to give up jurisdiction. Furthermore, the statement asserted this in the opinion of the signers, the executive council of the clerks organization would give up its charter in the American Federation of Labor permanently rather than to surrender jurisdiction. President E. H. Fitzpatrick of San Francisco, did not sign the statement, but the signers declared he approved of it.

The matter came to a vote as a culmination of a long jurisdictional feud between the unions. The last convention of the federation at El Paso vainly tried to adjudicate the trouble. During the last year, the executive council also tried, without success, to bring about an agreement.

When the committee on executive council's report recommended to the convention that the clerks be suspended unless they relinquished jurisdiction within three months, President Fitzgerald immediately voiced his strong opposition. Other members of the delegation did likewise and recited the history of the struggle. Teamsters vigorously took up the cudgels for the resolution, and the subsequent debate that ensued became heated.

James Wilson, of Cincinnati, seventh vice president, chairman of the committee, said that in his 25 years experence in judging jurisdictional disputes he had never seen a case where the teamsters were so strongly justified in their contention. He pleaded with the clerks to stay in the federation. T. W. McCullough, of Omaha, Neb., secretary of the committee, said the matter resolved itself into a question of obedience to the lawful procedure of the federation.

INVESTIGATION OF SINKING OF SUBMARINE S-51 ENDS

NEW LONDON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—Investigation of the sinking of the submarine S-51 which has been in progress in Boston, was transferred here today when members of the United States steamboat inspectors office questioned a number of witnesses. The S-51 was sent to the bottom off Block Island on the night of Friday, September 25, after a collision with the steamer City of Rome of the Savannah line.

The inquiry today was conducted by Herman L. Parker, inspector of hulls, and John Stewart, inspector of boilers, both of Boston. Others present were the New London inspector of hulls, John A. MacDonald, and the New London inspector of boilers, Harry M. Rankin. The Savannah line was represented by Captain Luther E. Dow and Attorney Earl Farwell.

Lieutenant Commander J. A. Brownell, of the submarine division of which the S-51 was attached, was questioned concerning orders given to the commander of the submarine. Lieutenant R. H. Dobson, one of the men lost in the sea tragedy.

Lieutenant Commander Brownell testified that in his opinion, there should have been three men on watch on the bridge of the S-51 at the time of the collision. These should have been the officer on watch, a steersman and a quartermaster. In answer to questions, he said that the four student officers aboard the craft, in addition to the two regularly assigned officers, were capable of standing a deck watch while the ship was on the surface. He said they could have been used for this purpose if the commander had so desired.

There was no question, he said, that the vessel was being operated from the bridge and not from the conning tower, it only being necessary to navigate the vessel from the conning tower in very rough weather. He was questioned at length regarding the lights used on the S-51 and the method of operating them.

Lieutenant P. L. Maher, duty communication officer at the submarine base here on the night of the disaster, told of picking up the first report of the collision. It came by international wireless, he said, and he immediately attempted to get in touch with the City of Rome. He testified that he was unable to establish communication with that steamer and declared that much valuable time was lost in trying to reach that craft. It was his opinion, he testified, that the City of Rome should have remained at the scene of the accident until daylight.

Dewey G. Kile, one of the three men picked up by the City of Rome lifeboat after the collision, again told the story of his experience after after the two boats had come together. He was awakened, he said, when a piece of cork struck him in the face. The water in the compartment was then up to his ankles and in less than a minute it was up to his knees. It was coming in from the floor, he said, showing that the submarine had been damaged below the water line. The hatch in the conning tower was the only one open and he reached the deck through this. Within ten seconds he was hurled into the sea. The only person he saw in the water, he testified, was a torpedo man, Frank C. Wiseman, of South Boston. Kile was in the water 45 minutes before he was picked up by the City of Rome lifeboat.

Following the taking of testimony, the members of the inquiry board visited the submarine S-49 to question the electrician regarding the method of lighting the craft.

The inquiry here today completes the steamboat inspectors office investigations of the disaster. Its report will be forwarded to Washington.

$683,000 WORTH OF STOLEN JEWELS REPORTED RETURNED

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Assistant District Attorney Pecora said that he had unconfirmed information that the $683,000 worth of jewels stolen from the apartment of Mrs. Jessie Woolworth Donahue, Sept. 30 had been returned to the detectives representing the insurance company. If this information is correct, he said, those now in possession of the gems will be at his office tonight in order to explain their possession.

CHEERFUL REPORTS FROM THE SECURITY CONFERENCE

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—The rosiest official communique since the sessions started came tonight from Europe's security conference, and there is so much optimism in the air that there is even talk of concluding the conference Friday, which is Austen Chamberlain's sixty-second birthday.

Nevertheless, a serious question remains unsettled, that is the treatment of Poland in the matter of the French guarantee of the proposed German-Polish arbitration treaty.

France is being put in the embarrassing position of either demanding complete direct guarantees for Poland or more indirect guarantees through the league of nations covenant, and must decide whether she will risk that general security for which she has been striving for long decades in over-insistence or loyalty to Poland.

Czechoslovakia, which has the same kind of alliances with France as has Poland, though she has fewer potential political difficulties before her, is satisfied with league guarantees, and it is believed that France will accept a compromise arrangement on the guaranty problem, for, as M. Briand said tonight, "all our peoples except something definite out of Locarno."

WORLD'S RECORDS MADE IN AIRPLANE RACES

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 13—Cyrus K. Bettis' winning average speed of 248.975 miles an hour in the Pulitzer trophy race yesterday was not the only official record the crack army pilot attained in his race with Lieutenant Alford J. Williams of the navy in the specially built 617 horsepower Curtiss racers, it was revealed today. The announcement was made by Otis A. Porter, and Chester S. Ricker, both of Indianapolis, Ind., official timers of the races for the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, the body governing all international airplane speed records.

Lieutenant Bettis' speed for the 200 kilometre distance was a new world record for an enclosed circuit course. It displaced Lieutenant Williams' world and Pulitzer record of 243.674 miles an hour made in winning the race in St. Louis in 1923, the officials declared.

Lieutenant Bettis set a new world's record for 100 kilometres also, the officials revealed, when at the end of two laps of the race his time was 248.-608 miles an hour. The previous 100 kilometre record was also made by Lieutenant Williams, in the St. Louis Pulitzer race, his time having been 243.812.

NAVAL COURT OF INQUIRY OF SHENANDOAH DISASTER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—Changes made in the gas cell installation on the airship Shenandoah were declared unsafe today by two construction officers appearing before the naval court of inquiry. Both added, however, that with a crew as skilled as that of this airship, the alterations were not necessarily dangerous.

Commander Ralph D. Meyerbacher, who constructed the Shenandoah, said he had known Lieutenants Roland G. Mayer and Charles E. Bauch, officers in charge of the gas cells, had great confidence in their skill and ability, and would have felt safe aboard the Shenandoah with them on the job to look after the new valve arrangement.

Commander Garland Fulton, who approved the change with a warning that it would not be as "foolproof" as the original installation, declared the Shenandoah's crew was one of the most experienced that could be found and that it was because of this that the alteration was authorized. He said the total gas valve capacity was reasonable, but that he would have preferred to have more of it in the automatic instead of the maneuvering or hand valves.

SHIPPING BOARD REJECTS ALL BIDS FOR HOG ISLAND

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—All bids recently received by the Fleet Corporation for the sale of Hog Island were rejected today by the shipping board.

The offers were described either as inadequate or as not meeting requirements of the advertisemnt.

The board withheld decision as to inviting new bids or permitting the matter to rest unde rthe original advertisement, which fixed no time limit for receiving offers.

Much of the equipment which was on the property at the end of the war has been sold, and it now is regarded as primarily of importance as a shipping terminal.

Business Conditions Good in New England

BOSTON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—Marked improvement in the employment situation in New England was reported tonight in the monthly survey of the federal employment service. This was particularly noticeable in the shoe and jewelry industries. Building trades continue active. The report by states for northern and southern New England follows:

Connecticut—Industrial employment conditions throughout the state showed a decided improvement during September. Practically all plants are running full time and there is very little unemployment. Shortage of certain skilled workers reported in the metal trades. While there was a lull in the demand for farm labor during the month increased activity in the tobacco warehouses absorbed those released from crop work. Hat industry in some sections working to full capacity with overtime prevalent in certain departments. Building operations at a high peak with the resident supply of tradesmen adequate for the demand.

Rhode Island—There was a marked improvement in the industrial situation during the past thirty days. While the textile, jewelry and machine industries in some sections are still operating part time there was a noticeably upward trend in these industries as compared with the previous month. Silk and braiding mills are operating on overtime schedules and will continue indefinitely. Building projects throughout the state furnish employment for several hundred craftsmen, with most localities able to meet the demand. Less call for farm help reported during September.

Maine—While part time operations continue in the textile and machine industries in some parts of the state, reports from other sections indicate an improvement, with a substantial reduction in the number of unemployed. Railroad repair shops continue on a five day week basis. Shortage of female workers in the shoe industry reported in one section of the state, iron works operating part time but the resultant surplus of labor is absorbed in other lines. Farm labor supply throughout the entire state ample for all demands.

Massachusetts—The outstanding feature of the month in this state was the marked improvement in the shoe and allied lines. In the large shoe centers of the state the majority of the factories have resumed full time time operations and a shortage of a certain class of workers has been increased and the number unemployed correspondingly reduced.

Metal trades throughout the state generally active with a shortage of certain skilled workers noted. Decided improvement reported in the jewelry industry with a very optimistic feeling prevalent for increased business. Extensive building projects in practically all sections furnish employment for thousands of craftsmen, with most localities able to meet demand.

CASE INVOLVES BOND THEFT OF GERALD CHAPMAN

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Part of the loot of more than million dollars worth of bonds obtained by Gerald Chapman, mail bandit under sentence of death in Connecticut for murder in a sensational mail truck robbery in New York four years ago, figured in the trial which opened in United States district court here today of several men charged with disposing of some of the securities.

The defendants are Stephen Donnerson, Jr., A. W. Perelstrous, Emerson J. Gardner, Frederick G. Munns and Earl V. Von Brandenburg, of Philadelphia, and James B. Halbert, George W. Kimball, Max Greenberg and Harry Levinson of New York.

Francis B. Biddle, assistant United States district attorney, announced to the jury that Munns, Von Brandenburg and Kimball would be witnesses for the government.

In August 1922, according to Mr. Biddle, $300,000 worth of stolen bonds were pledged with the Corn Exchange National bank of this city by Gardner, another stock dealer, Robinson and Perelstrous for loans aggregating $250,000. It was not until four months later, however, that the bank discovered the bonds had been stolen. The discovery came when the three men failed to pay interest on the loans and the bank was preparing to sell the bonds to protect itself.

The ramifications of the alleged conspiracy which Mr. Biddle declared was directly connected with the Chapman gang's holdup of the mail truck was related to the jury by the government attorney.

After the robbery, he said, Chapman and his pals turned the securities over to a New York "ring" for disposal, two members of which, he asserted, were Greenberg and Levinson. Halbert and Kimball, acting as "go-betweens" for the New York end, got in touch with Munns and Von Brandenburg who were acting for the Philadelphia "distribution of stolen bonds," and through them the $260,000 worth of stolen securities reached Gardner, Robinson and Perelstrous.

CALL FOR MEETING OF TAX COLLECTORS OF 110 TOWNS

HARTFORD, Oct. 13—Declaring that an investigation began several months ago has shown that the tax collectors of the towns are not performing their duties as prescribed by statute or in anything like a uniform manner, Tax Commissioner William H. Blodgett has called a meeting of the collectors of about 110 towns for the purpose of discussing problems and possible solutions for Monday, October 19, at the capitol.

The collectors from towns having a population of less than 4,000 will be invited to attend and the commissioner expects to arrang a meeting for collectors from the other towns sometime later. Selectmen have also been invited to attend and recently elected officials are especially urged by the commissioner to be present to make themselves familiar with the best methods employed.

Next Week Fateful For French Cabinet

The Downfall or Survival Will Be Decided This Week at Nice.

PARIS, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—M. Caillaux, the finance minister, had an extremely busy day explaining to the council of ministers and later to the finance committee of the chamber of deputies, just what had been accomplished at Washington with respect to a settlement of France's debt to the United States, and replying to several questions concerning the present situation of the French treasury.

The most emphatic remark of the finance minister was: "The negotiations with the United States on the debt settlement are not broken off, and must continue."

Relative to the treasury M. Caillaux volunteered that the Bank of France was ready to face its obligations until the end of the present month.

He refused to commit himself on the capital levy scheme which the Socialists are championing, but gave it t obe understood that he would outline fully his financial policies before the congress of the radical party opens its sessions at Nice on Thursday next. The minister is expected to speak there Saturday. The battle whether the Painleve cabinet remains in power or goes down in defeat will be fought at Nice.

It is virtually settled that the chamber and senate will reconvene October 27, but the fate of the cabinet will be sealed at Nice this week.

FRANCE HAS MADE NO REQUEST FOR NEW LOAN

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(A. P.)—While the French government for some time has been anxious to float a loan of $100,000,000 in this country, no formal request for new financing has been placed before its American bankers, J. P. Morgan & Co., it was learned officially today. Reports that negotiations for a loan had been abandoned because of France's failure to fund her war debt to the United States were declared to be unfounded.

Until the debt situation has been clarified American bankers do not expect that France will begin overtures for private financial assistance of any sort. Opinion is divided in the financial district as to whether a temporary settlement will pave the way for a new French loan, but the general belief is that Washington will not frown on any private proposal once a tentative or permanent debt funding arrangement is in sight.

Both French bonds and French francs were heavy in the local markets today on the announcement from Washington that further credit for foreign nations was dependent upon debt settlements.

TO RENEW EFFORTS TO RAISE SUBMARINE S-51

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(A. P.)—The navy salvage ship Falcon sailed today from the Brooklyn navy yard to Block Island to renew the navy's efforts to raise the submarine S-51 which was rammed and sunk in a collision September 25 with the steamship City of Rome.

The Falcon carried a cargo of pontoons, which navy divers will attempt to attach to the sunken submarine. An attempt will be made to close the holes in the hull after which the lifting power of compressed air and the anchored pontoons will be applied to raising the ship to the surface.

The S-50, a sister ship of the ill-fated S-51, went into drydock at Brooklyn today for inspection by naval divers who will make the descent to the S-51. The divers hope to familiarize themselves with the hull and interior of the sunken vessel by thorough study of the sister ship.

Officials of the Brooklyn navy yard today expressed hope that the S-51 may be raised before the end of November.

In addition to the Falcon, the U. S. S. Vestal and U. S. S. Sycamore, both salvage ships, have been ordered to Block Island to assist in the salvage operations. The Vestal is now on route from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, where the annual winter naval manoeuvres are held.

U. S. TROOPS POLICING THE CITY OF PANAMA

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—Official word of the employment of about 600 American troops from the Canal Zone garrison to police the city of Panama at the request of the president and minister of foreign affairs of the republic reached the state department today in a telegram from Dana G. Munro, the American charge d'affaires.

The troops moved in yesterday without serious incidents so far as known, the message said expressing the belief that a serious situation would have developed from the disorders of the preceding days in another 24 hours, resulting probably in wider bloodshed, if the canal authorities had not intervened. A message to the war department from Major General Lassiter, commanding American forces in the Canal Zone, attributed the disorders "especially to controversy between tenants and landlords."

DWIGHT F. DAVIS NAMED AS THE NEW SECRETARY OF WAR

New Member of Cabinet is a World War Veteran and Holds a Distinguished Service Cross For Gallantry in Action—Chief Justice Taft Will Administer the Oath of Office Today—Correspondence Between President Coolidge and Retiring Secretary Weeks Reflects the Cordial Relations That Have Existed Between Them—Mr. Weeks is Generally Regarded as One of the Great War Secretaries of Modern Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—John Wingate Weeks regretfully stepped out of public life today, relinquishing his office as secretary of war to Dwight F. Davis, assistant secretary, world war veteran and holder of the distinguished service cross for gallantry in action.

Mr. Weeks will leave Washington tomorrow night to begin a six months period of leisure and travel which his physicians hope will bring him complete restoration of health. He deferred his departure in order to be present tomorrow when Chief Justice Taft, at his personal request, administers the oath of office to Mr. Davis.

In all his nearly quarter century of public service, Mr. Weeks, has never known a moment of greater pride than came to him today after the announcement that he had found it necessary to resign. There was also an immediate outpouring from the white house, from cabinet members, from his associates in the war department and from his friends and citizens of widely different political faiths, testifying to the admiration and respect in which he was held and to the regret with which his withdrawal from public life was viewed.

A similar tribute came from Mr. Davis, on whose younger shoulders the weight of Mr. Weeks' responsibilities has fallen. In the resignation of the secretary he said, "the war department loses a true friend and the country a valuable public servant."

"According to the unanimous opinion of army officers, he is one of the great war secretaries of modern times ranking with Mr. Elihu Root," Mr. Davis continued. "He is regarded as a great cabinet minister by all public men who know him. In addition to his high talents, Mr. Weeks has the advantage of experience resulting from a long and varied public and political career.

"Another man familiar with the cares and burdens of the war portfolio, Newton D. Baker, who held the post during the world war, also expressed to Mr. Weeks his regret at the secretary's retirement and his hope that a complete restoration of health would be granted him. Mr. Baker, calling on the secretary, recalled that he had wished him "well" when he surrendered the war department to his keeping five years ago, and said he now came to wish him "God speed."

Mr. Weeks devoted considerable time and thought to the preparation of his farewell statement, making it a renewed piece of his faith that the military policies worked out for the nation and in the officers and men who are to carry them on.

"I have every confidence that a fair investigation of the army will demonstrate its efficiency and preparedness," he said.

In the appointment of Mr. Davis, which will be confirmed tomorrow when he takes the oath, brings to the control of war department affairs in a difficult time a man already familiar with its problems, whose handling of these matters in recent weeks indicated in his selection to succeed Mr. Weeks.

As acting secretary Mr. Davis has been called upon to map the course of the administration in dealing with the situation created by the air service controversy to lead the war department through the preliminary phases of the annual budget department disputes in which conflicting demands of various branches must be reconciled with the restrictions of government policy, and to carry out the policies of his chief without the benefit of personal conferences with him by his long illness and need of absolute rest.

Further qualifications of the new secretary, from experience on the war finance corporation, and more recently, in charge of industrial mobilization plans, are disclosed in the citation on which he was awarded the cross for valor in France. He entered the war department as an officer of the Missouri national guard and rose to the position of assistant chief of staff, 35th division, attaining the rank of lieutenant colonel, and he was almost the only civilian officer to serve in France as a divisional head of training and operations.

The citation notes that the then major displayed rare courage and devotion to duty" when, as adjutant of the 69th infantry in action between Baulny and Chaudion farm, he "voluntarily and in the face of intense enemy machine gun and artillery fire, proceeded to various points in his brigade sector, assisted in reorganizing positions and in replacing units of the brigade."

On the following day he heard of an impending counter-attack on an exposed position, organized a force of special duty men around the headquarters and rushed them forward "exposing himself with such coolness and great courage that his conduct inspired the troops in this crisis and enabled them to hold on to the face of vastly superior numbers."

DAVIS HAD BRILLIANT CAREER AT LAWN TENNIS

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Three decades as a champion player, as executive and as donor of the international Davis cup were spanned by the lawn tennis career of Dwight F. Davis, whose appointment as secretary of war, was announced today.

He first came into prominence on the court in 1899 by running up to M. D. Whitman in the national singles championship, repeating the feat defeated by J. P. Paret with Holcombe Ward the same year, however, he won his first national title. Representing Harvard, the team captured the intercollegiate doubles honors and then later added the national title, a crown which they held for three successive seasons.

Mr. Davis was a member of the American team which played against England in 1900 and 1902, while paired with Mr. Ward, he annexed the all comers' doubles championship at Wimbledon in 1901.

Although Ward and Davis continued to make infrequent appearances on the court, they did not return to tournament competition as a team until 1921 at Seabright, where they defeated the English pair, Woosnam and Turnbull, in the annual Seabright invitation tournament.

Mr. Davis was chosen vice president of the United States Lawn Tennis association in 1922 and president the following year. The Davis cup, which he donated for international play, has become one of the world's most coveted athletic trophies, having this year attracted entries from twenty-four nations in addition to the United States, which has won the cup five successive years.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN COOLIDGE AND WEEKS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(AP)—Correspondence exchanged between President Coolidge and John W. Weeks incident to the latter's resignation as secretary of war was made public today at the White House. The letter from Mr. Weeks read:

"I regret that it seems unwise for me to serve any longer as secretary of war, due to your kindness I have continued in office during the past six months hoping that about this time I would be able to resume active duty. While my health has greatly improved and I hope to recover it ultimately, I am not now in condition to undertake the responsibilities of any intensive occupation, and my doctors inform me that I shall not be able to do so for some months.

"It seems to me that in justice to you, the best interests of the military service and the proper consideration of the important non-military problems entrusted to the war department, I should no longer hold an office I cannot adequately fill. I therefore respectfully tender my resignation. In doing so I want to express my entire confidence in the success of your administration and my sincere regret that I cannot continue officially the extremely pleasant relationships I have enjoyed with you and your advisers, thank you for the kind consideration you have shown me during my service as a member of your cabinet."

The President replied:

"Your favor notifying me of your final determination to resign as secretary of war on account of your health has been received with a great deal of regret. I am pleased to know, however, that your physical condition is growing more hopeful each day and that with a relief from official duties there is prospect of a good recovery.

"I recall that you were entering public life 21 years ago when you came to Northampton to speak during your first campaign for election to congress. You have had the distinction of serving your home city, being a member of the National House and senate, and sitting in the cabinet under two administrations.

"Perhaps no more valuable suggestion was made to congress during the war than the proposal you made for preparing for peace. It will remain, with the law for national forests which bears your name, as a tribute to your statesmanship. I cannot dispute that this entitles you to feel that you have given all that could be required of you in looking after the welfare of your country. I value your ability so much and appreciate so highly the familiarity that your long experience in Washington has given you with the affairs of government that I feel your retirement to be a distinct loss.

"My personal relations with you have been such that I feel that the country is losing a valuable public administrator and I am losing intimate contact with a friend. Your wise conduct of the office of secretary of war has been a great satisfaction to me, and in the earned leisure that private life will afford you I trust you will fully regain your strength and find time to continue your interest in the well-being of our country. The administration of your office has been such that you will go down in history as a great secretary of war."

"In accepting your resignation I extend to you every good wish for your continuing welfare.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH AT AIR RACES

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., Oct. 13—The 1925 national air races were brought to a dramatic close today with a superb example of an army aviator's judgment, skill and coolness in the face of danger.

With the left landing wheel and its struts torn away against telephone and power lines from the large Douglas transport plane he was piloting in the Detroit News trophy race, Carl Early W. Duncan, of Langley Field Va., faced with one of aviation's most dangerous situations, nevertheless made a safe landing in full view of a breathless crowd.

Thousands stood transfixed as they realized the position of the aviator and his passenger, Sergeant William Morehead, also of Langley field.

They burst into cheers after the plane glided slowly to the ground with motor throttled down, taxied along for 100 yards balanced on its one remaining landing wheel, and came to a stop by digging its nose into the ground.

The propeller crumpled against the ground, the nose of the plane was bent and a wing dragged with some damage. But the two flyers stepped from their cockpits unhurt.

No improvement was noted Tuesday in the condition of Arthur Potter, 15 years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Potter of Windham Center who is on the dangerous list at St. Joseph's hospital, suffering from a fractured third pharacic vertebra and nearly severed spinal cord. He received his injuries Friday night when Thomas Lewis, a neighbor, pulled the trigger of a .38 calibre revolver which he believed to be empty. The bullet entered the boy's neck. He now lies fully conscious but his entire body is paralyzed. A consultation on his case was held Sunday by Doctors Edward J. Ottenheimer, Clarence E. Simonds and F. E. Guild and Dr. Thomas G. Seventy-five cents under dispute and a slap in the face resulted in the appearance in police court Tuesday morning of Mrs. Olivine Martell of 23 Ives street to answer to a charge of assault on Mrs. Pheobe Dubois, of 31 Ives street. The alleged act was committed at noon Monday, while Mrs. Dubois was going home from her work at the American Thread company plant. After considerable evidence had been heard Judge Foss amended the charge to one of breach of the peace and imposed a fine of $2 and costs, amounting to $10.15. Attorney Arthur T. Kelley represented the accused. Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Frank H. Fenton appeared for the state. The arrest was made by State Policeman Frank Schweikert of the local temporary barracks. The evidence brought out that there had been trouble previously between the two women. Marion Theireault and Philip Gaudreau testified that they saw Mrs. Martell strike Mrs. Dubois. They did not know why at the time. Both women said that they had known each other when residents of Manchester, N. H. Each accused the other of selling moonshine in that city and of being a troublemaker.

The old elm could not weather the storm Saturday and as it swayed dangerously in the high wind the trunk was split to within ten feet of the ground. One branch fell over and leaned against the twenty-two foot brick chimney which was in danger of toppling over under the weight. Tuesday morning Tree Warden Wilfrid Blanchette and his assistant cut the tree down, limb by limb.

MRS. IVAN JOHANSON LEAVES NOTE WHICH ALARMS HUSBAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 13—A search led by her husband is being made in North Windham and vicinity for Mrs. Georgia Johanson, who disappeared from her home in South Chaplin during the night after leaving a note found at four o'clock Tuesday morning, which read "I have gone away and will not return. You can look for me." Fear that his wife had been overcome by despondency and ended her life the husband, Ivan Johanson, hurried through the fields and woods and along the river banks all day Tuesday but failed to locate any clue to his wife's whereabouts. He is being assisted by a band of volunteer searchers, who traversed the river bank in the rear of the Johanson home and followed along Hall pond into the village of North Windham. Mr. and Mrs. Johanson were very happy. Seven years ago they left West Hartford where they had resided for seventeen years and came to South Chaplin. Some time ago Mrs. Johanson showed signs of despondency but had never intimated that she was considering taking her own life. The note which she left, however, practically convinces the husband that she has made away with herself. About eleven o'clock Monday night he remarked to his wife that it was about time to retire but she told him to go to bed and she would join him later. She was not feeling well, she said, and would sit up for a while. Mr. Johanson slept until four o'clock Tuesday morning when he missed his wife. He came downstairs and in looking about for her came upon the note on the table. He read it and then rushed out to notify a neighbor. The police department here was notified but as South Chaplin is out of local jurisdiction, no action could be taken and the case was turned over to other authorities.

Acknowledging the welcome in cordial words and briefly reviewing the feeling of kinship existing between the Norwich and Willimantic clubs, President Weymouth introduced the speaker, Attorney Brown gave comprehensive definitions of Fellowship, of its value for the betterment of humanity and its universal application through Rotary. The biggest victory which real fellowship claims, he said, is to eliminate the efface intolerance, the most dangerous state under which nations and individuals can exist. Mothers who have precious little lives in their keeping realize the danger to delicate stomachs of so much dosing.

That is why so many millions of mothers now depend entirely upon Vicks for croup and children's colds.

There is nothing to swallow—you just rub Vicks over throat and chest at bedtime and cover with a warm flannel, leaving the bedclothes loose about the neck so that the arising vapors may be freely inhaled. The child is usually better next morning.

IN the important matter of soap, many women mistake harshness for cleansing ability and cheapness for economy. And so, they feel it necessary to buy different soaps for different tasks.

You have probably often asked yourself: "Is it possible to find one soap that is actually best for every purpose? One soap that will cleanse, yet save my hands?"

We are sure of it, but it must be a very remarkable soap.

It must be Pure—Safe for the tenderest skin or the most delicate fabric—Rich in suds for thorough cleansing—Easy to rinse out—Economical.

Ivory's abundant suds penetrates pores and fabrics, cleansing them efficiently and rinsing out quickly, with never a suggestion of harm to the most delicate skin or the most precious garment.

And it is economical. Ivory's price alone would not be conclusive evidence—it is the amazing value which that price represents and the very real savings in clothes and hand-lotions that come from Ivory's use.

Ivory is in four forms to make it convenient for every cleansing purpose, from face and hands and finest silks and woolens, to dishes and general laundry.

So, instead of going through the constant bother of buying several different soaps for special purposes, why not have an "Ivory shelf" stocked with Ivory Flakes, and Laundry, Bath and Guest Ivory cakes? If you should run short of one, you know you can use any of the others with perfect satisfaction, for they are all the same pure Ivory.

Ivory Flakes for shampooing

For a wonderful, sudsy, quick-rinsing shampoo, nothing is finer than Ivory Flakes. Pure, rich suds that remove oil and dust thoroughly, without irritating the scalp; and then rinse out completely, leaving the scalp soothed and the hair light and fluffy.

Here is a fine, simple treatment for your complexion

Wash your face once or twice daily with warm water and Ivory Soap. Rinse in warm water and follow with a dash of cold. Dry thoroughly by patting with a soft towel. If your skin needs it, rub in a little pure cold cream. Procter & Gamble

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Physicians from various communities of Windham county will come to Danielson Thursday to attend the 132nd annual meeting of the Windham County Medical society, at the Attawaugan hotel.

A dinner is to be served shortly after the noon hour and Landlord W. S. Brown will make the occasion one certain to be very pleasing to the physicians and the guests of the house.

Following the dinner the Medical Society members will read papers and discussions on scientific subjects. A feature of the meeting will be an address on The Fight for a Medical Practice Act, by George B Chandler, Rocky Hill, representing the Connecticut chamber of commerce.

Dr. Frank W. George of Worcester will present a paper on Recent Developments in the Treatment of Fractures. Dr. S. B. Overlook of Pomfret will have a paper on Gall Bladder Disease in its Medical and Surgical Aspects. The discussion of this paper will be by Dr. Owen O'Neil of Willimantic. Spinal Anasthesia will be the subject of a paper by Dr. J. Arthur Girouard, of Willimantic.

Just after one o'clock Tuesday afternoon, an alarm of fire from box 56 at the corner of Broad and Franklin streets, called out the fire department for a blaze at the Tetreault home—this building years ago a tavern on the stage coach route that came through Danielson from Providence. Sparks from a chimney fire blew out through a pipe opening into kindling wood that was stored in the cellar. The fire was extinguished before any damage was done the building and the recall was sounded within a few minutes of the giving of the alarm.

Getting away from the possibilities of being inconvenienced by coal strikes further installations of oil heaters are being made in Danielson at present. The claim is made for some of the new types of oil heaters that they cost no more to operate than do heaters burning hard coal, something that cannot be said of some of the oil heating systems that have been in use here the past few years.

Members of the Service battery held a regular drill Tuesday evening. This battery has a splendid personnel and rates high among the organizations of the 192nd field artillery, of which it is a part. As another evidence that time flies—constantly—it is interesting to note that many of the battery members were altogether too young for military service at the time the United States entered the world war. Numbers of them were about boy scout age at the time. But today they are greymups, well trained soldiers and a bulwark of defensive strength in the nation.

The canvass by the American legion members of Danielson and vicinity to complete the allotment of Leo J. L'Homme post of the $5,000.-000 endowment fund is under way and will continue through the present week, as recently announced. The former service men have the assistance of auxiliary members in their efforts to complete the apportionment assigned to Danielson. It is hoped to raise about $1,500. A tag day at the week-end will feature the close of the drive.

Strictly fresh eggs are scarce in Danielson and surrounding towns just now. They are commanding not less than 65 cents, but the general price is 70 cents a dozen. It is of interest to note that egg collectors from Providence are paying as high as 70 cents to poultrymen direct for eggs from the coops, and they can do this when the retail price of such eggs at many places in the Rhode Island capital is $1 per dozen. The answer to high prices is of course, a scarcity of eggs. But one hears of a poultryman in a nearby community who has 400 white leghorns that are laying in abundance. His net profit on this flock for two weeks was $78 and $84 respectively. On the other hand, many owners of flocks are taking a loss on them just now, high egg prices notwithstanding.

Danielson is a cosmopolitan community. This is again indicated in reviewing the personnel of the cast that presented the musical show, Fleurette at the Orpheus theatre this week. Ten nationalities were represented in the cast. All are local young people. All are getting or have obtained their education in this or other localities in the United States. They are natives of the United States knowing only by tradition or study of the lands from which their people came. They make an interesting group and a lively and entertaining one.

A message received here Tuesday afternoon was relative to the death in Boston of Mrs. Polly Kendall, 86, widow of Horace Kendall. The family was resident in Brooklyn for many years. The body is to be brought to Danielson for fuenral services.

Such transient and vagrant persons as now make their way through this territory—and they are not so numerous as was this gentry prior to the world war—follow new lines of travel. They have abandoned the old familiar railroad right-of-way for the state highways, where there is occasionally a chance for a ride.

Assessors of Killingly are now engaged in receiving lists of taxable property within the town. For the convenience of taxpayers the assessors have arranged to receive lists at stated times and places in the different villages of the town.

Speculation continues to be three thinks and many sentences ahead of developments. Now the question is being asked "Are the trolley tracks in Main street to be taken up?" This presupposes the certainty of permanent abandonment of trolley service and it is not certainly and generally known that will come to pass.

Three large flocks of wild geese winging their way south passed to the eastward of Danielson early Tuesday morning. The passage of geese has been noted from time to time for several weeks.

Constant recurrence of narrow escapes from serious automobile crashes at the junction of Main and Cottage streets keeps alive the proposition that Center street be made a one-way street. This arrangement, it is held, would reduce in very great measure the danger of accidents at the point mentioned.

Mrs. William Chapman, whose home is on the west side, was reported Tuesday as critically ill and failing rapidly.

A fall coating of oil was being applied Tuesday by the state to Water and Dyer streets.

Another large audience saw the final performance here of Fleurette at the Orpheum theatre Tuesday evening. Staging of the production was profitable for the Minnetexit Hook and Ladder company of the fire department.

Information may be obtained at the post office relative to United States civil service examinations to fill government positions as typists and stenographers at places in New England. Applications of candidates must be filed not later than November 4.

Several hundred parishioners received communion at St. James' church during the period of the forty hours' devotion, which closed Tuesday morning.

J. Carl Witter was at Stafford Srings Tuesday attending the fair.

On the heels of the announcement that plans are being considered for the formation of a Rotary club in Danielson one hears that a Kiwanis club also may be formed here.

No member of Danielson's fire department will admit authorship of the saying "Roll up your hose, girls, the fire is over."

It develops that there was considerable damage to unpicked apple crops as the result of the gale of Saturday. Quantities of fine apples were blown from the trees.

Mr. Kazmier recently returned from a trip through Europe and Asia Minor, in which he made a careful study of conditions in Greece, Turky, Armenia, Georgia, Averbaijan and Russia. Some of the cities he visited in these countries were Athens, Corinth, Constantinople, Trevibond, Tisles, Baku, Evivan, Kaskow and Moscow. During the six weeks he spent in Soviet Russia he had the opportunity to see conditions and make comparisons with other countries. His route took him through the provinces of Russia so that he saw conditions as they exist in the interior, as well as in Moscow. While in Moscow Mr. Kazmier had the opportunity of meeting Tchicherin, the Soviet minister of foreign affairs. His interview with the Soviet leader gave him an insight into the present policies of the Soviet government.

DR. JOHN B. KENT RETIRING AFTER PRACTICING 55 YEARS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 13—Dr. John Bryden Kent, after 55 years of continuous practice as a physician in Putnam, will retire December 1. He and Mrs. Kent will move to Larchmont, N. Y., where they will make their home with their children, Dr. and Mrs. James M. Kent. Dr. Kent was born in Truro, Nova Scotia in 1845. He was graduated from Harvard Medical college in 1869 and came to Putnam to begin more than half a century of life as a general practitioner. He married September 5, 1872 Helen Abbie Manning, daughter of the late James W. Manning, one of the prominent local business men. Their son, James Manning Kent was born August 14, 1876. The younger man is a graduate of Putnam High school, Cushing academy, Brown university and the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York; during the World war he served as major in the medical corps of the army in France.

His father has been president of the County Medical society, vice president of the State Medical society, and at 80 is the oldest practicing physician in Windham county, possibly in the state.

LEGION MEN, WITH FINE SPIRIT, VOTE TO REORGANIZE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Oct. 13—Anselm Mayotte Post, American Legion, which has not been functioning for two years, effected a reorganization last night and will take an active part in the dedication exercises of the new Memorial bridge on Armistice Day.

The officers elected are: Commander, Michael L. White; vice commander, Thomas Bell; adjutant, Kenneth C. Sharpe; executive committee, the above officers and Charles A. Ryan, Harry S. Gifford and Dr. E. F. Perry.

The meeting was held at 7 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. Prior to the selection of officers, Clarence E. Scarborough of Hartford, chief financial officers of the state legion, spoke to the former service men pointing out the reason why they should be organized and maintain a Legion Post. With the splendid record that Putnam men made in the war, with nearly 400 men in the service and 12 of them giving their lives in the cause, it was difficult to understand why there was not a flourishing post here.

The committee on invitations of the Armisti day celebration had sent personal invitations to all the ex-service men to meet at 8 o'clock and decide as to what part they would take in the exercises on Armistice day. Mr. Gilman, chairman of this committee, said that the members of the committees that had the affair in charge were giving a great amount of time, in some instances sacrificing business interests in order to make the day a success, and that it was wholly for the service men. The memorial features of the bridge are a tribute to the 390 men and women of Putnam who were in the service during the World war. In everything that had been done, the service men were given full recognition. On the official committee appointed at the town meeting were Francis E. Metcalf and Whitman Danielson; Mr. Metcalf was also chairman of the program committee. John H. Bloss, the only man from Putnam who wore a decoration is to be marshal of the parade. The parade committee consisted of J. J. McGarry, John H. Moss, Dr. E. F. Perry, Arthur C. Keith and Michael L. White, all former service men but Mr. McGarry and he was captain of the Headquarters company of the 43rd division.

He hoped he said, that there would be no further misunderstanding about the intention of the committee also, that the service men, whether members of the newly re-organized post, or not would get together and take part in the exercises.

After this explanation the members of the citizens' committee left the rooms and it was unanimously decided by all the former soldiers that they would march as a body in the parade, regardless of whether they belonged to the Legion or not.

Ernest J. Durand was selected to be captain of the ex-service men's division in the parade, and Rosario will have charge of the firing squad.

Michael L. White and Kenneth C. Sharpe were named as the representatives of the Legion Post on the Citizens' committee.

The winners of the rifle match were Sargent and Greishamer, as their team is in its best form, while Gaudette and Dupont are off form, from lack of practice. Following are the scores fired on one-inch target:

Total	985
Gaudette	480
Dupont	461
Total	941

Other scores fired were: John Kaufman 494. Otto Froemel 473, William Magill 463, Ernest House 425, N. Blanchette 425. Fifty shots on the 1-4 inch ring target at 50 yards:

AMERICAN APPETITE FOR EAR CORN PUZZLING TO FRENCH

PARIS, Oct. 13.—(AP)—The American appetite for green corn, a delicacy almost unknown in France, caused the Paris Midi to comment in a paragraph that was headed with the French proverb "there is no arguing about taste and color."

The head waiter of a leading restaurant brings in with ceremony a weird dish which he lays before his American customers, observed Midi. He places before them great white cylinders which the people from across the Atlantic seize and eat with relish.

"Whatever is that they are eating?" asks a Parisian. The waiter explains that it is boiled maize. He brings a green head to the Parisian and shows him the contents.

"And you are asked for many of these?"

"Thirty or forty a day."

SCARCITY OF WHALES CAUSES STATION TO BE DISMANTLED

SEATTLE, Oct. 13. (AP)—The Bay City whale station of the American-Pacific Whaling company, one of a few remaining in the United States, is being dismantled. Lack of whales in the ocean tributary to Grays Harbor necessitated the shut-down. Only 21 whales have been brought into the station since the opening of the season last April. In previous years the catch averaged from 200 to 300 whales a season.

Radical changes in ocean currents along the north and south Pacific coast have made new feeding zones.

EXPERIMENT WITH WIND AS SOURCE FOR RURAL POWER

AMES, Ia., Oct. 13. (AP)—The possibility of using wind as a source of farm power is being experimented with by the agricultural engineering faculty at Iowa State college.

A windmill on the top of a 100-foot steel tower, with the generator attached, generated 200 kilowatt hours in 30 days. The average farm home does not use more than 35 kilowatt hours a month.

The velocity and distribution of the wind will be the determining factor, said Fred C. Fenton. Power generated by the windmill can be used for almost any activity on the farm.

SAYS AN AMERICAN INVENTED FIRST PRACTICAL TYPEWRITER

HERKIMER, N. Y., Oct. 13 (A P). —Austrian claims that the typewriter is an Austrian, not an American, invention, which were given concrete form by the recent unveiling of a memorial tablet at Innsbruck, Austria, to Peter Mitterdorfer as the inventor of the typewriter, are challenged by John W. Vrooman, president of the Herkimer County Historical society.

Mr. Vrooman declared that "the outstanding and important fact is that Christopher Latham Sholes' machine was the first practical machine made available to the world." The American Sholes' model was patented by the Remington arms factory in 1873.

Vrooman credited Mitterdorfer with being one of a long list of individuals who "had been trying to devise a practical typewriter" ever since the first patent was granted by the British Patent office in 1714.

SEEK NEW NAME AND USE OF "BLUE STAIN" LUMBER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 (A P).—The name 'blue stain" as applied to certain discolerations on lumber is a ten million dollar hoodoo, says the National Lumber Manufacturers' association, which has begun a campaign to popularize use of such lumber and find a new name for the stain which will remove the curse from it.

"Blue stain" is regarded as a blemish in lumber grading, but association officials declare they have been assured by the forest service that it does not detract from the usefulness of the lumber for many purposes.

Chemical dips have been tried in an effort to remove "blue stain" but have been found impracticable.

A committee reported that the present unpopularity of the stain was resulting in a loss of $10,000,000 annually to lumber producers, and that the best means of improving the situation lay in the discovery of a less obnoxious name that would convert the blueness into an asset.

SETTLING THE DEBTS

When Minister of Finance Caillaux on his return to France declares that politics swayed the United States in its debt plan it would be a mistake for the idea to get abroad that it was being used as one of the talking points in a political campaign or that one party was advocating it and another was not.

If his statement means that the demands of the debt funding commission reflect the sentiment of the country there can be no question but what he is right. From the time when the question of debt payments was brought under consideration there has been an unspoken feeling against the idea of cancellation of the debts contracted during and following the war. It has been repeatedly pointed out that this government is paying interest on the money that was borrowed to loan to the countries of Europe. Those payments are going to be made until the indebtedness is ended and it is the belief that those who borrowed should pay both principal and interest.

There has been no insistence that countries must pay in a lump sum or that they must return the principal and interests in amounts larger than they are able. Consideration has been given to the capacity of the respective nations to pay and it has been made clear that we are liberal in fixing the total amount and equally considerate in the matter of the rate of interest. We are in fact charging a rate of interest that is lower than we are actually paying, a rate less than half of what is being paid for loans already floated and what is being mentioned in connection with prospective ones.

There is a strong belief in this country that there is nothing more beneficial for the future peace than the settlement of these war debts. Wars are not to be financed and if such debts are not paid they lend encouragement to a continuation of such a practice. While on the other hand those who must meet them are likely to do some sound thinking before rushing headlong into bloodshed and strife when they know that financial burdens must also be borne.

THE SECRETARY OF WAR

Without surprise, but nevertheless with regret, comes the resignation of John W. Weeks, secretary of war. Secretary Weeks has been in poor health for a period of several months and unable to administer the duties as a member of the cabinet. His resignation was hinted, even before illness indicated it, but there has been no question about it since the serious sickness through which he has gone. It is only what was expected that he should not consider himself able to resume his former work.

Secretary Weeks served in the cabinet under President Harding and was renamed by President Coolidge. He was a wise counselor and one in whom the presidents placed much reliance. He has been prominent in political life for the past quarter of a century and his retirement comes after a career in which he has made a marked success of his undertakings in whatever direction they have been put forth. Even though the president recognizes the justice of the secretary's request for release it can be fully appreciated that he regrets the loss of so capable an adviser.

The choice of a successor might not have been made so quickly had the circumstances been different. The illness of Secretary Weeks made it necessary for Assistant Secretary Davis to direct the affairs of the department. It was of course done by presidential order but the manner in which the department affairs have been administered and the close sympathy manifested toward administration policies made it evident that Secretary Davis was not only a man with the proper capacity for the office but that he was the man for the vacancy created by the secretary's resignation. He is therefore appointed to this important post, an appointment that has been made following trial, and the choice is one that is bound to make a favorable impression in goverment and other circles.

It is to be expected that the president will select his own advisers but it is interesting to note that he is prepared to promote those who have demonstrated their ability and fitness. It is in keeping with a policy which the president has followed in other directions.

FORCED TO REFORM

It is much easier to point out the need of reforms than it is to bring others to the same viewpoint or to accomplish the desired end. Nevertheless until it has been tried and found wanting there is reason for placing faith in the progress made by Secretary Jardine of the agricultural department in getting the Chicago Board of Trade to change its rules and get a better grip upon the situation whereby it has been possible in the past for certain manipulators to get control of the grain markets and create hardships as the result of their handling of foodstuffs.

When the wheat market got to gallivanting in the early part of this year Secretary Jardine started an investigation. It might have been considered just a flourish inasmuch as similar attempts have been made at other times without putting an end to them. But the revelations were such as to strengthen the belief that the market had gotten into the hands of a small group of manipulators and they were using it for their own benefit. When this was brought to the attention of the Chicago Board of Trade with notice that steps must be taken to guard against such conditions in the future it was accompanied by the announcement that if the needed action was not taken there would be cause for the government stepping in and putting an end to the contract market activities of that organization.

Secretary Jardine had the evidence and he used it effectively, if we are to judge from the announcement that the rules of the grain market have been amended and the directors are given control of it during periods of wide fluctuations, being authorized to declare an emergency and to fix an arbitrary limit on price swings. This with a committee on business conduct, which can examine all dealings and records, is to be regarded as creating regulatory measures which should end a condition which has on occasion aroused much criticism. Gambling in foodstuffs should not be possible in the future on the same broad scale that manipulators have employed in the past. The government can be expected to keep a careful checkup on the reform to see that it actually works.

MOTOR VEHICLES

With unabated interest this country continues to watch the increase in the production of automobiles from year to year, and the question is frequently asked, "When are we going to reach the point of saturation?" With almost one person in every six owning a motor vehicle the question is a pertinent one, and yet new records are being established and increased production sought to meet the demands.

But the demand for motor vehicles is not confined to this country. In London's big automobile show there is evidence that the motor vehicle is quite as eagerly sought over there as it is in this country. Reports at the first night are that in the first half hour orders for cars valued between $75,000 and $100,000 were given, while such orders as 10,000 cars, 7,000 cars and 5,000 cars are given out and show the demand which exists in the British Isles for various types of cars. Perhaps one of the surprising things in connection with this interest in motor vehicles in England in that is comes at a time when there is so much unemployment, but indicating again, quite the same as in this country, that the automobile is necessary whether anything else is had or not.

The British interest in automobiles is centered about home production. This is forced to a large degree by laws which require the assembling and technically the fabrication of all goods of a patented character on British soil if intended for use in the United Kingdom. Thus the market for American product is affected but motor vehicles are nevertheless holding a strong place in the public mind on both sides of the Atlantic.

MUSCLE SHOALS AGAIN

With the practical completion of the Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals and its readiness to begin the production of electrical current to the extent of about half the limit it is ultimately expected to develop, the whole question of disposing of or utilizing the big water power project at that point is again brought to attention by the statement of Colonel H. L. Cooper, who designed the Wilson dam, that there is a desire on the part of three organizations to get the right from congress for private capital to develop the whole of the Tennessee river for the production of electricity and the manufacture of chemicals. These groups are prepared to carry out the undertaking under government supervision and to provide the necessary $150,000,000 and as the result of their construction would be in a position to supply a population of 12,000,000 in a group of six southern states with benefits not now had and a saving of 3,700,000 tons of coal a year.

Getting a decision on Muscle Shoals has been no easy task in the past. Whether there is a chance to get congress to recognize the wisdom of doing something with the expensive power plant will soon be disclosed, but it is apparent that the most is going to be gotten out of that proposition by private enterprise rather than through government operation.

This new plan of development would of course have to stand the test of congressional investigation. There is much about it which needs to be explained, but there is no doubt about the desirability of removing it from prolonged idleness.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

"What, exactly, is a marron glace?" asked he youngest and newest member. "I've been reading about them in polite society novels all my life, but I never met one in th flesh."

"It's a confection much affected on the continent the young matron with the auburn wave told her. "Not much good, but very upstage. Sweet and expensive—"

"Like matrimony?" suggested the fluffy-haired blond, innocently.

"No darling, like orchids," said the young matron, "and five-pound boxes of candy and all the things you frivolous unweds have at your dinner parties—"

"Speaking of dinner parties," interrupted the fluffy-haired blond cheerfully, "I went to one last week that was the most extraordinary affair I ever attended. I had a rather awful time. It was in a little town in Wisconsin where I was week-ending, and I had gone with a traveling bag, prepared only for a quiet little visit with an old school friend."

"Exactly," remarked the black-headed member. "I've been caught that way myself. You simply never can tell about those little towns, or about your school friends either, if it's eight or ten years since you've seen 'em. They change—grow sophisticated."

"All that and worse," the fluffy-haired blond assured her. "It was a factory town, you see, and the largest factory's wife is the front family, if you get my meaning."

The sewing circle nodded.

"My hostess therefore was the front family," explained the fluffy-haired blond, "so of course I was entertained that first night with pomp and ceremony. And I'm putting a capital P and C on those words, believe me."

"But you said extraordinary," objected the young matron with the auburn wave. "And it isn't the first time you've been entertained with pomp and ceremony, I know, because on at least one occasion I paid the bills myself."

The fluffy-haired blond laughed appreciatively. "I wasn't alluding to the duck and mushrooms," she said, "or even to the fact that the tableware was solid gold, though it was. Nor yet to the astonishing discovery that they dine at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. It was the people themselves. Of all unbelievable mixtures the guests at that party certainly took the cake. When we entertain here in the effete centers of civilization, so called, we give ourselves nervous prostration trying to arrange our guest-lists to blend smoothly. Not so in my factory town. They take them as they come apparently, in the way of nature. And I must say that once you were used to it if has our way beaten four down for thrills."

"Well?" said the young matron with the auburn wave.

"The man on my right," continued the fluffy-haired blond, having threaded her needle, "was a retired diplomat who spoke five or six languages, my hostess said, and had lived all over the world under all conceivable conditions. Absolutely the most fascinating may I ever listened to, though unfortunately my own conversation is limited to one tongue."

"Such an active one, though!" murmured the young matron, in parenthesis.

"Or two at most," finished the narrator, scorning to note the interruption. "The girl next to him was a lovely debutante, just through Vassar and dreaming of the court of St. James, and next to her was a Lexington horse breeder of the old days. He was a distinctly interesting person, too. But the woman directly across the table from me was the one who intrigued me most."

"Local product?" suggested the young matron, with interest.

"Absolutely," affirmed the fluffy-haired blond. "She was the second largest factory's wife, and she certainly did credit to our retail jewelry trade. I wouldn't have suspected that any woman could find places on her bosom for as many diamond pins as that woman had. We played bridge at the same table later with the diplomat and the debutante's brother, who was a sleepy young college athlete. It was I who tried desperately to make conversation.

"'I want to go to Italy this summer,' I said invitingly, 'but I'm such a poor sailor that it takes all my courage—'

"'That's just what I told my husband,' said the lady with the diamonds, 'if other folks can stand seasickness, why, so can we. I told him, But he says there's no reason why we should stand it. Business is good these days, he says, an' when we get good an' ready to go to Europe we go by rail!' "

The sewing circle hooted scornfully.

"Well," defended the fluffy-haired blond, calmly, "you can believe it or not, but it's true. Another lump of sugar, old dear."—Exchange.

From Small Beginnings

James Gordon Bennett, the Great Newspaper Owner

It probably does not occur to anyone who walks along Broadway, at 34th street and looks at the beautiful building formerly occupied by the New York Herald, that the building and the great wealth and energy of which it is the representative, found their source in the efforts of an immigrant boy who all but starved to death in what seemed a hopeless scramble for an existence.

James Gordon Bennett, the older, the founder of the New York Herald and one of the keenest newspapermen the world has ever known, was a graduate of the school of misfortune. He was born in Scotland and gained a good education. When he was about 25 he came to America to seek a living. He was willing to work at anything and he simply had to have money in order to stay alive. Much of the time he had insufficient food and life looked black. But he had a key that unlocks all doors; he was willing to work. He taught languages; he taught bookkeeping; he worked as a poorly paid helper in a printing office; he translated foreign dispatches; he did eye-wracking editorial work; he did all the tasks of a newspaper office and he kept on trying harder and harder to do well. When bitter necessity had trained him enough he became a Washington correspondent and wrote so well that people sat up and said: "Here's a good newspaper man!"

After an association with a number of different papers the young man, who had not only made both ends meet but, being a Scotchman, had managed to save some money, hired a dark basement in New York and got out the first number of the New York Herald. He had a theory that when people buy a newspaper, they wish to read news. "I'll give them news," he said—and he did. New York woke up and gasped—and from then on no one ever knew what The Herald would do or say next. Meanwhile, every day, people bought The Herald to find out. Bennett was a born newspaperman. He had a 'nose for news,' He knew how to find news when no one else could find it. He instituted many modern newspaper methods.

CHILD TRAINING

TEACHING THE RIGHT VALUES

Lydia Lion Roberts

"My doll is nicer than yours. She cost five dollars."

"I don't care; my carriage cost most twenty dollars."

Listen to any group of children and sooner or later you will hear remarks similar to these about toys, games and clothes—sometimes even about furniture and food. Wondering why this was so, I determined to listen to adult conversation and see if by chance the trouble originated there.

"It is a beautiful picture; it cost 5 000 dollars," was one remark I overheard.

"Her dress ought to be pretty, it cost sixty dollars," said an acquaintance.

"Isn't it a handsome necklace! The price was marked down from twenty-five dollars," commented another woman.

Everywhere I went, I heard money value attached to all manner of articles. Few persons in any group could seem to rise above this placing of the money tag on things under discussion. Yet, of course, the picture was not beautiful because of its cost but because of the artist's vision and skill; the dress and the art of designer, and the necklace was pleasing for the reason that it was a dream of lights and colors.

Is it any wonder that the children copy us and judge their possessions by the price? How much better it would be to teach them the value of line and color, to show them loveliness in the simple, everyday things, to train their eyes and minds to see the beauties all about us which are so precious yet cannot be tagged.

It is certainly unwise to bring up children to judge everything by a money standard. They should be taught that the price of an article is but one of the many distinguishing qualities. The workmanship which necessitated vision, study and achievement should be emphasized more than the money value.

"It must have taken the artist long years of study and patience to get that color," is a much finer way to bring a picture to a child's attention than to intimate that the picture is expensive to purchase.

"It took me ten years to get the photograph of that wave," said the man who was exhibiting enlargements of unusual pictures when some people praised his work and exclaimed over the wonderful effects of sky, mist and wave. And a mother who heard him speak so earnestly and lovingly about his work went home and told her children about it. She impressed them with the tireless patience and enthusiasm of the artist instead of dwelling on the price which his work commanded.

Watch your own conversation and you may be surprised to note how easily and flagrantly you have slipped into the fault of speaking of the money value of the things you see, wear or eat.

There are many values in the world bigger than the money value, and the people who live the most serene, worth while lives, are the ones who judge life and its benefits by other standards.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

LUCERNE

Lucerne, the Swiss city chosen for the conference on the Rhineland pact, is the subject of the following bulletin from the National Geographic society:

"As the chief tourist center in Switzerland, international in atmosphere, Lucerne makes an ideal conference city," the bulletin states. "In addition Lucerne's historical background has been significant, for it was on the shore of the lake it commands that the Four Forest Catons conceived the idea of the Perpetual league, the famous instrument that was not only the antecedent of the Swiss confederation, but which marks a mile-post in humanity's political freedom as well.

"The world at large, through its tourist delegates, knows Lucerne as one of the most attractive of the many attractive cities in the mountain republic. Set in the midst of a charming combination of lake and mountain scenery Lucerne has the added attraction of venerableness. Benedictine monks, in the eighth century, founded the convent around which the city eventually grew. The opening of the Saint Gotthard pass, especially the completion of the great railroad tunnel, enhanced its importance and prosperity until today it is a pleasure resort of international renown.

"Old watchtowers, an ancient city wall which the city has long since outgrown, the cathedral with its slender twin spires, and two covered wooden bridges remain of the mediaval city. They stand out rather conspicuously, for modern Lucerne is a busy, up-to-date place, with more than three score tourist hotels, fine arched bridges, handsome Cantonal offices and villas, and wide tree-lined promenades along the lake front.

"The mountain views from these promenades or quays are thought by many travelers to be unsurpassed in any Swiss resort. Cut in half by the Reuss river, just as Geneva is parted by the Rhone, the city lies in a kind of amphitheater overlooking the blue expanse of the lake, from which the snow-capped mountains climb to the sky.

"Dominating the city to the southwest is the towering bulk of Mount Pilatus, the weather vane of Lucerne. If Pilatus is crowned in the morning with a rounded cloud, known as the 'cap of Pilatus,' this is believed to be a sign of fair weather. If the clouds are long and drawn out the natives prepare for a blow. Legend places on Mt. Pilatus the final resting place of the procurator of Judea, hence its name, but others say the designation is a corruption of Pileatus, which means 'capped with clouds.'

'Nature's handicraft is nearly, if not quite matched by that of man in the most famed art object of the city, the Lion of Lucerne, considered by one critic 'the most appropriate and touching monument in existence.' Carved in living rock on a cliff face, and overshadowed by huge trees, is the figure of a dying lion, pierced by a lance, with his paw protecting the fleur-de-lys of the Bourbons.—Thorwaldsen, Danish sculptor, designed this tribute to the Swiss guards who died in seeking to protect Louis XVI against the mob of Paris revolutionists that stormed the Tuileries in 1792.

"The wooden bridges spanning the Reuss also serve as art galleries. The oldest of these, the Kapellbrucke, cuts diagonally across the river near the mouth of the lake. Its ceiling is covered with ancient historical paintings, but the chief delight of tourists are the wild ducks that struggle in the swift current below, waiting for the bread crumbs and other bits of food tossed them by passersby. The Spreuerbrucke, a little farther down stream, is decorated with the celebrated sixteenth century paintings of the Dance of Death, by Casper Maglinger.

"Lucerne is the starting point for the many scenic and historical excursions in the vicinity. Along its quays are many of the swift lake steamers that make up the growing Swiss merchant marine. A short voyage on one of these boats brings you to the place where William Tell is reputed to have exhibited his marksmanship to the discomfiture of Gessler, and to the place where tradition holds he was to revenge by seizing the rudder of the vessel on which that tyrant held him prisoner and guiding it to the rock where he aimed, not at an apple, but at the oppressor's heart.

"The mountains here drop almost sheer into the lake, while far above, like moss on a steep roof, are the little patchwork fields of the hardy Swiss mountaineers. Not far from Lucerne is a bold bit of highway construction, the Axenstrasse, which is cut from the solid rock of the mountainside, with many tunnels and picturesque galleries opening on the lake.

"Easily reached by boat and car railway from Lucerne is Rigi-Kulm, which rises in the midst of the lakes of the region and commands the most celebrated view in Switzerland. At sunrise it offers a magnificent panorama of snow-capped mountains (when the weather is clear—which is seldom) a spectacle which has been treated at length by Mark Twain and other writers who have visited the peak.

"German is the principal language spoken in the district but most of the natives, even the servants, speak French equally well. Since English has been introduced in the public schools the visitor must not be surprised to have his questions in broken French or German answered in faultless English by the chubby-faced youngsters of the city. Due to the proximity of the italian border a number of the residents, particularly the shopkeepers, speak Italian in addition to German, French and English."

Stories That Recall Others

A Bird of a Dance

Martha, age three, had been practicing some of the new dance steps with her older sisters. Next morning in the kitchen while watching the canary bird 'warm up' on the perch, she said:

"Oh, mama, come here quick and see Dickey-bird do the Charleston."

She Remembered Him

Nearly two years ago a gentleman well-known in charitable work advanced $25 to a young widow who had appealed for aid.

He had forgotten the incident when he was reminded of it the other day by a letter showing that though she had forgotten his kindness or his appearance. She addressed him as a tall young gentleman in the X—— building who was always helping poor people. The letter found him and in it was a photo of his young woman and her promise to remit the loan soon explaining that she had just opened her own millinery shop in an ethic city and just at present she needed all her money for financing the business.

Forty cases of whiskey disappeared on September 30 from the place of David Rynne, blacksmith, in Commerce street, New Haven, and yesterday John Flynn, who had been under detention for idleness was charged with burglary and held in $7,000 for a hearing.

Striped Chipmunk Talks

Thrift is always making haste
Lest some trifle go to waste.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit sat around by the Old Stone Wall until Striped Chipmunk came back. As usual his cheeks were stuffed so that Peter wondered how he could possibly get through his little doorway. He disappeared between two stones and when he reappeared of course he no longer had his pockets full. "My," said Striped Chipmunk, "I'm tired! I've been working ever since sunup. Yes, sir, I've been working ever since sunup. I hate to think how many times I have run between those nut trees on the edge of the Green Forest and this home of mine. My storehouse is getting pretty well filled. It looks to me as if I shall have to make another."

"Why don't you stop and rest a bit?" asked Peter. "And while you are doing it you might tell me something about that storehouse of yours. You know, Striped Chipmunk, I don't want to know where it really is. Of course, it wouldn't make any difference if I did because I couldn't get into it if I wanted to, and I wouldn't want to if I could, for there is nothing in it that interests me. But I would like to know what it's like. And I would like to know, too, Striped Chipmunk, why you work so hard to lay up food when you spend so much time sleeping. That doesn't seem reasonable to me. That doesn't seem like good sense. Yet I always hear you spoken of as one of the most sensible of the little people in the Green Forest."

"I'm glad I have such a good reputation," replied Striped Chipmunk. "I don't mind telling you, Peter, what my storehouse is like, because you can't get to it if you want to, in the first place I have a very crooked passageway. Of course I have a perfectly comfortable bedroom. I often keep a little food in there. But opening off of my hall are several storerooms. They are of very good size. It is in these that I keep my food supply, for the winter. You say that you don't see why I store up so much food and work so hard to do it when I know that I am going to sleep a good part of the winter. Let me tell you something, Peter Rabbit. It isn't just for winter that I lay in these supplies for. Of course I use some of them in the winter, for I wake up more often then you think and when I wake up I eat a little. But these supplies in my storehouse are quite as much spring supplies as winter supplies. For folks who live on nuts and seeds, spring is the hardest time of the whole year unless there is a supply stored away. You can see how that would be. There are not many nuts or seeds left on the ground by the time spring gets around. But I always have plenty in my storehouse and so I never have to go hungry. I've seen the time when if I hadn't had a storehouse to draw on I probably would have starved to death and when I die I don't want to starve to death. At this time of year food is plentiful and so it is always worth the work to fill my storehouses."

"I notice that you have been bringing acorns today," said Peter. "The other day when I saw you you had hickory nuts."

Striped Chipmunk nodded. "Yes," said he. "I've got a lot of fine hickory nuts and I've got a lot of fine acorns and a lot of fine beechnuts. I like variety. If it weren't so far down to Farmer Brown's cornfield I'd like some corn. However, probably Farmer Brown's boy will put some out this winter where I can find it."

"Have you any other kinds of food?" asked Peter.

"Have you any other kinds of food?" asked Peter

Striped Chipmunk nodded again. "Of course," said he, "I've got a lot of fine seeds down there. I've got a lot of buttercup seeds for one thing. I like them. And I've got a lot of other seeds. The only trouble with storing seeds is that it takes so long to store enough to make it worth while. Now you'll excuse me, Peter, I think I'll go down and start work on a new storehouse. When acorns are as plentiful as they are this year, I simply can't allow them to go to waste. We might have an extra hard winter or an extra late spring. It won't make any difference to me if we do."

Peter sighed. "It would to me," said he. "There's Happy Jack over on the edge of the Green Forest. I think I'll go over and call on him."

MEXICAN WOMEN FAVORED AS BRIDES FOR JAPANESE IN U. S.

TOKYO, Oct. 13, (AP)—The most desirable foreign women in the United States for the Japanese to marry are Mexicans, J. Arima, publisher of the Hokubei Jiji, a Japanese daily of Seattle, was quoted as saying in an interview upon his arrival in Yokohama.

"Mexican women have many of the similarities of the Japanese women and they are beautiful," Mr. Arima said. "German and Scandinavian marriages also have proved successful with the Japanese, but the women of these nationalities are not numerous.

"The Japanese in the United States have two alternatives—to remain unmarried forever, or to return to Japan. One-third of the Japanese in the United States are still unmarried. American women do not care to marry Japanese, and even if they marry Japanese happiness results in few cases, as divorce is prevalent even among the Americans themselves."

ALL WOMEN WHO WORK

Whether in the home, store, shop, mill or office, they alone know how often they are really unfit for work. It may be a headache, backache, pain in the side, nervous depression, cramps or those dreadful dragging-down pains, all of which symptoms have their origin in some feminine ailment that is making life a burden. In almost every such case these ailments will yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For a great many years this simple root and herb remedy has been restoring women to health and strength, and it will pay every suffering woman to try it.

SHORT TOWN MEETING VOTES ALL APPROPRIATIONS THAT ARE ASKED FOR

At a 35 minute session Monday evening in the town hall, the annual town meeting voted everything on the list of apprpriations, accepted the annual reports of the selectmen, town treasurer, sinking fund committee, town health officer, town school committee and trustees of the Otis library, fixed the salaries of the various town officials at the same amounts as last year and adjourned at 8.35 o'clock until the first Monday in March when the town tax will be laid.

It was one of the tamest amual town meetings on record. Spirited orations which have characterized town meetings in past years were decidedly lacking. In fact there was no speech making, there were only a few words of explanation that accompanied one or two of the resolutions submitted. In sharp contrast to previous town meetings the voting of appropriations proceeded with hardly a comment. Selectmen William S. Murray, who presided at the meeting, which had an attendance of about $250, voluntarily explained the necessity for several increases in the regular appropriations and they were voted without furthur remark. None of the appropriations were opposed.

The meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock sharp by First Selectman William S. Murray and the warning was read by Town Clerk Charles H. Holbrook. The annual report of the selectmen and their recommendations, the reports of the town treasurer, the sinking fund committee, the town health officer, the town school committee and the trustees of the Otis Library were all accepted as printed.

Appropriations for the estimated expenses of the town for the ensuing year were then voted as follows:

Alms house	$ 10,000.00
Outside poor	6,000.00
Insane	12,000.00
Neglected and dependent children	5,000.00
Widows' pension	4,500.00
Highways (city of Norwich)	23,000.00
Highways (town of Norwich)	30,000.00
Macadam repairs	3,000.00
Oiling roads	4,000.00
Bridges	5,000.00
Contingent	12,000.00
Interest	12,000.00
Tax map—reappropriation	1,254.49
National guard	5,000.00
Elections expenses	5,000.00
Registry of vital statistics	2,000.00
Town clerk's office	1,000.00
Town property tax	9,000.00
Sinking fund	20,000.00
Tuberculosis	2,000.00
Probate court	500.00
Street lighting	7,500.00
State tax	25,000.00
County tax	15,414.44
Assessors' office	7,800.00
Reappropriation for equipment—assessors' office	2,196.30
Chelsea parade	900.00
Town health office	1,000.00
Taftville fire engine company	600.00
Yantic fire engine company	650.00

With regard to the $10,000 increase in the sinking fund appropriation, which was $10,000 last year, Selectman Murray stated that since the last annual meeting there have been two bond issues and the extra $10,000 is necessary to take care of these bond issues.

The street lighting appropriation, $7,500, is an increase of $2,000 this year. Selectman Murray explained the increase by stating that there are now in the town 204 bug lights costing $25.65 each a year and 6 arc lights, costing $70 a year. There are to be installed 37 more bug lights and fourteen more new style 250 candle power lamps, which will bring the total maintenance cost up to $7,161.65. Selectman Murray called attention to the fact there was listed in the warning additional lights for the New London turnpike, and that if these were voted, they would increase the total maintenance cost somewhat.

A $1,000 appropriation listed under "town health office" is a new item this year. Selectman Murray explained this item by stating that it provides for the fees to be charged by the town health officer. In past years the fees have been taken from the general funds. This year a separate appropriation is provided to take care of the health officer's fees.

The meeting then appropriated $281,263.82 for the public school pudget this being the amount asked by the town school committee and means a school tax of about 12 3-4 mills on the present grand list.

The next matter taken up was that of the salaries of the town officials, Judge Nelson J. Ayling presented and moved the adoption of a resolution fixing the salaries as follows:

First selectman $3,000; second and third selectmen, each $200; $1,200 for clerical work in the assessors office, town clerk, $200; town treasurer, $1,000; board of assessors, each $1,800 with $1,500 additional for clerical work; secretary of the town school board, $400; compensation for town tax collector, three-quarters of one per cent of the amount collected. The resolution was voted.

The meeting then adopted a resolution presented by Oliver L. Johnson, authorizing the selectmen to borrow a sum of money not to exceed $300,000 at such times and in such amounts during the ensuing year as may be necessary to defray the debts of the town accruing before the next annual town meeting and to deliver the notes or other obligations of the town therefor as shall in their judgment be for the best interests of the town.

Henry A. Tirrell presented and moved the adoption of a resolution appropriating $4,500 to assist in maintaining the Otis library. The resolution was adopted.

A resolution appropriating a sum not to exceed $66,000 to relieve parents of children who attend the Norwich Free academy and who are residents of the town of Norwich of the customary term fee of the current school year of 1925 and 1926 was presented by John B. Stanton, who moved its adoption and the resolution was quickly adopted by the meeting.

The next matter on the call was an appropriation to reimburse parents who have children at the State Trade school in Putnam and who are residents of the town of Norwich, for the amount paid for transportation to and from said school for the school year of 1925-1926, said sum of money not to exceed $50 each for each pupil transported. Edward J. Graham, superintendent of schools in this city, submitted and moved the adoption of a resolution to this effect, setting the appropriation a sum not to exceed $300.

Mr. Graham explained that this is a new item asked for. He said there are three or four Norwich pupils who wish to attend the trade school at Putnam and the amount asked for is to pay their transportation. The resolution was adopted, without further remark.

Joseph Benac presented and moved the adoption of a resolution fixing the hours of duty of the Taftville constable from 8 p. m. to 4 a. m. daily and appropriating $1,700 for his salary. This resolution, like its predecessors, was quickly adopted.

Michael J. Curran then submitted and moved the adoption of a resolution appropriating $12,000 to lay water bound or tar bound macadam on that portion of Lafayette street situated outside the limits of the city of Norwich and within the limits of the town of Norwich.

G. Warren Davis inquired as to what distance the macadam would be laid.

About 1,500 feet answered Selectman Murray.

Mr. Davis wanted to know if the street railway company paid anything toward the expense.

Selectman Murray stated that the street railway company takes care of eight inches of the road, each side of its trolley rails.

Mr. Curran, speaking for his resolution, called attention to the present poor condition of the street and said it was one of the important belt lines in the city of Norwich at the present time. He said it borders on the ground of the W. W. Backus hospital and that the street is an eye sore. The resolution was then adopted.

The $10,000 appropriation for medical inspection and health work for children of school age in the town of Norwich was next taken up. Guy H. Dolbeare and H. H. Gallup both had resolutions to submit in favor of the appropriation. They both arrived at the desk at the same time and after comparing their resolutions and finding them the same Mr. Dolbeare submitted his to the clerk. Following the reading of the resolution it was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The meeting then proceeded to act upon a petition requesting the installation of additional lights on the New London turnpike between the light on pole number 1159 and Brennan's Corner.

W. Tyler Olcott presented a resolution that not less than two lights be installed on that section of the turnpike, and the resolution was adopted.

Selectman Murray stated that it would not be possible at this time to lay the town tax and that it is customary to adjourn the town meeting until the first Monday in March at which time the tax is laid. On motion of Guy H. Dolbeare the meeting adjourned until that date, adjournment being taken at 8.35 o'clock.

Mr. Oldham had evidently been getting a blow torch ready preparatory to doing some soldering and had adjusted the valve out too far, so that there was a flareback. The flames scorched some of the woodwork and set a curtain on fire and Mr. Oldham's hands were quite badly burned. He threw the blazing torch out of a window and by the time the firemen had arrived, neighbors had the fire out. Mr. Oldham was working in the pantry when the flareback occurred.

BEAUTY

Gleamy, Thick, Wavy Hair in a Moment

Girls! Try this! When combing and brushing your hair, just moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair. The effect is startling! You can dress your hair immediately and it will appear twice as thick and heavy, an abundance of gleamy, wavy hair, sparkling with life, incomparably soft, fresh youthful.

Besides beautifying the hair, a 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" from any drug or toilet counter will do wonders, particularly if the hair is dry, thin, brittle, faded or stranked with gray from constant curling and waving which burn the color, lustre and very life from any woman's hair.

"Danderine" acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine acon vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigurates, nourishes and strengthens them, stopping falling hair and helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

MOORE'S HOMER IN FIFTH PUTS PIRATES ON EVEN BASIS WITH SENATORS

Buccaneers, Fighting For Their Life, Turn on Ferguson and Beat Senators 3 to 2—Senators Start Off at Fast Clip But Pirates Overhaul Them—Goslin Hits His Fourth Home Run—Johnson Will Pitch Today—McKechnie Undecided About His Pitchers For Last Battle.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 13—(By the A. P.)—Pittsburgh's hopes for a world's baseball champion, which has all but faded out of the picture for 1925, came back today into full flight on the wings of a lusty home run drive by Eddie Moore.

Until today the young Pirate second sacker had been only a cog in the machine, inconspicuous for the most part, but tonight he is the hero of a victory that pulled the Pirates up on even terms with the Senators, each with three triumphs apiece, and extended the series to the seventh game limit tomorrow.

Buttressed by the brilliant, at times invincible pitching of Ray Kremer and a defense that was shock-proof in every crisis, Moore's single stroke in the fifth inning provided the winning margin of a 3 to 2 triumph that marked another advance in the sensational comeback of the National League champions and stirred a home town throng of 44,000 fans into delirious enthusiasm.

It was the second straight victory for the Pirates, now on the high tide, dashing and confident that they will go on to reach the goal that last was gained by the club in 1909. It was also the second time Washington had seen that one badly needed triumph escape from their grasp—escaping them after it seemed Walter Johnson shutout game of Sunday had adjusted the laurel wreaths for their brows.

Senators Miss by a Foot

It was only by something around the margin of a foot today, however, that the Senators lost their chance for a decisive victory for only that slim distance prevented Joe Harris from getting a home run and tying the score in the ninth inning on one of the most terrific hits of the series—a towering drive that sailed far over Max Carey's head in centerfield, landing on the fly close to the top of the far bleacher barrier. It was held to only a double and Harris was stranded at the middle bag but in any other section of Forbes field it would have been a circuit clout by a comfortable margin.

This was among the fortunes or misfortunes of war, however—Clyde Barnhart of the Pirates himself missing a homer by almost as close a margin after Moore's big blow in the fifth—and the Senators tonight are shaping their plans around the tall figure of the big Kansas farmer, Walter Johnson, for the final stand in defense of their championship.

It's Up to Johnson

Johnson, hero of two victories so far, will go back to the box tomorrow with only two days of rest and still a bit handicapped by a "Charley horse" in his right leg. Washington hopes as they were in the final analysis last year and as they have been all through this year's struggle, will be pinned on old Barney, the lion-hearted and iron-armed veteran of 19 years of campaigning, as he seeks laurels that not only would give the title to Washington once more but put Johnson himself in a niche occupied heretofore only by Christy Mathewson, Jack Coombs, Babe Adams, now in the Pittsburgh background and Stanley Coveleskie, whose failure to come through again for the Senators has been a bitter blow to Washington clans.

With Johnson to rely upon and a southpaw ace still in the hole—Dutch Ruether—Washington has a powerful hand for the final show-down, whereas the Pirates, in the flush of victory, must turn to solve a precarious pitching situation.

Meadows is Out of Series

Lee Meadows, be-spectacled veteran, whose shoulder has been bad since the first game, underwent a slight operation last night, is out of the series altogether so that Manager McKechnie must choose tomorrow between the curves of "Jughandle Johnny" Morrison thus far acting only as a relief pitcher, and Rube Oldham, a portsider untested in world's series fire.

No Pitching Worries Yesterday

Today, however, there were no pitching worries for McKechnie, after Kremer, product of the Pacific Coast league, had gotten the first few kinks out of his arm. The cool young right-hander was found for a home run by Goslin in the first inning—the Goose's third circuit blow of this series and his sixth in the two years—while Peckinpaugh's double on the hit and run play scored Bluege in the second, but after that the Senators did no damage.

Six hits altogether were the most that Washington could collect and in the last seven innings they were held to three, two of these figuring in threats that came in the eighth and ninth innings to give the game a few closing thrills.

Harris Rushes in Reserves

Bucky Harris rushed in a platoon of reinforcements in the eighth in a desperate attempt to turn the tide after Hank Severeid, playing his first game behind the bat in Ruel's place, had opened the inning with a single. Harris went so far as to pull himself out of the game, in favor of a pinch hitter, Bob Veach, with McNeely on third and two out, but Bob's best was a feeble tap to Moore and the spurt was checked.

The Senators had their heavy artillery at the plate in the ninth but Goslin, after slashing a half dozen or so fouls into various parts of the stands, skied out and the height of the centerfield barrier was a bit too much for Joe Harris' mighty clout. Still the tying run was on second but Kremer, steady and effective, forced Joe Judge to pop out to Wright, while Pie Traynor easily handled Bluege's splash for the final out that sent an echo of wild and frenzied cheering over the surrounding vales.

Ferguson Pitches Well

Alex Ferguson, who pitched the Senators to victory in the third game last Saturday, twirled almost as effectively as his Pirate rival for the seven innings he stayed on the mound before yielding to a pinch hitter but his defeat was due almost as much to his own loss of control ad a lapse in the defensive work of Peckinpaugh as it was to the influence of Kremer's better pitching and Eddie Moore's homer.

Pirates Tie the Count

The breaks in the Washington bulwarks that later loomed so all-important came in the third inning when the Pirates scored a brace of runs that tied the count.

Ferguson had narrowly escaped trouble in the previous two innings, when Pirate base runners got as far as second and third, but he dug one pit too many for himself in the third frame by passing the ubiquitous Eddie Moore.

Max Carey followed with a bounding rap toward second which Peck grabbed, only to fail to reach second base in time to force Moore. Bluege snuffed out Cuyler and Barnhart in succession on a brace of pretty stops and throws but in the course of the plays the baserunners worked their way around and Moore sprinted over the plate with the first run. Carey followed him a moment later when Pie Traynor slashed his second straight hit to center, the only safe blow of the inning.

This was the end of the Pirate attack, except for Moore's home run, although they had men on bases several time against Ferguson and were checked in the eighth against Win Ballou, relief hurler, by an unassisted double play by Joe Judge.

Moore is the Hero

Right down to the finish, however, it was Moore who stood out on the defense and at bat, while Kremer held the pitching peak with rare skill. Moore got to base every time he came to bat—once in the seventh on Peck's sixth error of the series—and scored two runs besides roaming his infield post in capable fashion. Eddie was rampant in all his glory for the first time in the series and he made the most of his opportunities to lift the Pirate ensign back to the high places. The score:

TODAYS RECEIPTS WILL BREAK SERIES RECORDS

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 3—Lacking only $1,320 of a million-dollar total the receipts for the 1925 world series not only will make it the third event of its kind to attain the seven-figure mark, but also will break all records, with another day's "gate" to be collected.

Last year the Senator's-Giants series attracted $1,095,104 to baseball's coffers and that of 1923, the all-New York engagement between the Giants and Yankees, drew $1,063,815.

The attendance, however, will fall far below the mark set in 1923, when 301,430 saw the games six contests this year have entertained 239,874, and no more than 45,000 an be accommodated at Forbes field tomorrow.

THEY'LL HAVE TO BEAT JOHNSON SAYS, MGR HARRIS

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 12—(By the Associated Press)—They'll have to beat Johnson.

The worlds came from baseball's youngest manager, Bucky Harris of Washington, in the clubhouse after Pittsburgh had tied the world's series today.

His smile, the victory smile, was still there. Around his teammates were gloomy, bemoaning their ill luck, but Bucky's glance carried across the dressing quarters to a locker where stood a tall, silent man, deliberately donning his street clothes "yes, they'll have to beat Johnson, and then we'll admit they are the better club."

"Will he be able to pitch? able or not, he'll be in there throwing and they'll have to beat him. Believe me, there will be twenty other lads lined up on behind Old Barney when they try to get past him. That's about all I can say. They'll have to beat Johnson.

"His arm is right, his right leg is safe from serious injury. He's only had two days' rest but I'm telling you now that the Pirates will know they have been in a fight. They'll have to beat him if they want to win.

"I used severeid behind the bat today because Hank has done a lot of receiving for Ferguson. It couldn't be a matter of hitting strength, for Muddy sure has hit 'em in this series. But tomorrow is another day—and they'll have to beat Johnson."

Determination had supplanted confidence on the faces of the other Senators. Only two days ago their path was strewn with roses, but the Pirates have hurled in boulders. Joe Judge, Joe Harris, "Goose" Goslin, a trio which has piled up eight home runs during the six games, are all set ready for the return home. Words were not required to substantiate their manager's statement that Old Barney would have good men and true behind him in what may prove his last world's series effort.

Joy Reigns on Pirate Craft

Meanwhile joy reigned in the Pirate cabin and the waters wirled, real water splashed about by a band of marauders who knew no bounds in the heat of victory. Backs were smacked until they reddened, arms were nearly torn from shoulders in mighty handshakes. They pushed each other under the cold waters of the showers, they wrestled, they sparred, and Bill Mc Kechnie, the manager who had borne a worried look for several days, became one of them and lantered.

Above the din came the voice of Mc Kechnie, shouting to the world that the Senators were on the run. "We got them" he managed to sandwich between burst of laughter. "Bring on anybody. We're hitting now and they can't stop us."

McKehnie Confident

"Why, yes, if it matters, I might say that I will pitcher either Red Oldham or Johnny Morrison tomorrow. We have plenty of pitchers. I said last night that we'd take 'em and I repeat it. They can't beat such a squad of hitters. Yes, the world's series is ours."

Used a Mashie

Over in the corner, head streaming water from the cool showers stood the newly crowned king of Forbes field, little Eddie Moore, who had become rampant after a long rest. He it was who pounded a ball over the left field barrier for the run that won the game.

"I caught a fast one and used a mashie," he said.

THREE HOME RUN RECORDS SET YESTERDAY

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 13—(By the Associated Press)—Three new home run records for world's series were set today and another one was tied when Goose Goslin and Eddie Moore poled out circuit smashes. These blows brought the total of home runs for this year's series to eleven, which broke the record made by the Giants and Yankees in 1923 when ten were garnered, Goslin's four bagger today also brought the Senator's total of home runs to seven, beating their own record of six for one series which they hung up yesterday. The Goose also ran his string of four-ply smashes to six in two years, which broke his own record for circuit drives. The Senators leftfielder, by making his third in this series, also duplicated the mark made by Ruth, who drove out three home runs in 1923, equally by himself last year and also by Joe Harris, who has already made three in this series.

Joe Harris missed a home run today by two feet when his two base blow nearly carried the barrier in deepest centerfield. The Goose honked around the clubhouse after the game today that would smack one more tomorrow.

WORLD'S SERIES BRIEFS

(By the A. P.)

Roger Peckinpaugh is wondering tonight who put the "bee" on him in this series, the rajah has already made six errors but takes some consolation that the only Hans Wagner cuffed the ball around six times in the 1903 series while Joey Sewell made equally as many errors in the world's series of 1920. Peck has another day to go and he has his fingers crossed. Adjudged the most valuable player to his club during the 1925 season and awarded the American league trophy, Peck feels his errors keenly.

Ray Kremer pitched a brilliant game today but could not forget that he struck out 3 times on nine pitched balls on his only appearances at the plate.

Sam Rice will never forget the razzing he received from the Pirate fans who were clearly of the opinion that Samuel did not make the famous catch off Smith that saved the third game in Washington for the Senators.

Kremer showed speed in the second, he made three simultaneous motions, he closed his eyes, ducked, struck out his gloved hand and speared Rice's line drive. The Pirate heaver was as much astonished as Rice and the crowd.

Peck and Bluege put over the hit and run play in all its perfection today in the second inning. Bluege got a flying start from first and Peck pulled the ball into right field. As Peck is a dead left fielder hitter the Pirates defense had swung over and Cuyler had a long run to get up to the ball which he relayed to the plate too late to nip the flying Bluege with Peck anchored at second.

Stan Harris ran so many substitutes into the game in the eighth inning that the umpires held a confab at the plate to see where all these subs should appear in the batting order. All and sundry remembered that Marberry for the Senators batted out of turn in Washington when no one except the newspaper men noticed it.

Some folks left in the eighth inning when it was seen that the game was won to get in line for the sale of tickets to the deciding game tomorrow. Some of the citizenry more financially than sportively inclined sold their places in the queue for hard gold.

Earl Smith is training to become a microphone artist. He has chattered continuously to the senators as they come up to the plate through all the six games. Goslin is his pet target but the Goose reciprocates a baleful glance at the Pirate muskman and gives his thought to hitting.

CUBS BEAT WHITE SOX WINNING BASEBALL TITLE OF THE WINDY CITY

CHICAGO, Oct. 13 (AP)—The National league Cubs won the city championship in the presence of their new boss, Joe McCarthy, defeating the White Sox 7 to 4. The contest was the last for George Gibson as manager, but it marked the first city championship in three years for the Bruins. The first game of the set went 19 innings to a 2-all deadlock. The Sox took but one of the six games played.

The Cubs collected ten hits off three White Sox pitchers, Faber, Connally and Blankenship. Faber was knocked off the slab in the sixth inning. Wilbur Cooper worked the route for the Cubs yielding only seven hits.

The Cubs started the scoring, getting a single run in the third inning. The Cubs had a big inning in the sixth. Heathcote started with a double and Freigau hit a bunt in front of the plate. Faber fielded the ball and then overthrew third and Heathcote scored and Freigau made second. Jahn sacrificed to Sheely, and then Brooks singled scoring Freigau. Faber was replaced by Connally. Grimm's single brought Brooks home for the final run of the rally.

The Sox scored three runs in the last of the seventh. Kamm walked to start the inning, and after Schalk had flied out Kane singled over second Grabowski batted for Connally and struck out, but Mostil tripled to right scoring Kamm, and Kane. Mostil came home when Freigau let the return throw from the outfield go through him.

Blankenship took the mound for the Sox in the eighth inning and the Cubs immediately hopped on him for three runs. Brooks singled and was forced by Grimm. Pittenger singled and Gonzales singled, scoring Grimm. Pettenger went to third and Gonzales to second on the throw and then Cooper singled, scoring Pittenger and Gonzales.

The Sox picked up a run in their half of the eighth. Sheely was hit by a pitched ball, and Falk forced him at second. Kamm singled through Freigau and then Schalk singled to the same place, scoring Falk.

Two accidents halted the game in the fourth inning. Jahn in ducking a close pitch by Faber, threw up his bat to protect his head. The ball hit the bat, driving the wood into John's forehead and the blow knocked Jahn out. He was revived, and continued to play. On the next play Brooks collided with Sheely on a close play at first base and suffered a bruised leg. The score:

GOV. TRUMBULL GETS TIP TO BET ON PIRATES

HARTFORD, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Governor Trumbull has received an "inside tip" that the Pittsburgh Pirates will run away with the world series bunting tomorrow at Forbes field. A letter was received today from Prophet Jim McNulty, of Lake district, Minnesota, in which the governor is advised "not to put too much money on Washington for the series." The prophet says that his prediction that the Pirates will win was made after Washington had won the first game. The Minnesota sage also deals in forecasts of weather conditions, results of prize fights and life interest matters.

ACADEMY TEAM SHOWS MARKED IMPROVEMENT

Coach Whitney is continuing to drive his men to the utmost in preparation for the Academy's game with Westerly High at Westerly, Friday. Yesterday's work consisted almost entirely of scrimmages. The men are continuing to show speed and accuracy in handling the ball and are considerably better than they were before the Academy's last game. In the scrimmage this afternoon the varsity completely outclassed the scrubs, making gains through both line and around end consistently. In Tuesday's practice there were a few whose work was outstanding, among whom were, the diminutive quarterback, Norm. Courbois who many times squirmed through the line and dashed around end for long gains. Capt. Williams showed brilliant defensive work while Radio Ed Brewer did some fine line-bucking. For the scrubs Pheno Tombari, Murphy and LaCroix did some exceptionally good work.

The varsity were able to gain consistently on the scrubs and did so. Coach Whitney stated after practice yesterday afternoon that the team as a whole has made wonderful progress in the past two weeks although there are still a few weak spots and, as yet, no position are clinched. The team, itself is showing more pep and spirit than has been seen at the Academy in some time. Starting with green material Whitney has developed an outfit that looks better than the average Academy football team, and which with a little fight and spirit should give all their opponents a hard battle for honors.

DEMPSEY SURPRISED AT WILLS SIGNING FOR BOUT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP)—Announcement late today from New York that Harry Wills had signed to meet Floyd Johnson in a no-decision bout October 26, came as a surprise to Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, who has agreed to meet Wills next September for the title.

Dempsey said that the articles of agreement between himself, Wills and Floyd Fitzsimmons, promoter of next September's meeting, contained a clause that neither fighter was to meet any person in the ring prior to that time without the consent of the other principal in the 1926 bout and the approval of promoter Fitzsimmons.

Today's press dispatch was the only news he had had, Dempsey said, of Wills' intention to fight Johnson, and he had not been asked for his approval or consent to the meeting.

TERMS REACHED FOR BOUT BETWEEN WALKER AND GREB

NEW YORK, Oct. 13 (AP)—Terms for a return match with Harry Greb, world's middleweight champion, were reached with Promoter Tex Rickard today by the management of Mickey Walker, title-holder of the welterweight division, according to an announcement by Teddy Hayes, who is associated with Jack Kearns in handling Walker's affairs.

Plans call for the men to meet in the new Madison Square Garden on December 8 or 9, Hayes said, the match to be 15 rounds to a decision. Greb, who won the first on a verdict of the judges, has not signed for the fight, Hayes admitted.

Thanks to Sergt. Matt.

Those who called the Bulletin office Tuesday afternoon may have recognized the voice of Sergt. Mathew Delaney giving them the returns of the game. Sergt. Matt is a strong supporter of the Senators and has followed every game of the series with keen interest. He has been at the Bulletin office every afternoon and has paid his way by answering the numerous phone calls during the game in a courteous and efficient manner. Matt went in as pinch hitter for the announcer in the first inning of yesterday's game and scored a hit. Matt will be on the job today. We thank you, Mtat.

Just a word to the fans. Please do not expect a detailed report of the game over the phone. We will gladly give the score at any time but as for telling how the runs were made in the various innings, it is practically impossible with the hundreds of calls coming in daily.

BIENNIAL CONVENTION OF UNITARIAN CHURCHES

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 13—A department of public welfare, which will keep in touch with latest developments in social progress, uniting in research work the social welfare departments of other church bodies, was advocated at the biennial convention of Unitarian churches of the United States and Canada here today.

In his address of welcome at the opening session, Rev. Dilworth Lupton, Cleveland, declared that such a department "will keep us authoritatively informed upon not the radical but the scientific advances in social thought."

Rev. Howard N. Brown, minister emeritus of King's Chapel, Boston, recited the history of the general conference of Unitarian churches, organized in 1865, which will be absorbed by the American Unitarian association at this convention.

"No one can understand the Unitarian movement," Mr. Brown said, "without taking note of its dread of denominationalism and its fixed determination to preserve for itself at all hazards a free and open mind. There must be no Unitarian orthodoxy. The rest of the world has been continually reviling the movement because of its structural weakness and organic weakness. Many have assumed this weakness due to the inadequacy of its religious idea.

"That however, is altogether a false diagnosis. The truth is that Unitarians have not wanted the sectarian machinery which others have prized."

"The future of Christian liberalism," was discussed by Rev. John Haynes Holmes, New York; Rev. Frederick H. Griffin, Philadelphia, and Professor W. T. Waugh, McGill University, Montreal, at mass meetings tonight.

SEEKING DEPORTATION OF A MEXICAN ACTRESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—A case has been presented to immigration officials, seeking deportation of Gloria Faure, Mexican actress, on the charge that she illegally accompanied Alberto J. Pani, Mexican finance secretary from El Paso to New York but it has met, for the present at least, with the statement that the immigration law specifically exempts foreign government officials.

The complaint, filed with Immigration Commissioner Curran, in New York, is understood to have been prepared by a Mexican professor at a New York university. It was followed by an emphatic declaration from the Mexican embassy that political opponents of the Calles administration are behind it.

Labor department officials declined today to discuss the action they would take, further than to point to the statutes which they believed would cover the case. The paragraph specifically referred to provides that "nothing in this act shall be construed to apply to accredited officials of foreign governments, nor to their suites, families or guests."

It was made clear at the department that the merits of the case had not been examined here and that the department was unadvised as to the basis for the complaint.

Minister Pani is now in New York on a financial mission for his government.

BRATTLEBORO POSTOFFICE ENTERED BY BURGLARS

BRATTLEBORO, Vermont, Oct. 13 (AP)—Burglars entered the Brattleboro postoffice this morning and wrecked the mechanism of the vault in the postmaster's office where a large quantity of postage stamps were stored. The front door and inner doors of the vault were opened by the use of an acetylene flame and the front door of the inner safe was wrecked by nitroglycerine, but according to Postmaster S. A. Daniels, it will not be known perhaps until tomorrow whether the break yielded any booty as the wrecked door will not be removed until the arrival of postal officials.

George W. Clapp, who lives near the postoffice, was operating his radio outfit about 3 o'clock and heard an explosion. He turned out the lights in the house and telephoned the police but when the officers arrived the burglars had fled, leaving behind a torch, glove, soap and other articles. It is thought sentries gave warning when Mr. Clapp turned off the lights. Entrance to the building was gained by forcing a rear window.

Burglars obtained about $5,000 worth of stamps Sept. 9 last year when they blew a safe in another part of the office. At that time they made an unsuccessful attempt to open the vault in the postmaster's room.

TO BRING SUIT AGAINST HER EJECTION FROM HOME

GREENWICH, Oct. 13—(AP)—Mrs. John J. Fry, who last year threatened a constable with a revolver when he attempted to remove her furniture and belongings from her home after she had been ordered by the court to leave the premises, was ejected this afternoon by Deputy Sheriff Hen

WESTERLY

Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell of Westerly was successful in taking into custody Monday, Walter Hazard, 24 and Robert Hazard 23, both colored wanted on complaint of assault on James Tarbox of Bellville, R. I., a jitney driver. In the assault which occurred about midnight on August 22nd last Tarbox was beaten up by two assailants, two of his ribs were broken and he was pounded and bruised to such an extent that he was laid up for a week and under the care of a Wickford physician.

The search for Hazard was followed up and officers were so close on his trail, after Sheriff Mitchell had made several trips into Connecticut, that it was thought that he had come back into Rhode Island and had gone into hiding somewhere near Slocum. Monday Sheriff Mitchell, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Thomas Pierce of North Kingston, went to Exeter, where the officers found Walter Hazard in a back cornfield husking, near the Slocumville station. He was nabbed by the sheriff and deputy. Handcuffed to Deputy Pierce, Hazard was taken to Tawgoo and in a North Kingstown house, standing close to a door in a room piled with wood, was found Robert Hazard.

Both Hazards were taken to Wickford and given a hearing before John P. B. Pierce. They were charged with assault upon James Tarbox, were found probably guilty and bound over to Oct. 22nd in bonds of $500 each, which Walter secured. Mr. Ferguson of Slocum becoming surety. Against Robert were placed the additional charges of driving an automobile without an operator's license, without proper name plates and without having the same registered with the Rhode Island State Board of Public Roads. To these added complaints, bonds of $200 on each count were required and in default of the total $11,000, he was taken from Wickford to Kingston and lodged in the Washington county jail. It is understood that more charges are anticipated against Robert, a possible one being breaking and entering, with larceny from a gas tank, at the store of John H. Bowen in Apponaug, concerning which no complaint has been received.

Louis Watson, 25, who signed his name "Squire" to a bill of sale as alleged, for a stolen Ford touring car sold to Emory Edyards, it being the same car reported stolen from George H. Boss of Providence, in Exeter when Watson traded it in for a Ford coupe on Sept. 28, has been taken into custody by Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell of Westerly and is in Kingston jail. Watson was located when at work for the Holley Ice company. He at first claimed that an Italian named Bamboasta stole the automobile. On the car were also stolen number plates, and Sheriff Mitchell returned to Mr. Boss and Mrs. Edwards their respective automobiles.

At a house visited by Watson in South Kingston Sheriff Mitchell recovered a cheese knife and holster, an Iver-Johnson hammerless gun, a belt and a flash light. For their presence there Watson will be called upon to explain, in larceny charges to be brought against him.

STING OF A BEE BLAMED FOR CAR COLLISION DAMAGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 13—The second jury case to be tried before Associate Justice Antonio A. Copotosto in the second week of the Westerly Trial Calendar hearing in the September term of Superior court for Washington county was begun Tuesday morning at 10.15 o'clock. Monday, Columbus day and a holiday, no court session was held.

The jury case, trial of which was begun Tuesday was an automobile damage one, when there were tried as one case the four actions at law, Walter B. Mather, Elizabeth A. Mather, Albert E. Barber and Barbara Jane Clarke, pro ami, as complainants vs. Michael Donovan of New York. The plaintiffs were all represented by Judge James O. Watts of South Kingston, while Attorney Henry M. Boss appeared for the defendant.

Previous to the impanelling of the jury Justice Copotosto stated that in the equity case to determine ownership of a schoolhouse, Louis H. Knowles vs. Town of Narragansett heard by him a week ago and held by him for further consideration with the submission of previous court decision in similar cases, he would announce his findings. There were two issues of fact involved was the complainant the lawful owner of the farm involved, to which his answer was "yes" and secondly, has the land been abandoned, to which his answer was "yes."

At 3:15 p. m. the jury retired, returning twice to the court room for instruction. After being out two hours and three quarters, the jury returned when Foreman Cushman informed the court that the jury was hopelessly deadlocked and could not agree on a verdict. They were discharged from further consideration of the damage cases.

A case submitted by Deputy State Director of Education Charles Carroll of Providence, to the town of East Greenwich, known as the Gimmons case and so referred to, does not meet the facts of the case under consideration. The case under consideration and heard as a case to court involved the ownership of what was known as the "Lower Point Judith schoolhouse" and which following a vote of a financial town meeting of th town of Narragansett, was offered for sale and so advertised by the Narragansett school committee, when the present proceedings were instituted by Lewis H. Knowles, the present owner of the farm off which his parents set the school house lot for school purposes, to return to the heirs of the farm when the use for school purposes terminated. Mr. Knowles getting the title by inheritance. In the Gimmons case, continued the judge, there had never been an abandonment, but an indefinite postponements of school activities when the start was made to open the school.

In the case of the Lower Point Judith school house the basic facts entering were different, for the school was a special object of consideration, not only of the special financial town meeting of the Town of Narragansett, but also of the Narragansett school committee, which had on record a vote to close the school for an indefinite period, which had been done and also a further vote on record to abandon the school house and offered the school house for sale following the vote of the financial town meeting.

"I find for the complainant in the bill of equity, the Town of Narragansett had abandoned the schoolhouse," said Judge Copotosto, as he directed Clerk Caswell to notify Mr. Moulton.

The automobile damage cases against Michael Donovan of New York were then taken up and the jury was empaneled as follows: Elmer L. Tucker, mill operative, North Kingston; William C. Tourgee, store manager, Westerly; Patrick H. Kelley, blacksmith, Charlestown; Newman F. Tuckerman, garage keeper, Westerly; Walter H. Green, weaver, Westerly; Joseph H. Brown, Exeter; Ira H. Dickens, mill operative, North Kingstown; Fred K. Crandall, farmer, South Kingston; George W. Jordan, painter, Hopkinton; Alexander W. Lewis, farmer, Hopkinton; Charles H. Cushman, superintendent, Westerly and George W. Holgate, state road, Hopkinton. Charles H. Cushman of Westerly was named as foreman. The jury was satisfactory to both parties and trial proceeded.

In outlining the case to the jury, Mr. Watts, said that this suit was brought arising after two automobile accidents on July 3rd on the Boston Post road, between Matunuck and Wakefield, and that Michael Donovan, of New York, was the operator of one of the automobiles. Attorney Watts stated that it would be shown that the occupants of a Ford touring car owned and driven by Walter E. Mather toward Westerly between Matunoo and Wakefield were Mrs. Elizabeth A. Mather and a small girl, Barbara Jane Clarke, while directly behind the touring car was a Jewett car owned and driven by Albert E. Barber, on a trip together. The defendant, Michael Donovan, riding in a car owned by him and driven by a friend, came down the road in the opposite direction, cut across the road and hit the Ford touring car turning it over on its side, kept on and struck the automobile of Mr. Barber which was following. The accident was due to the negligence of defendant, as a result of which Mrs. Mather suffered numerous bruises and had her left forearm fractured above the wrist and as a consequence suffered much pain. Barbara Jane Clarke suffered injuries to her back. By reason of the accident which damaged the automobiles, both Mr. Mather and Mr. Barber were deprived of their use. Mr. Barber used his car in his business and had to hire one. He also suffered a nervous shock and a shaking up.

After the first witness, Mrs. Elizabeth Mather, was called, the spare jurors were excused to report this (Wednesday) morning at 10.45 o'clock.

Following the noon recess at which time all the evidence was in, that of the defense being put in on depositions as the witnesses were out of the stat, Attorney Boss stated that he accident was caused by a bee which flew into the auto occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Donovan and child and driven by Louis B. Keen. When brushed away by Mr. Donovan it stung the driver, causing him to lift the hands from the steering wheel and the collision followed.

At the recent meeting of St. Michael's council, Knights of Columbus when the officers were installed by District Deputy Sullivan and staff of New London, a feature of the meeting was an interesting talk by Supreme Agent John F. Daly, who made his annual visitation to the Pawcatuck council. The officers installed were: Fred Morely, grand knight; William Sylvia, deputy grand knight; Edwin Connors chancellor; William Comoill, recorder; Daniel Cogun, financial secretary; Thomas Purtill, treasurer; Timothy Connors, advocate; Francis O'Connell, warden; Lawrence Casey, inside guard; Joseph Lazzaro, outside guard; Rev. J. F. Quinn, chaplain; John J. Donahue, trustee for three years; James L. Jordan, trustee for two years; Joseph Herbst, trustee for one year.

A record crowd which filled the Westerly playgrounds on Columbus day night witnessed the elaborate fireworks display which included a set piece representing Columbus and which culminated in a grand bombardment which included about every variety of device and color known to the art of pyrotechnics.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON TUESDAY DURING STAFFORD SPRINGS FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Oct. 12—Nothing was lacking today at the Stafford Fair grounds to make the second day a splendid success. Smiling skies brought out the crowd in the morning and fully ten thousand people moved through the midway streets and crowded the grandstand in the afternoon for the races and the vaudeville attractions.

Particularly interesting was the race card scheduled this afternoon, featuring the 2:11 trot, purse of $1,000, and the 2.14 pace and 2.20 trot, with purse of $500 each which had six and nine starters respectively. Eight fine specimens of trotting beauties took the word for the 2.11 trot a hard field to get into action but a pretty finish in each heat, the first going to J. B. X. the second to Jack DeSaules and the third to Chestnut Dillon. In the other races less guesswork was required to pick the possible heat-winners.

One unfortunate incident marred the perfect day of pleasure for the throngs of the grounds. During the morning, at the track, while the horses were being exercised, an unidentified man was struck by one of the horses, the sulky passing over his body. He sustained a fractured skull, and died a few minutes later. He was about 70 years old, well dressed. The body was taken to a local undertaking rooms, but up to a late hour this afternoon no one had appeared to claim the body and nothing could be learned of the man's relatives or friends. He apparently was alone at the fair. In crossing the track near the barns, at the lower end of the grandstand, he stepped into the path of the racing horse. He had no letters or papers of any sort in his clothing which would give any clue to his identity.

Crowds again today filled the Main Exhibition hall, which was attractive with displays of fruit and garden produce, and held much of interest for the housewife and homemakers in the exhibits of needlecraft and fancy articles. The display of materials and cloth manufactured at the local factories draws the sight-seers continually and is a most interesting exhibit. Prizes are being awarded today in the various departments which have exhibits in this section of the grounds.

In the big tent at the second gate the judges are tackling a decidedly hard proposition in awarding prizes for the fancy and game birds exhibited in the poultry show. Leon B. Fowler, of East Haven, has a center aisle exhibit of fancy birds which is remarkable, and has taken several first and second prizes so far.

Topping today's program for the farmers was the cattle exhibit—a parade of the prize winners was one of the best "acts" on the program this afternoon when the blooded stock, owned principally by farmers and cattle dealers of this town and Tolland county, paraded down the race track in front of the judges' stand to snappy music by Basile's band of New York city, and the proud flaunting of blue and red ribbons.

An excellent program of vaudeville acts was run off yesterday and today—but a suggestion voiced by many might well be heeded by the committee in charge of this department—that the events be run off a little faster, instead of crowding some of the best numbers of the program into the late afternoon hours when people are beginning to think of home rather than the thrills of the diving girls, trapeze stunts and the wonderful antics of the trained seals. The program is well worth waiting for—but would lose nothing in being put on earlier.

Tomorrow the awards of prizes in the various departments will be made, and a fast racing card will be the stellar attraction again, with plenty of assurance that the track will be in fine condition for the three events scheduled.

Following is today's racing summary:

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF SOUTH CANTERBURY MAN

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, Oct. 13.—William Willoghby, 43, belonging to one of the most highly respected families in South Canterbury, was found dead this afternoon in the home of a neighbor, John H. Cone, a short distance from his own home.

Willoghby, it is understood, must have entered the Cone home in the absence of the family and was found upon their return. There were bruises upon the right side of his head, indicating where he had struck a stove in falling, but Dr. W. W. Adams, who conducted an autopsy, said he did not believe death had been caused by a fractured skull. The medical examiner added that he had learned Mr. Willoghby had been drinking home brew and he had removed the stomach so that its contents might be analyzed as a means of determining the positive cause of death.

Mr. Willoghby is survived by his wife and one child.

DOUGHBOY THE BACKBONE OF NATIONAL DEFENSE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(A. P.)—High ranking officers were sent by the army general staff to the president's air board today with the message that in its opinion the American Doughboy is still the backbone of the national defense.

Opposing views advanced by Colonel William Mitchell and others these officers testified that those charged with the drafting of defense plans do not believe that any "mechanical device" can, in time of emergency, replace the "dogged determination" of the American infantryman.

Major General Charles P. Summerall, senior officer of the army, asserted that because man lives on the land "we must have land power and the army is the infantry and every other ram must be co-ordinated to get the infantry through."

He was supported in this view by Brig.-Gen. Hugh A. Drum, who was sent by the general staff to testify in rebuttal to the criticisms that Col. Mitchell and others have made concerning the present defense organization.

General Drum read a prepared statement, covering fifty-one typewritten pages, in which he asserted that "airpower alone cannot win a war as aircraft, by their very nature, cannot hold a position once taken."

General Patrick, who appeared before the board for the second time, denied charges made yesterday by Chairman Martin B. Madden of the house appropriations committee that the army had "squandered millions of dollars" in a "reckless" expenditure of money in aviation experimental work. He asserted much of this work was necessary to determine what should not be done.

ARMY AIRPLANE CAUGHT FIRE WHILE MANEUVERING

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—(A. P.)—One of a score of army fighting planes that came here today from the Mitchel Field, N. Y., air races to maneuver over the Lincoln Memorial caught fire in the air, raced blazing to earth and turned turtle at Bolling Field, without injuring its lone occupant, Lieutnant E. W. Meredith of Selfridge Field, Mich.

After the demonstration over the memorial, the aircraft left for Langley Field, Va., for further maneuvers, they also will participate in a flying programme at Aberdeen, Md., Saturday, the purpose being to effect great co-ordination in action among the pursuit, attack and bombardment planes.

Lieutenant Meredith, who was only recently discharged from a hospital due to being bit by a propeller two years ago at Toledo, Ohio, rescued a hawk, the squadron mascot, from his plane, which was virtually destroyed by the fire. Its loss was declared to be a blow to the service as it is one of only 14 of the pursuit types the army possessed.

STOLEN REGISTERED MAIL HAS BEEN RECOVERED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—(AP) — Nearly all of the half million dollar load of registered mail taken by bandits in a mail truck holdup here Thursday night was back in the post office today, less than a week after the robbery, and behind bars were five alleged members of the bandit gang.

Police detectives found yesterday what they believed was the headquarters of the gang in a garage between here and San Pedro harbor. Under the floor they found part of the plunder and in a nearby field they dug up a metal box containing most of the remainder. Altogether they recovered $3,000 in cash, $140,000 in negotiable bonds, $300,000 in American Bankers' association checks, and about forty platinum watches. Only about $9,000 worth of loot is missing.

Including one man arrested here and another on an eastbound train yesterday, the quintet of suspects is said to include the leaders of the gang.

ITALIAN GOV'T TO PREVENT ANTI-MASONIC DISORDERS

ROME, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—The government is taking firm measures to prevent a repetition of the recent bloody anti-Masonic disorders at Florence.

The prefect and police chief of Florence have been put on the retired list and Dr. Italo Baldo, former commander-in-chief of the national militia, has been sent there with full powers. Dr. Balbo is quoted as declaring:

"Every action of individuals or groups against the persons or property of adversaries, every unauthorized reprisal and every arbitrary offense not only is repugnant but tends deeply to damage the interests of the Fascist party."

Signor Farinacci, secretary of the Fascist party, has renewed his orders for strict discipline, declaring that "the home even of an adversary must be sacred and inviolable."

He charges that communists joined with the Fascists in sacking houses with the Fascists in ransacking houses and caused disorders with the object of discrediting the Fascisti. Several such agitators were arrested in Florence and Rome, he says.

There is more profit in smoking herring than cigarettes.

WOULD LIMIT INTERSTATE SHIPMENT OF FIREARMS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—(A. P.)—President Coolidge has been urged to recommend a law to limit sales and interstate shipment of firearms, as a means of curbing crime, but he is doubtful whether such a statute would have the desired effect.

His offhand opinion is that it might work to the disadvantage of law-abiding citizens needing firearms for protection without preventing the lawless element from getting them. He will seek the advice of police officials for more exact information.

CREW OF SCHOONER RESCUED BY STEAMER

HALIFAX, N. S. Oct. 13—(A. P.)—The steamer Capsaw today reported that she had rescued the crew of the schooner Emily of Parrsboro, N. S., which was abandoned in a sinking condition off the Nova Scotian coast at 43.43 north, 61.45 west.

When last seen the schooner was making southeast with foresail set, and the Capsaw reported her a menace to navigation.

POETRY

The Dancing Faun

Thou dancer of two thousand years,
Thou dancer of today,
What silent music fills thine ears,
What Bacchic lay,
That thou shouldst dance the centuries
Down their forgotten way?

Waht mystic strain of pagan mirth,
Has charmed eternally
Those lithe, strong limbs, that spurn the earth?
What melody,
Unheard of men, had Father Pan

Ah! where is now the wanton throng
That round thee used to meet?
On dead lips died the drinking-song,
But wild and sweet,
What silent music urged thee on,
To its unuttered beat.

That when at last Time's weary will
Brought thee again to sight
Thou cam'st forth dancing, dancing still,
Into the light,
Unwearied from the murk and dusk
Of centuries of night!

Alas for thee! Alas again,
The early faith is gone!
The Gods are no more seen of men,
All, all are gone—
The shaggy forests no more shield
The Satyr and the Faun.

An Attic slopes the bee still hums,
On many an Elain hill
The wild-grape swells, but never comes
The distant trill
Of reedy flutes, for Pan is dead,
Broken his pipes and still.

And yet within thy listening ears
The pagan measures ring,—
Those limbs that have outdanced the year
Yet tireless spring:
How canst thou dream Pan dead when still Thou seem'st to hear him sing?
—Robert Cameron Rogers.

If I But Knew

If I but knew what the treetops say,
Whispering secrets night and day,
I'd make a song, my love, for you,
If I but knew, if I but knew.

If I but knew how the lilies brew
Nectar rare from a drop of dew,
A crystal glass I'd fill for you,
If I but knew, if I but knew.

Love, if I knew but one tender word
Sweet as the note of a wooing bird,
I'd tell my ardent love to you,
If I but knew—if I but knew.
—Amy E. Leigh.

NEW LONDON HEARS THAT DR. GASSON IS TO LEAVE WETHERSFIELD TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 14. — Dr. Charles A. Gasson, who was convicted of malpractice and was committed to the Connecticut state prison more than two years ago, will get his ticket of leave tomorrow, it was learned here today. He petitioned the board of parole to consider his case and that body heard any reasons for the paroling of the convict that might be offered with the result that it was decided to parole Dr. Gasson. He was ordered to report to Thomas F. Morton, who was the magistrate before whom he was tried when he was bound over to the superior court. Dr. Gasson had a considerable practice at the time of his conviction.

In the police court this morning Edward Colt Albertson, a stranger in New London in connection with some business affairs, was fined $5 for an assault upon a clerk in a hotel where he sought and obtained accommodations Monday night. Albertson was under the influence of liquor and after some words he struck the clerk a blow in the face that broke a set of false teeth. The damage from that blow was something more than $80. This Albertson agreed to pay, and the man who was abused was not desircus of having farther punishment imposed.

Two auto law violators—speeders— were penalized in the court this morning. They are Stanley Blogoslowski, a New Britain undertaker, and Frank Ferri, a plumber's apprentice. The former came here to attend a wedding. After the ceremohy he took a party of guests to Norwich. Returning he hit a speed of 60 miles an hour as he tore down the hill at North Main street. State Policeman Wartmarsn was loitering along the road though the hour of midnight had come, and followed the speeding autoist overtaking him after a chase. He ordered Stanley to court and there later he was fined $25. He settled. Ferri said he was out for a ride with a girl. She wanted to "go faster," so hit up the speed till he was making 45 miles an hour when he was met by State Policeman Bernard Kennerson. That settled it for Ferri. He was ordered to court and the officer appeared to tell of the speed and the recklessness of the operator. Judge Prince imposed a fine of $10.

Joseph H. Hubbard, colored, was an attendant last Sunday night at a party held at a house on Douglass street. Frank Wilson, also colored, was also a guest. Hubby and Frank got into an argument, and as a result of words Hubby hit his disputant a blow in the head that brought a great patch from a doctor who sewed up the wound. Frank was uncertain about his facts when the case was presented in court today, so the impression was created that he was intent upon shielding the fellow who struck him. The matter was laid before Judge Prince and a fine of $50 was imposed upon the aggressor. Josh was quite sure his wife would produce the necessary funds to secure his liberty after conviction. But in that he was mistaken so his address will be at the county jail far awhile. He can hit the carpets there for exercise so that he will not get out of practice.

Sergeant John Cananaugh, who was assigned to the complaint learned that while Ruiski and his wife were in a rear room of the store the fellow entered the store unobserved. Finally when Ruiski's attention was attracted to the young man, the former went to the store, where he sold the entrant 10 cents worth of candy. After the fellow left Ruiski discovered that a bag, which had contained the money and check and which had been behind the counter a short time before, was missing. The fellow who carried a basket on his arm, was not located.

This afternoon a resident of Broad street notified the police that a Ford touring car had been parked at the corner of Broad street and Parker street several days, the car having been left there last Saturday night or Sunday morning. When the machine was parked where it remained until this afternoon, five or six young men alighted from it and to a bystander stated that they were students. When possession of the car was not taken today the police were informed of the facts. The machine, which bears New York registration, was removed to a local garage and placed in storage until such time as the owner is located. Whether the car was stolen and then abandoned, it is not known, but that fact will be determined for the authorities have communicated with the motor vehicle department at Albany requesting the identity of the owner of the machine.

S. F. PETERSON'S HOME ENTERED IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 13.—The New London police have a new type of crook to contend with for it has developed that a daylight thief is operating in the city. Today for the second time within 24 hours it was revealed that the daylight crook was carrying on his system of plunder, but up to the present time, no clues have been obtained by the authorities that would lead to the arrest of the man, nor the recovery of the plunder.

This afternoon Struvos F. Peterson, a State street merchant, residing at 60 Nathan Hale street, complained to the police stating that some one had gained admission to his home during his absence and requested that an officer be sent there at once. Patrolman Frank Philopena went to the Peterson house and found that entrance to the place had been gained through the cellar-way and that the thief had gone to the upper part of the house, which had been examined thoroughly in the search for plunder. The only loot, so far as Mr. Peterson could determine as having been taken was a dress suit, although the two upper stories showed convincingly that the thief had made a careful search of the place. Mr. Peterson left his home, he being unmarried, went to his place of business, and did not return until about 4 o'clock when he discovered the burglary.

Yesterday afternoon the residence of Stephen Sheehan, 67 Faire Harbour place, was entered by the same method and a considerable quantity of plunder taken.

The police were given considerable work about a year ago when several residences were entered during the daytime, in nearly a year no such thieving has taken place.

Palace

Romance, brightened with humor, charmingly served up by a stellar cast of favorites, and set midst magnificent surroundings, is what filmgoers may expect to see when they visit the Palace next week, where a new Paramount production, "In the Name of Love," will be the chief film piece de resistance.

The story is a brilliant adaption by Sada Cowan of Bulwer-Lytton's sparkling love-classic, "The Lady of Lyons," and was produced under the direction of Howard Higgin. Ricardo Cortez, Greta Nissen, Wallace Berry and Raymond Hatton are the quartet of featured players.

The early development of the plot finds Cortez returning to his native France after many years of residence in America. Not love of country but love of a girl, his pretty boyhood sweetheart, has drawn the thoroughly Americanized Frenchman back to the provincial town where he was born.

Disillusionment follows when he discovers that the passing years have changed Greta from a lovable, unaffected personality to a wealthy and snobbish beauty, whose social ambitions are centered on marrying a title. Tempted at first to leave, he finally decides to stay and win her love back.

Needless to say he does that very thing, and it is the means he uses to accomplish his object—by masquerading as the Prince of Como—that provide most of the thrills and laughs in the picture.

The advantage of quaint backgrounds, lavish settings and the dazzle and splendor of gorgeous gowns and royal trappings help to make "In the Name of Love" one of the most colorful and entertaining photoplays of the season.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

There is nothing better than B. F. Keith vaudeville, the world over, which is the kind of attractions you see at the Broadway theatre.

The last of this week will see five new acts of this popular vaudeville.

Included in this program is LaFollette as the feature. He is called the man of many faces and appears in a pretentious offering of novel surprises in five scenes and with three people.

In order to correct an impression given by the horde of jazz pictures recently released, the management of the Broadway theatre have announced that The Reckless Sex, coming to their screen tomorrow, is not a "flaming" picture, but a diverting and charming comedy of present day life in conservative Boston and on the Mexican border.

The title has to do with the escapade of a reckless actress who masquerades as a little girl in order to get a meal at half price. The masquerade ends disastrously for the grown-up "child," who is rescued from a very embarrassing predicament by the hero, a young man of generous impulses. Seeing a "little girl" apparently stranded in the New Mexican desert, he insists on taking her home with him to be cared for.

Among others appearing in this entertainment for the entire family are such film celebrities as Madge Bellamy as the little girl, Johnnie Walker as her amateur guardian, and Gertrude Astor, William Collier, Jr., Alec B. Francis, Wyndham Standing, Claire McDowell, Walter Long, Gladys Brockwell and David Torrence.

Palace

Mary Brian's gone and done it!

Got married, that is. But the wedding was not of the "till death do us part" variety, as the bridegroom in the case, Neil Hamilton, already has a charming wife.

But a first wedding, even if solemnized for screen purposes only, is an exciting and thrilling event to be prepared for with all due ceremony.

As the search for wedding finery progressed in New York's best shops, Miss Brian found herself the central figure in many humorous and awkward misunderstandings on the part of unduly sympathetic sales people who are perhaps too eager to help in the selection of an outfit for the young bride-to-be. One envious spinster of uncertain age was overheard in the remark: "Something ought to be done about these child marriages. It's an outrage to permit such a youngster to marry!"

The big event is a feature of Herbert Brenon's latest production for Paramount, "The Street of Forgotten Men," at the Palace. Miss Brian is featured with Percy Marmont and Neil Hamilton in the principal roles of the story, a screen version of the Liberty magazine romance-drama by George Kibbe Turner.

Coming to the Breed.

A picture five million persons have been anxiously waiting to see is scheduled to be presented at the Breed theatre next Sunday. It is the screen version of "Chickie," Elinore Meherin's sensational newspaper serial novel which was published by newspapers throughout the county, and which, it is estimated, has been read by five million newspaper readers.

An all-star cast, headed by Dorothy Mackaill in the title role, contains names that are well known wherever pictures are shown. In this cast are John Bowers, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, Gladys Brockwell, Olive Tell, Paul Nicholson, Lora Sonderson and Louise Mackintosh.

MRS. BUDLONG WINS POINT IN HER LONG LEGAL BATTLE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 13—(A. P.)—Mrs. Jessie Margaret Budlong won a point in her long legal battle with her husband, Milton J. Budlong, wealthy Newport resident and vice president of the North Central Texas Oil company, when Judge Hugh B. Baker in the superior court here today denied Mr. Budlong's prayer for a preliminary injunction which would prevent Mrs. Budlong from trespassing on Mr. Budlong's Newport estate, The Reef, and from interfering with, molesting or otherwise annoying him.

The suit established a precedent in that Mr. Budlong sought what would amount to a legal separation through injunction proceedings, but Judge Baker held that Mr. Budlong has the choice of going into the divorce court, "or of abiding by the annoyances of which he complains."

The Budlongs' marital difficulties date back to Nov. 1, 1923, when Mr. Budlong "posted" his wife in a Newport newspaper. The case attracted much attention some time ago when Mrs. Budlong claimed she was being held prisoner in her husband's New York apartment. For several days she went without food, communicating with the outside world by writing notes which she tossed from the eleventh floor in her husband's shirts.

NOMINATIONS BY HOUSE OF BISHOPS OF P. E. CHURCH

NEW ORLEANS, La., Oct. 13 (AP)—Eight bishops were placed in nominations by the house of bishops this afternoon for presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States of America. From the eight will be elected tomorrow a bishop to act as presiding bishop and president of the council.

The house of deputies today accepted a report of the committe on canons recommending that the resolution presented it from the diocese of southern Ohio regarding divorce and remarriage not be accepted.

The resolution while approving the states power to grant divorce, would have the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese the final authority for remarriage after divorce, and would have left the ecclesiastical authority of the diocese free to consider all the evidence in the given case, not the technical only, but the social and ethical factors as well.

The house of bishops by unanimous vote declined to accept the house of deputies' amendment fixing the salary of the presiding bishop, to be elected tomorrow at $18,000.

The bishops insisted on their original figure of $15,000 an ppointed a conference committee in an effort to reach an agreement.

The house of deputies sustained the adverse report of he committe canons on the resolution that would have church to pay at least ten cents a week toward defraying the expenses of the general work of the church.

The house of deputies confirmed the election of the Rev. Charles L. Pardee of New York, elected by the house of bishops registrar of the present convention.

PROFIT-TAKING MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 13—Enormous profit taking sales, based on stiffening money rates and the belief in some quarters that the rapidity of the recent advance had weakened the technical position of the market, impeded but failed to halt the general upward movement of prices in today's stock market. Total sales again ran over two million shares.

Operators for the rise found encouragement in the unexpectedly large increase in the September unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation which were announced after the close on Saturday; the optimistic reports from the Locarno conference; publication of additional favorable industrial earnings reports, and hardening steel, zinc and copper prices.

Upwards of two score issues broke through to new high levels for the year. The most spectacular gain was a jump of 100 points in Kresge, which touched a record top at 800 and then slipped back to 776, as against a low of 355 earlier in the year. One sale of Kresge and company took place at 440, also a new high and a jump of fifty points over the previous sale. New peak prices also were attained by Associated Dry Goods, Kinney company, McGrory Stores B and The Fair, the net gains ranging from 1 3-4 to 7 3-4 points.

Steels showed a temporary burst of strength at the opening, but failed to maintain their gains. United States Steel common opened nearly a point higher at 124 1-2, sold up to 124 3-4 and then dropped back to 123 at the close. Sloss Sheffield touched a new top at 111 1-2 and then slid back to 109 1-4, up two on the day, while Bethlehem, Crucible and Gulf States each showed net gains of about a point.

Motor and accessory stocks were given another whirl upward under the leadership of General Motors common and Studebaker, which touched new 1925 maximum prices at 120 3-4 and 62 3-4, respectively. Other issues in the group to reach new territory were Dodge Brothers "A", Fisher Body, Timken Roller Bearing, Stromberg Carburetor, Hayes Wheel and Stewart Warner Speedometer.

Oils showed a temporary burst of strength in the late trading under the leadership of Marland, which crossed 49 to a new high level for the year. Spirited buying of local gas shares was another late feature, Brooklyn Union Gas showing an extreme gain of over 3 points at 95 3-4, the highest price since the recapitalization of the company in 1923.

Except for a drop of over 3 points in United Cigar Stores, which recently advanced, 13 points in two days, the tobacco shares continued to give a good demonstration of group strength despite fears in some quarters that the death of James B. Duke would bring about heavy liquidation of those issues. Tobacco Products common and Reynolds B moved into new high ground.

Barnet Leather broke over nine points to 57 and Brown Shoe, Chrysler Motor, Du Pont, Emerson Brantingham preferred, Kelsey Wheel, R. S. Schulte, United Drug and West Penn Company showed net recessions of a point or more.

Call money renewed at 4 1-2 per cent, and then advanced to 5 and 5 1-2 in anticipation of the heavy withdrawal of government funds on Oct. 15. Time money rates also showed a stiffening tendency, sixty to ninety day loans being quoted on a flat 4 3-4 per cent. basis, instead of 4 1-2 to 4 3-4 and the longer dates commanding 4 3-4 to 5 per cent. Prime commercial paper was unchanged with 4 1-4 per cent. the ruling rate.

With the exception of 30 point advances in Norwegian and Danish krone which ruled around 20.30 and 24.47 cents respectively, the principal European exchanges were reactionary. Demand sterling ruled 1-8 cent lower around 4.83 3-4 and French francs broke over seven points to around 4.53 1-4 cents in reflection of rumors that American bankers had abandoned negotiations for a government loan. Italian lire dropped 6 1-2 points to around 3.94 cents, but the other recessions were largely nominal.

Will Attend Poster Advertising Convention

An important assemblage of artists, lithographers, advertising men, manufacturers and distribution experts will mark the 35th annual convention of the Poster Advertising association to be held at Kansas City in the near future. According to H. H. Vignot, of The New London-Norwich Poster Adv company of this city, who will attend the convention as a delegate, plans are under way for the progressive development and improvement of organized outdoor advertising, which will be acted upon at the convention. One of the features of the exhibit which is being planned in connection with the convention is a huge exhibit showing poster advertising done by newspapers all over the country, together with facts concerning co-operative campaigns conducted by newspapers and poster companies for civic and welfare development. It is expected that some plan will be fashioned which will enable these two important factors in community education to co-operate more closely and effectively for civic advancement.

NORWICH PRUDENTIAL DISTRICT IS FLAG WINNER FOR BEST BUSINESS

Winner of the flag for the best production of business in the summer months, the Norwich district of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., of which E. O. Rodier of this city is district superintendent, celebrated the 50th anniversary of the company Tuesday with a banquet at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the Wauregan hotel. The entire staff of the district from the offices in this city, New London, Putnam, Willimantic and Westerly were guests of Superintendent Rodier and covers were laid for 50, the guests including Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London and Dr. W. T. Driscoll, medical examiner.

All over the United States and Canada similar anniversary observances were held by Prudential agencies.

The banquet opened with the singing of America and grace was said by Rev. Mr. Danforth. Music by the Palace theatre orchestra made a pleasant feature and Arthur J. Perlow officiated efficiently as song leader, while two fine tenor solos were rendered by Lyle Fillmore and were enthusiastically applauded.

E. O. RODIER
Superintendent of Norwich District

The following menu was served:

Oyster Cocktail
Celery Olives
Roulette of Boston Blue, Anchovie Sauce
One half Roast Milk Fed Chicken
Julienee Potatoes
June Peas
Hearts of Lettuce
Thousand Island Dressing
Ice Cream
Cake Coffee

Superintendent Dodier opened the speaking programme, expressing his pleasure at welcoming the field staff every one of whom was present except a Putnam agent who was kept at home by the illness of his wife. Mr. Rodier spoke of the great growth of the business from its humble start 50 years ago until it now has a field force of 20,000 in the United States and Canada. He thanked the members of his staff for their loyalty and cooperation in the 16 years in which he had been superintendent and declared that this has been an exceedingly pleasant period. The home office, he said, extends its hearty congratulations to the Norwich district for its success in winning the flag which the superintendents had purchased at the first of July to be awarded to the district showing the greatest business production in the summer months.

Calling Agent L. I. Allen of New London to the front, Mr. Rodier announced that Agent Allen had won the merit button for the first period of the year for producing more than $50,000 in ordinary new business and as Mr. Rodier attached the button to Mr. Allen's coat his fellow agents gave him prolonged applause.

President's Anniversary Message

Mr. Rodier closed by reading the following anniversary message from President Edward D. Duffield:

October 13th, 1925

To My Associates in the Field:

Today we celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of our company.

We recall with cherished feelings of respect and reverence The Prudential's modest beginning and the early trials and struggles of its founder and the dauntless group of men he gathered round him, and rejoice in the knowledge that what was once so small and doubtful has grown to be not only one of the leading financial institutions of our time, but a vast social organization by means of which most of life's economic uncertainties are provided for.

Established in 1875, in Newark, the company began operations by spreading its message of thrift and protection among the wage-earners of that city, then, as now, one of the leading manufacturing centers of the country, and commenced the difficult and slow task of securing and developing a staff of field representatives, that in the intervening years has grown to approximately 20,000. Now, as then, it has been unexcelled for loyalty and efficiency.

We are proud of our splendid organization, proud of the exceptionally large number of men with long years of service, some of them ranging back to the early days of the company, and prouder still of the high ideals, devotion to duty and the desire to serve which have been characteristic of the Prudential staff from the beginning.

It is fitting, therefore, that the members of our field force, wherever located, should on this day join with the officers of the company in celebrating The Prudential's golden anniversary and paying tribute to what, in the words of our founder, is "a business with a noble history, a business with a lofty aim, a business with a magnificent purpose, a business with splendid results."

With sincerest good wishes and kindness personal regards, Believe me to be, Your friend and coworker,

Edward D. Duffield,
President.

Address By Rev. Danforth.

Rev. Mr. Danforth was introduced by Superintendent Rodier to speak upon the history of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. The New London pastor made a response that held the closest attention of his hearers as he congratulated them on the 50 years of success which the company had experienced. He reminded the field workers of today that they were entering into the harvest that had been made ready for them by the fifty years of hard work before them during which the good gospel of insurance had been spread in the world. Insurance, he said, is a basis for contentment, a foundation for a life more free from anxiety, which is sand in the bearings of our life machinery that destoys the peace of life. So the insurance agent has much to do with freeing men from anxiety and making their lives easier and more peaceful.

The speaker referred in a witty way to some of his own pleasant experiences in realizing the benefits of life insurance and went into speak of John F. Dryden, the founder of the Prudential, a Maine man, as embodying one of the characteristics of New England people in that they are not afraid to work. This same spirit is displayed in the Prudential's agents today, he said. He referred interestingly to the Rock of Gibraltar, which is the symbol of the Prudential, and told the agents that they are parts of the garrison of a Gibraltar by which human life is made the stronger. You send a man to work with a new courage, he said. You give them a definite incentive and teach the value of doing at the right time one of the things that will be a cornerstone of success.

Rev. Mr. Danforth closed with a wish for the success of the company and its agents for the next half century and for all the half centuries that are to come after, and he was given enthusiastic applause and a rising vote of thanks for his admirable and entertaining address.

Superintendent Rodier brought the pleasant gathering to a close with the announcement that a condensed history of the company was in preparation by the home office and would later be ready for distribution. Mr. Rodier also expressed the wish of all present that the wife of the Putnam agent might speedily recover from her illness.

TWO AGED PHILLIPS SISTERS GIVEN BACK DUXBURY HOME

PUTNAM, Oct. 13.—People of Putnam and vicinity are interested to know that the aged Phillips sisters, who live in one room in a little house in Woodstock Valley, have regained their home in Duxbury, Mass., by order of the superior court.

Judge Hugo Dubuque of the Plymouth, Mass., superior court ordered the home which the sisters conveyed to Mrs. Mary Hicks, formerly of Woodstock, now of Newton Center, on promise that she would provide for them, reconveyed to the sisters, because Mrs. Hicks had failed to carry out her agreement. The sisters are about eighty years and one of them, Miss Helen, is blind.

Morton Collingwood was the special master appointed by the court to hear the facts in the case. According to the report of Attorney William N. Cronin, of Boston and Duxbury, on file in the Plymouth court the story follows: Up to 1920 they lived in a small house on their shore estate at Duxbury in summer and rented the larger house. With this rent and the sale of Indian baskets and other souvenirs during the season, the sisters made an income sufficient to keep them in modest comfort. They occupied the larger house in winter. The winter of 1920 and 1921 found much illness in the Phillips home. There was a mortgage of $6,400 on the property. Illness so ate up the meagre income that the interest became long overdue on the mortgage. The bank commenced to press for it. The sisters could not meet it. They wrote to Mrs. Hicks for financial aid.

It was suggested by this letter, written by Miss Imogene Phillips and produced in evidence before Master Colingwood, that if Ms. Hicks would furnish the money for the mortgage and then furnish the two sisters with a home in Woodstock, Conn., and with food, they would deed the Duxbury property to Mrs. Hicks. A deed was secured by Mrs. Hicks and the Misses Phillips went to Woodstock to live.

The master's report at this juncture reads as follows: "The house was provided by Mrs. Hicks—I find the house was not a suitable dwelling for two elderly ladies of the types of the Misses Phillips to occupy as a home. I also find that while in this house they were not furnished at all times with sufficient food. They were assisted by town authorities. Later they moved to a house in Woodstock Valley, Conn. I find that this was not a suitable abode. While in Woodstock Valley the defendant (Mrs. Hicks) supplied one quart of milk a day and wood for fuel. There were times when the sisters were aided by local authorities. Mrs. Hicks established a credit for them at a local grocery at $3 a week."

The events leading up to the court action began when a Putnam woman, distantly related to the Misses Phillips, appealed to Attorney Archibald Macdonald, Jr., who tried to interest the Massachusetts authorities in the case. The selectmen of Woodstock became interested and finally two selectmen of Duxbury were prevailed to come for the old ladies and take them back to Duxbury where they became inmates of the almshouse. They are of Pilgrim stock, had lived at ease during their early life and at one time their home at Duxbury beach was the center of many brilliant social gatherings.

HOME CHAPTER MEMBERS NAME STATE DELEGATES

The leader, Mrs. William E. Manning, presided at the October meeting of the Home chapter of the Kings Daughters, Monday afternoon at the Johnson home.

After singing, scripture reading, and prayer, reports were submitted and approved. Then followed a short business session when it was decided to hold the next meeting for work of Home chapter sewing circle, with Mrs. David M. Dean, of Town street, Tuesday, October 20th. A discussion arose as to the question of refreshments following the meeting each month, it being decided to adopt the old schedule and again serve either sandwiches and coffee or cake and coffee. For the past year at the close of the meeting each month tea and fancy wafers have been served. This was carried out at the meeting Monday under direction of Mrs. Charles Marsh, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The meeting in November will take the form of a Thanksgiving meeting at which members of the chapter will contribute money or something suitable for the Johnson home, or some other worthy cause. At this meeting the delegates were appointed to the 29th anual convention of the King's Daughters and Sons for two days this week in Norwalk. The delegates, Mrs. Thomas Keene, Mrs. William H. Whitman, Mrs. Woodbury O. Rogers, Miss Maria Briggs, and the leader, Mrs. William E. Manning left by automobile Tuesday morning at nine o'clock for the two day's session.

After the collection was taken the meeting closed with the mizpah benediction.

In past years it was the custom of Home chapter members to sew on work for some worthy cause during the monthly meeting at Johnson home. Since the sewing circle was originated some little time ago the members have met several times for work at some member's house, when much more work has been accomplished. These meetings involve the greater part of a day and are usually attended by from twelve to twenty members. Besides work it also affords a social opportunity with basket luncheon for those attending. At the September gathering of the sewing circle at the home of Mrs. Charles R. Cross Maple street, a number of garments also a boy's suit were made. This was on Tuesday, September 22nd.

ALBERTUS MAGNUS COLLEGE OPENS SCHOOL YEAR TUESDAY

At New Haven, Columbus day dedicatory exercises were completed at Albertus Magnus college on Prospect Hill, with the civil program, in which representatives of the state, city and other colleges took part.

Saturday the religious ceremonies were held, when the school, founded this summer by the Dominican Sisters, received the blessing of the church, given by Rt. Rev. Bishop John J. Nilan of the diocese of Connecticut.

Monday Governor Trumbull and his staff, United States Senator Hiram Bingham and Mayor David E. Fitzgerald were officials present and with President James R. Angell of Yale university welcomed the new women's Catholic college into the academic cricle. Miss Alice Holden represented Smith college, Rev. Dr. J. J. Kennedy and Rev. Dr. D. Gregory Fitzgerald the University of Washington.

Albertus Magnus college opened its first school year Tuesday with about sixty students, including graduates of young women's Catholic academies from all parts of the United States.

At the reception Monday, the presiding officer was William Bro-Smith, chairman of the advisory board of Albertus Magnus college and the speakers were His Excellency John H. Trumbull, governor of Connecticut; Hon. Hiram Bingham, United States senator from Connecticut; Hon. David E. Fitz Gerald, mayor of New Haven; Very Reverend Raymond Meagher, O. P., provincial of the Dominican Order. Greetings from other colleges were brought by Dr. James R. Angell, president of Yale university; Miss Olive Holden of Smith college; Mrs. James Burns of St. Mary's college, Columbus, Ohio.

Among those in attendance were Mrs. Joseph P. Connor and son Joseph of Norwich. Mrs. Connor's daughter, Miss Natalie Connor is a member of the entering class at the college. Others invited to attend were Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Farrell.

The college opening exercises began Saturday, when more than 500 church dignitaries and guests gathered in the little chapel of the college for the first mass held in the building and to hear Bishop Nilan of Hartford deliver the dedication address which marked the official opening of the new institution.

Surpliced choir boys, students in cap and gown, priests, sisters of the Dominican order and other nuns, followed by Bishop Nilan and his attendant priests formed a colorful procession as they moved through the grounds of the college to the chapel in the rear of the main buildings where the ceremonies were held.

A special choir, led by Frank L. Farrell, organist from St. Mary's church, Hillhouse avenue, chanted the service conducted by Professor D. J. Kennedy, S. T. M., of the Catholic university of Washington and Father G. Fitzgerald of the Dominican order.

When the mass was completed Bishop Nilan delivered the address of dedication.

"We have blessed this house and like all ceremonies of the church, our blessings tell the purpose for which this house is to be used. We have blessed the chapel that will be the heart of its intellectual life. There the teachers will come to renew the spirit of self sacrifice which makes them covetous of success only for the betterment of their students," he said.

Bishop Nilan spoke of the importance of religion in education and in the life of a college or university.

The bishop then turned his attention to the spiritual side of the college. "These children will be encouraged to be religious, they will have an idea of God that is true. Religion will come into their lives but it will take little time from their practical studies.

"Ozone forms a very small part of the atmosphere but it is what destroys the germs in the air we breathe. So with religion. It need occupy but a very small part of our time but it prevents vicious tendencies.

"These children will not be taught to guess about how the human frame was perfected. They will be told about God and will be taught how to apply their intellects toward understanding Him.

ART ASSOCIATION WILL HOLD DODGE MEMORIAL

Mrs. E. W. Higgins the newly elected president, opened the business session, calling upon Miss Ufford for the secretary's report. Following this, Mrs. Sudlow read the financial statement, showing $575 in the treasury.

Three new applicants for membership were nominated and the balloting resulted in the unanimous acceptance of Mrs. George A. Ashley and Miss Muriel Moxley for associate membership and of Mrs. James Smith for sustaining member. The advisory council recommended Miss Alice W. Cogswell as assistant to Miss Ozias Dodge in the care of association property. Mrs. Dodge told of the acquisition of a large closet room near the tower where it will be possible to keep such things in order. She reminded the members that Slater museum was the second museum built in this country exclusively for museum purposes and mentioned an early letter from the Metropolitan museum in New York, in which the writer said to Mrs. Kent, then curator, that New York would look to Slater museum for advice. A newspaper headline of those days was entitled "Connecticut Sounds a New Note in Art."

Mrs. Dodge alluded to the many unique and valuable objects in the collection and felt that the association should awake to the possibilities before it in enlarging the educational and cultural opportunities for the community.

Mrs. R. W. Perkins announced the next meeting to be a Dodge memorial with exhibit of his work.

Miss Faith Leavens had the address of the evening, speaking upon, "Early Italian Sculpture," and showing many illustrations from slides and photographs.

In part she said:

The art of sculpture may be said to have three great periods—the Greek, the thirteenth century French and the Italian—each with its own marked characteristics. Though the early church may have had a feeling against sculpture, lest it seem to lean toward idolatry, there was no objection to painting and the walls of the catacombs bear witness to the absence of gloom in their attitude toward life. The men of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries show the influence of the east and Helenistic Greece but more and more they broke away to the freedom of expression of the west. Monasticism and the crusader had their influence on thought and religious expression.

In early Romanesque and Gothic architecture the sculptural figures were part of the structure, but in Italy the sculpture was developed in finer material and formed a decorative addition. Italian Gothic is quite different from the northern. The Italian artist was no mystic and could not vision the finer delicate conceptions found in France and England. The outstanding names of the early Italian period are Nicola Pisano and Girranni Andres is remembered for his work on the Campanile and the bronze doors of the Baptistry at Pisa. Giovanni executed the tomb of Pope Benedict at Perugia and the pulpit in the cathedral of Pisa. His work in the Campo Santo is considered the noblest exeample of Italian Gothic. Florence became about this time the center of artistic activity and Giotto with his universal genius, its great master,

B'NAI B'RITH BEGINS ITS SEASON'S MEETINGS

Rose of New England Lodge No. 398, Independent Order of B'Nai B'rith and the Rose of New England Auxiliary, No. 40, opened their social season last week at the Buckingham Memorial. There was a large attendance of both the lodge and auxiliary and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed.

The first number on the program was the singing of America. Then Abner Schwartz, president of the lodge, gave an address of welcome. An article on the significance of the Feast of Tabernacles written by Rev. Dr. K. Kohler was read by Mrs. Alex. Pasnik, president of the auxiliary. A short sketch "The Newlyweds" was cleverly presented by Miss Sadie Schwartz, Harry Schwartz and Alex Pasnik. Rev. Hershman of New York thrilled the audience with his wonderful repertoire of folk songs.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner after which there was a social hour. The women of the auxiliary provided a bountiful feast which was greatly appreciated by all.

In honor of the advent of a son, Chas. Jacobson provided fruit and Abner Schwartz, whose birthday fell on the same day, celebrated by providing grape juice and soda.

Religious Meeting at Jail

The Norwich Y. M. C. A. began holding meetings at the local jail on Sunday at 9:15 a. m. These meetings will be held every other week for the fall and winter. Hugh Kinder rendered two very inspiring vocal solos and accompanied the singing of the hymns Sunday. Secretary Edwin Hill read the scripture and offered prayer, and Edmund A. Prentice gave an interesting talk to hold the closest attention of the inmates. After announcing that the men who came to conduct the meetings did so purely with the idea of being helpful to the men and that that was the only motive they had for coming; he told the men that anyone who told him of his faults and how to get rid of them he considered that one his friend, that is just what Jesus Christ is doing constantly; He through his words and through conscience shows men their faults and shows them the way to correct these faults. On a vacation of ten days near the great ocean, I could but think of the wonderful provision God has made for us; the water bearing ships to and from other countries laden with merchandise, and carrying thousands on necessary errands; the sun drawing the water up, far up into space, that it might descend and bless us in crops, etc. God is so good to us I marvel how men can spoil their lives as many of you have by disregarding his kindness and sinning against his holy will. Some one said years ago "pull down the blinds of your heart and let Christ come in; men, you can do this very thing today if you will, and your lives can be changed.

FRENCH FINANCIERS HAVE CONFIDENCE IN CALLAUX

With Furthur Inflation of Finances Regarded as Inevitable For November Bankers, Brokers and Investors Refuse to Become Excited—Solution of the Problem of War Debt to America is Only One Phase of the General Situation Which Must Be Faced Immediately—Government's Life Depends Upon the Reception of Financial Plan Which M. Caillaux Will Present to the Radical Congress Saturday.

PARIS, Oct. 14—The financial situation of the French treasury, with inflation acknowledged in official and press circles as inevitable for November again dominates French politics, relegating the American debt settlement to second rank.

The provisional agreement brought back by M. Caillaux from Washington is considered as only one particular phase of the general situation which must be faced immediately.

The continued downward trend of the franc, which dropped today below one Belgian standard, and the reimbursement of 10,000,000,000 francs treasury bonds due in December are questions which occupied Premier Painleve, M. Caillaux and M. Malvy in conference for three hours today.

The dollar crossing the twenty-two franc mark today led to the situation being compared with that of last June. When the government was compelled to obtain authority from parliament to raise the legal limit for the issue of banknotes from 45,000,000,000 to 51,000,000,000 francs.

M. Caillaux announced that the bank of France was prepared to meet its obligations for October, but he would give no assurance that the government did not intend to request the raising of the limit of issue in November. All the Paris newspapers this evening although they deplore the necessity, admit that further inflation cannot be avoided.

The only feature of the situation different from that of June is the refusal of the bourse to get excited; unlimited confidence in M. Caillaux is show by bankers, brokers and the rank and file of small operators and investors.

M. Caillaux's non-committal attitude concerning the socialists' pet scheme, a capital levy, has had much to do with rallying to his support the sounder elements of French finance. A large section of the radical party has been won over to the capital levy plan, and the assurance that the finance minister will oppose the measure at the Nice congress, which opens tomorrow, had a steadying effect on the stock exchange operations today.

The government's life depends upon the explanation of the financial plan which M. Caillaux will develop before the radical congress on Saturday, and the attitude of the congress will give some definite idea of whether the opportunity from parliament to raise the legal limit for the issue of banknotes from 45,000,000,000 to 51,000,000,000 francs.

M. Caillaux announced that the bank of France was prepared to meet its obligations for October, but he would give no assurance that the government did not intend to request the raising of the limit of issue in November. All the Paris newspapers this evening although they deplore the necessity,

"BEANED" ATTENDANTS IN KEITH'S THEATRE, BOSTON

BOSTON, Oct. 14. (AP)—After having been baffled for ten weeks by the mysterious hurling of missiles daily into audiences at B. F. Keith's theater here, the police tonight arrested Walter Matthews, a special officer employed by the theater, charging him with disturbing a public assembly and with assault and battery. Since the last week in July, police and private investigators have sought vainly to discover the origin of pieces of scrap metal and stone which have been thrown into the midst of the audiences. A dozen persons, including a number of women, have been injured, the police said, by the flying objects.

Matthews was arrested today, the police said, just after he had thrown one of the missiles from the balcony, where he was on duty, striking a man in an orchestra seat on the head. According to the officers, Matthews confessed that he was the person who had thrown the objects. He claimed he did not know what urged him to do it, but at each performance, he felt an irresistible desire to throw something into the orchestra. So he would go to the basement, obtain a stone or piece of metal, return to his post of duty and throw it into the audience. Each time, he resolved he would cease the practice, but when the next performance started, the desire would return.

Just before the first of August the police were called in. Since that time at every performance plain clothesmen, inspectors, detectives, patrolmen and other investigators have been secreted in various parts of the theatre by the police. At times there were as many as 129 watchers on duty in the house, including 40 officers.

DEATHS FROM ALCOHOLISM NUMEROUS IN HARTFORD

HARTFORD, Oct. 14 (AP)—With the possible exception of 1924, deaths from alcoholism in Hartford this year will be greater than in any year since 1917. Records on file at the bureau of vital statistics show that the total for the first nine months of 1925 is equal to the total for the entire calendar year of 1923 and is only five less than the total for the calendar year of 1924. From January to September, inclusive, 14 deaths from alcohol were reported. In 1924 nineteen were reported, in 1923 the total was 14 and in 1922 twelve. In 1917, twenty-two deaths from alcohol were reported, the highest annual mark since 1906 when the total was 29. Figures for other years are: 1918, ten; 1919, two; 1920, two; 1921, one.

TUG AND TWO BARGES REPORTED IN DISTRESS

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. (AP)—The tug Boyle, with two barges in tow, was reported in distress six miles off Shinnecock light, near Fire Island, Long Island, tonight, a message from the steamship Robin Adair received by the Independent Wireless company said.

The wireless from the Robin Adair did not state whether the crew was still aboard the barges or the nature of the distress. The Robin Adair reported itself standing by to render assistance. The Coast Guard cutter Seneca, which picked up the distress message, was also said to be rushing to the aid of the tug.

ALLEGED BURGLAR WAS WOUNDED IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 14—An attempt to break into a store early today was stopped by police officers put Louis Vaulsio in New Haven hospital with superficial wounds in the neck from a bullet and led to arrest of two men who are now held under $5,000 bonds for a hearing on the charge of attempted burglary.

The police allege that this was an expedition to steal whiskey, similar to one carried out three weeks ago at a blacksmith shop when forty cases of liquor were stolen. They do not say there was whiskey in the store, but two officers got wind of a plot to get into the store and steal whiskey.

THREE TRAINMEN KILLED IN PENNSYLVANIA WRECK

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 14. (AP)—Official reports of the wreck on Pennsylvania train, No. 531, Wheeling to Pittsburgh local, near Wheeling today, show that three trainmen were killed and that while practically every passenger was bruised or shaken up, not one was hurt seriously.

Oliver D. Hays, road foreman of engineers of the Wheeling division, Wheeling, W. Va., Michael Doherty, engineer, Steubenville, O., and W. C. Bailey, fireman, Steubenville, were listed as dead by the company. They were in the locomotive when it was derailed.

At first belived to have been crushed to death in the wreckage of the baggage coach, L. O. Young, of Carnegie, Pa., the baggage master, was found to be only slightly hurt. He was in one of the coaches when the crash came.

Three relief trains and ambulances were sent to the scene from Wheeling and company officers said that any one needing hospital attention would be taken to that city.

The wreck occurred two and one half miles east of Wheeling at a place known as Richmond mine. The locomotive, baggage car and two coaches left the rails and turned over on their side. The three trainmen who met death were believed to have been scalded.

Company officials explained that Hays, the foreman of engines, was riding the locomotive on an inspection trip.

SYSTEM OF WARNING PLANES OF DISTURBANCES IN THE AIR

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—(AP)—An elaborate system for warning aircraft of the development, character and movement of dangerous air disturbances along the principal airways of the country has been prepared by the United States weather bureau.

This was disclosed today before the naval court inquiring into the Shenandoah disaster, by Dr. W. R. Greig, of the bureau who said a full report on the plan has been submitted to the naval aviation committee created under the department of commerce and that the bureau was hopeful it would be put into effect.

The plan contemplates the establishment of principal stations at 250-mile intervals along the airways, supplemented by a large number of secondary stations to report on local thunder squalls and other disturbances.

Agreeing that the present system is wholly inadequate to protect airships, weather experts have told the court that, while a more elaborate system functioning, the Shenandoah could have been warned of the Ohio storm in ample time to have escaped destruction.

ADMIRAL SIMS DEFINES TROUBLES OF U. S. NAVY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14—The root of present troubles in the American navy was ascribed today by Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, its wartime commander, "to a lack of confidence in its leaders."

Testifying before the president's air board, the admiral declared that naval air development was retarded by a policy "almost unbelievably conservative", and that administration of the whole naval force was conducted by "uneducated men."

Admiral Sims was the first of several witnesses, among whom were Rear Admiral Robert E. Coontz, for the last two years commander of the United States fleet; Rear Admiral George C. Bloch, chief of the ordnance bureau; Rear Admiral David W. Taylor, retired and Captain William S. Pye, assistant director of the naval war plans division.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

The day in Washington:

Additional testimony was heard by the air board.

Dwight F. Davis was sworn in as secretary of war.

POSSESSORS OF STOLEN GEMS AFRAID TO MARKET THEM

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 14—A tale of an alleged secret rendezvous in the Russian quarter of New York city, where gems and negotiable securities of fabulous amounts were piled high on tables and of a coterie of men, including a lawyer and a bank examiner, who had possession of them, but were afraid to place them on the open market for sale, was unfolded before a jury today in the federal district court.

The narrative was given by Earl Victor Von Brandenburg, who, with eight other men, is under indictment here charged with participating in the disposal of more than $300,000 worth of the $1,300,000 securities stolen by Gerald Chapman and his pals in the holdup of a mail truck in New York four years ago. He was a government witness against A. W. Perelstrous and Stephen Robinson, Jr., of this city, two of the defendants who are charged with conspiracy in aiding in the pledging of the $300,000 in securities with the Corn Exchange bank here for loans of $271,000. FOUND THREE DEAD MEN SITTING AT CARD TABLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 14—Police today found three men sitting about a card table in a little east side room as still as though a spell had been cast upon them while they played. It had been a friendly game they had been playing apparently, but the only winner had been death.

One lay with his head pillowed in his arm, his right hand clutching three aces and two nines. Another was in the act of reaching for the pot, evidently having believed himself the winner because of a straight he was holding. The third man who had discarded his hand was leaning back with his chin on his chest as though in thought.

Police went into the room in response to a report of the landlady that gas was escaping. Apparently the men had been unaware of the leaking gas so intent they had been on their game.

It is expected that the journey will start from Boston on Saturday morning, include a stop at Hartford on the way to Hadley field, New Brunswick, N. J., and return to Brainard field, Hartford, in time for the air meet in the afternoon.

The property was owned by Frederick Otto and Joseph Chizen and was occupied by Albert Cook. The fire started in the basement.

Bishop John Gardner Murray is Elected

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 14.—By the Associated Press)—The Rt. Rev. John Gardner Murray, D. D., bishop of Maryland was today elected presiding bishop and president of the council of the Protestant Episcopal church.

The election of Bishop Murray was sent to the house of deputies where it met concurrence by a large majority, thus ratifying the action of the house of bishops.

The proposal to change the existing laws on marriage and divorce in the Protestant Episcopal church received another setback today in the general convention of the church here.

The committee on canons of the house of deputies rendered an adverse report on the resolution presented that body yesterday by Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, for the sanctity of marriage association, which would have made remarriage impossible in cases of divorce granted for causes arising after marriage. The resolution was placed on the calendar for further consideration.

A resolution proposing to remove the seat of the national council from New York to Washington, D. C., was referred to a committee.

NEWPORT, Vt., Oct. 14—Fifty barrels of Scotch whiskey were captured here today in one of the largest seizures ever made in the northern boundary of the United States. The shipment was discovered in a railroad freight car and was billed as ship lath. The ends of the car had been built in to make a compartment at either end, while it made the interior shorter, the effect was not apparent to casual observers. The customs patrol also seized four rum running automobiles today.

The latest seizures, with others made in the past few months, bring the aggregate of liquor taken here to more than a hundred thousand bottles which would bring at bootleg prices, may hundreds of thousands of dollars. In addition to liquor a large quantity of valuable merchandise has been captured from smugglers.

The automobiles captured today included two registered from Rhode Island and one from Massachusetts.

They contained 600 bottles of red wine and ale. Abandoning their machines, the drivers fled, pursued by a single customs officer, Eugene Haire of Derby Line. They escaped after a chase of several miles.

MANY HARTFORD FAMILIES UNDER CARE OF CHARITY

HARTFORD, Oct. 14—Out of the forty thousand families in Hartford, one family out of every 125 is under the care of the Charity Organization society, Guy Davis Gold, general secretary, announces in his report for this month. These figures seem all the more startling, it was pointed out by Mr. Gold, when consideration is given to the fact that the Charity Organization society, although "the largest family welfare society in the city," is "only one of several societies doing family welfare work, the Diocesan Bureau, the United Hebrew Charities, the Union for Home Work and the Salvation Army each doing its share."

A general increase in the number of families requiring aid of some sort has been noted by Mr. Gold within the last five years. The September service of the Charity Organization society in September, 1920, was extended to 160 families or one family to each 860 persons in the population. In September of this year the society had 316 under care, or an average of one family to each 500 per sons in the city.

Sheriff and Jailer Given Jail Sentences

For Allowing Liberties to Chicago Bootleggers—Sheriff Also Fined $2,500.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Sheriff Peter M. Hoffman and his former jailer, Wesley Westbrook, were found guilty today of contempt and given jail sentences of 30 days and four months, respectively, and the sheriff was fined $2,500 for liberties allowed Terry Druggan and Frank Lake, bootleggers, while supposed to be serving a jail sentence.

In addition to the sentences for contempt against Hoffman and Westbrook Judge Wilkerson directed that they, along with Druggan, Lake, Henry Foerst, Westbrook's secretary, and Hans Thompson and James Fitzgerald, former assistant jail wardens, be held to the grand jury in $3,000 bond each for conspiracy to nullify the processes of a federal court.

Dr. Franklin R. Percival, dentist who treated Druggan and Lake, also was ordered arrested and held to the grand jury under $3,000 bond.

The court declared in a lengthy decision that the interference with the federal writ committing the bootleggers to jail, through the payment of thousands of dollars, was a flagrant violation by Druggan and Lake and the former warden, Wesley Westbrook.

"The writ was made a farce," Judge Wilkerson declared.

Sheriff Hoffman, for more than two decades a political leader, was explicitly cleared of connection with the bribery and corruption in the jail but he was found guilty of contempt for "not seeing what he should have seen and for closing his eyes after he had been shown."

Attorneys were granted until October 28 to prepare applications to the circuit court of appeals for a stay.

2,000 PROHIBITION AGENTS DROPPED FROM PAYROLL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—The last preliminary phase of federal prohibition enforcement reorganization ended tonight, and Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury today will be in direct control of an enforcement machine of his own moulding.

Two thousand prohibition agents and employes of the prohibition service automatically went off the government payroll with the effecting of the new order at midnight, Mr. Andrews having chartered a course which he believes will permit enforcement with a considerably smaller number than heretofore employed.

Not all of those who were dropped tonight will remain separated from the government payroll, however, as the administrators Mr. Andrews has placed in charge of the 24 new enforcement areas have kept for recommendations for the reappointment of many of them, while those recommendations have not received formal approval of the treasury, Mr. Andrews has advised the administrators that new employes or those reappointed should go to work tomorrow as part of the new engine of enforcement.

Mr. Andrews has announced that the administrators would be held responsible for the conduct of their forces, and that they would be given a free hand in naming their subordinates in order that the latter could, in turn, be held responsible tothem.

A score or more of appointments of assistant or deputy administrators and counsel for the administors remain to be made, but Mr. Andrews has acting officials in all of those places, so there appeared tonight to be few ones of the new machine not in workable shape for the start.

SESSION OF THE SECURITY CONFERENCE CANCELLED

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The session of the security conference arranged for this afternoon was suddenly cancelled. This aroused some pessimism at Locarno.

The provisions of the Rhine pact and the text of the arbitration treaties between Germany and France and Belgium have all been agreed to in principle but difficulties still persist in regulating the text of the arbitration treaties between Germany and Poland and Czechoslovakia. The allies are anxious to build up a system outlawing war which will be as watertight as possible, and they realize that with the Polish-German relations left unclarified their edifice of peace will be weak in part of its foundation.

Stripped of judicial technicalities, what Germany wants is to avoid the possibility of reopening the question of the Polish corridor, feeling that the corridor is an "abnormality and monstrosity," as one German put it. Poland thinks that disputes arising out of her existing frontier should not be subject to arbitration, realizing that if the league of nations council failed to agree on any decision, Germany would be free to act independently, under the terms of the covenant.

The prisoners are: Nicolus Simeno, and Costangnino, both of Chestnut street, New Haven, and Enrico Cimiglio, New York city.

Their counsel Attorney J. Walter Schefler petitioned Judge Banks today for their release under reduced bonds. It was declared they were unjustly confined in excessive bail of $10,000 each.

Judge Banks declined to change the bonds but said he would do what is possible to have the men tried during the criminal superior court for the present term before Judge George E. Hinman within several weeks.

A. F. OF L. VOTES SUPPORT OF THE STRIKING COAL MINERS

Action Taken After President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers Had Recited Conditions in the Industry—Mr. Lewis Warned the Public It Was Due to a "Rude Awakening" If It Believed There Was an Ample Supply of Coal on Hand—Officers Will Be Elected This Afternoon.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—Support of the American Federation of Labor was accorded the 158,000 striking miners in the anthracite field today, after President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers had addressed the delegates and stirred them to enthusiasm by his recital of conditions in the industry.

Mr. Lewis said the miners would not falter or depart from the policy laid down and he warned the public it was due for a "rude awakening" if it believed there was an ample supply of coal at hand. "Hundreds of thousands of homes will be without fuel and will be unable to secure fuel," he said, "until it can be produced at the mines and distributed."

Mr. Lewis also charged that the operators were extorting millions of dollars from the public by selling inferior grades of coal.

The convention adopted more than fifty resolutions of varied character today and paved the way for adjournment tomorrow night. Thirty-eight resolutions remain to be acted upon, including the possible settlement of jurisdictional disputes.

Officers will be elected tomorrow afternoon and so far no opposition has developed to the re-election of the present officials. Selection of next year's convention city also is to be made and it was understood that Detroit or Sacramento, Calif., were the most highly favored, with Birmingham, Ala., and Montreal also contenders.

Among the outstanding resolutions adopted today was one restating labor's traditional opposition to "injunction abuses," but going a step further by advocating legislative enactment to limit the power of equity courts.

Vice President Charles G. Dawes came in for condemnation for "conducting an agitation for the purpose of abolishing free speech in the United States senate, the only forum where cloture does not exist and where members can prevent the passage of reactionary legislation."

"The people should awaken to the fact," said the resolution adopted, "that the agitation for cloture does not come from the people but emanates in the secret chambers of the predatory interests.

"It is a vicious idea, a vicious purpose to which the vice president has loaned himself, and we recommend that every means be taken to expose the un-American proposal."

The convention voted to refer to the executive council a proposal favoring disarmament and calling for an international conference in Washington in the spring of 1926. The federation has always stood for international peace and comity between nations, a committee report said, and the council was instructed to do all in its power to promote disarmament.

Another resolution said: "Against the communist boring from within we recommend that drastic action which the surgeon takes against a malignant growth—removal of all of its tissues, to temporize is to endanger the health of the whole organization."

The convention non-curred on a resolution protesting against militarism through the military training camps. A resolution adopted said the federation "has never opposed whatever character of training is intended and designed to build up strong bodies, healthy minds and patriotic souls."

In his address to the delegates on the anthracite strike, President Lewis made charges against the operators never before made during the controversy.

He said in part:

"They not only lowered coal sizes outright, but introduced the round mesh in place of the square mesh in the breaker screens. This move alone means a reduction of one-fifth in the size of practically every grade of coal.

* * * The mesh for chestnut and pea sizes has been changed so that between one-fourth and thirty per cent. of all pea coal sold is now sold as chestnut. The difference in price between the two sizes is $3.15 per ton and stands to pay the operators $4,526,550 for their shrewdness.

"The mesh for buckwheat No. 1 has been cut so that at least one-third of all the buckwheat is now sold as pea coal. The difference is $2 a ton.

"We do not object to the legitimate efforts of the operators to sell the steam sizes but when they inform the public that they are not selling them and that they are not making any money at the same time that they are perpetrating this graft, the hypocrisy of the situation is repugnant to the minds of honest men."

DECISION RESERVED ON THE NEW HAVEN ROAD PETITION

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—Federal Judge Winslow reserved decision today on the petition of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad for modification or the Sherman law decree entered against it in 1914. The railroad sought to have restored to it trolley and bus lines in Westchester county, N. Y., and in Connecticut and two Long Island steamship lines which were separated from it by the decree.

Testifying before Judge Winslow, E. Buckland, vice president of the railroad, said that since the railroad's separation from the trolley lines, no acceptable offer of purchase for them has been received by the trustees who former the Connecticut Holding company in conformity with the Sherman law.

To be operated properly, Mr. Buckland stated, the trolley lines should be returned to the railroad for needed additional financing. It was urged that it would be unfair to ask the railroad to make any investments in the trolley lines if it were not permitted to retain stock control. The lines involved include 776 miles, or nearly all the lines in the state of Connecticut.

Boston, Fall River, New Bedford and Providence have already begun to consume shipments of imported coal.

FIRESTONE TO LEASE 1,000,000 ACRES OF LAND IN AFRICA

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. (AP)—Harvey S. Firestone, president of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., announced today that he has signed an agreement with the Republic of Liberia on the west coast of Africa by which he has obtained a lease on 1,000,000 acres of land, suitable for rubber growing for 99 years and a 5,000 acre rubber plantation fully mature and bearing.

He plans to spend $100,000,000 in developing the lease.

Harvey S. Firestone, Jr., sailed today for London to establish an office of the Firestone Plantations Co.

Discussing the project tonight, Mr. Firestone, Sr., declared that the concession was the largest ever given to a rubber company, foreign or American. English and Dutch capital now control 97 per cent. of the rubber output of the world, he said, and he proposes, "to make England realize that America is now in the rubber business in earnest."

A large part shares of the $100,000,000 which will be spent on the new enterprise will be devoted to the rebuilding of the port of Montrovia, capital city of Liberia, Mr. Firestone stated. If necessary the company will later organize its own steamship line. The contract for the work in Monrovia has already been awarded to the James G. White engineering corporation of New York, it was announced.

W. J. SWEENEY NEW CHAIRMAN OF TOWN SCHOOL BOARD

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 14—William J. Sweeney, a member for nearly a quarter of a century was unanimously elected chairman of the town school committee, at the October meeting of the board, held at his home, Wednesday evening. Superintendent of Schools Egbert A. Case was re-elected secretary, after sixteen years in that office. The report of Truant Officer John A. McKenna and School Physician Dr. W. F. S. Keating were presented. On motion of H. C. Lathrop, it was voted to appropriate a sum not to exceed $200 for physical training supplies. The properties committee, George W. Hickey, chairman was authorized to make sanitary improvements at the North Windham school.

In thanking the members for the honor conferred on him, Chairman Sweeney stated that by virtue of many years of experience he could justly say that the school boards of the last few years were by far superior to previous committees, as regards mutual interest for the welfare of the town schools. On recommendation of Secretary Case the board voted to endorse the work of the local lodge of Elks in soliciting contributions from school children for a fund to save "Old Ironsides," the U. S. Frigate Constitution which figured in the naval history of two American wars. The members present were: Chairman W. J. Sweeney, Sec. E. A. Case, Joseph F. Gaudreau, George W. Hickey, Robert O. Snow, H. C. Lathrop, C. C. Case, Dr. W. T. S. Keating, John Reilly, Dr. S. E. Guild, Frank Edwards.

BODY OF MRS. IVAN JOHNASON FOUND IN NATCHAUG RIVER

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 14.—The body of Mrs. Georgia H. Johanson, 63, wife of Ivan Johanson, of South Chaplin, was found at the bottom of the Natchaug river, in South Chaplin, about one mile from her home, at 12.30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. A thorough search of the vicinity had been under way day and night since the woman was missed from her home about 3.30 o'clock Tuesday morning. A note which she left on the table stated that she intended to take her own life. In the note she had requested that her husband secure the services of Edward Belek, a neighbor, to find her. It was Mr. Belek who saw the body lying face down on the bottom of the river. At that time he was in a canoe manned by T. A. Rice of North Windham. Witnesses to the discovery included the sorrowing husband.

That the suicide was a deliberate act remains unquestionable. There is every indication that the woman was despondent over ill health. Monday night the couple retired. About 11 o'clock Mr. Johanson awoke and found that his wife had gotten up. He went downstairs and found her sitting quietly. She wore night-clothing, bedroom slippers and a bathrobe. She told her husband that she was not feeling very well and would sit up for a while. She had done this on a few previous occasions and sensing nothing unusual Mr. Johanson returned to bed. About 3.30 o'clock he again got up. Failing to locate his wife in the bedroom he went downstairs again and called for her. There was no reply and the lower part of the house was in darkness. He lighted the lamp and there on the table was a typewritten note. The note began: "My Dear One," and disclosed the intentions of his wife. At the outset Mrs. Johanson told her husband that he would never be blamed for her act. Her happiest hours in life, it read, were those spent with him, but she was ill and she could no longer bear to be a burden to him. He must not feel too badly—only pray that she might suffer no longer. She instructed him to have Belek help look for her body. After it had been found she wished that it be cremated and that he be buried beside her ashes. The remainder of the note told him to give their dog, Paulie, to her sister, Mary Dexter, of Milanville, Pa., and told him where he would find her various articles of clothing and a pair of socks that she had darned for him a few nights before. Another note in an unsealed letter addressed to her sister, Mary, of a similar nature but lacking some of the details, lay on the table beside the first.

The husband searched the house and then picked up a flashlight and hurried through the woods and along the river bank. Within half an hour the light burned out and he rushed to the Belek home, a few hundred feet away. He and Mr. Belek resumed the search and as the news spread they were joined by hands of neighbors. In the forenoon Deputy Sheriffs Charles O. Fitts and E. E. Chapel, of Hampton, and John Hammond of Clark's Corner, took the leadership in scouring the woods. The men tramped about practically all through the night and continued on Wednesday. Late in the forenoon Deputy Sheriff Chapel came upon the first clue to the missing woman's whereabouts. It was a table glass lying on the south bank of the Natchaug river at what is known as a swimming hole on the Belek property, nearly a mile through a winding path to the Johanson and Belek homes. Mr. Johanson recognized the glass as one he had seen at home. The dregs of a dark red fluid stained the inside. This find and the fact that the womap had intended to commit suicide on Belek's land inasmuch as she had instructed him to help in the search, led the searchers to the conclusion that she had drank the fluid, very likely a poison, and then had thrown herself into the river which is some seven feet deep at this point. Patrick Shea, a Chaplin resident, secured a long pole to which he attached a grappling iron and dragged the river, but without success. After discovering the glass the officers and assistants had returned to the house and were going to lunch when a representative of The Bulletin arrived. After a talk it was decided to return to the spot and there they were met by Edward Belek and T. A. Rice, who came up the river in a canoe. Within five minutes Belek found the body some one hundred feet down stream from the swimming hole. The body was pulled ashore and Medical Examiner Dr. Lolis I. Mason of this city was summoned.

Worn by worry, lack of sleep and a search of many hours through dense woods, Mr. Johanson, a man of 63, remained silent as he assisted in getting the body ashore. A pathetic incident occurred when his dog—her dog, Prudie, an Airdale, thrust his head into the master's hands and the man sobbed as he returned the animal's caress.

Medical Examiner Mason pronounced death due to drowning by suicide. It was possible, he said, that the woman had taken poison but as this had no bearing on the case he stated that he would not make an analysis of the clots on the inside of the glass. He gave permission for the removal of the body by a local undertaking firm.

Mrs. Johanson had undergone an operation about a year ago. Sunday she had attended the Christian Scientist meeting in this city with a neighbor and as she was customarily reserved in her conversation, nothing was noticed of any unusual nature in her state of mind.

Mr. and Mrs. Johanson came to South Chaplin some seven years ago, leaving Hartford, where Mr. Johanson had retired as an electrical engineer. They were married 14 years ago, she being his second wife. No children were born to them.

Georgia Helen Johanson was born in Milanville, Pennsylvania, September 28, 1862, a daughter of George and Helen Skinner Dexter. Besides her husband she is survived by a sister, Mary Dexter and two brothers, Albro and Richard Dexter, all of Milanville, Pa.

Center street is to be a one-way street. Action establishing this arrangement was taken by the warden and court of burgesses at a meeting Tuesday evening. Traffic will enter Center street from Main street, but traffic coming from Center into Main will be prohibited. This action is taken to decrease the constant danger of accidents at this point, where the traffic is invariably heavy. Parking on one side of Center street will be allowed as at present. The one way regulation will be made effective in the very near future.

In addition to the action on Center street, the borough officials approved the request for an additional hydrant on L'Hiomme street, opposite the Alexander lot, to give more adequate fire protection in and around this new thoroughfare, where dwellings are being erected.

A Packard touring car owned by W. R. Quinn of Brooklyn, N. Y., went off the state highway, Wednesday morning, at a curve near the Gallup farm near the junction of Stearns and Reynolds street and was so badly wrecked that it is estimated $1,000 would be the cost of repairing the damage.

Mr. Quinn and his party were returning from Cape Cod, having spent the summer in that region. A chauffeur was driving and riding alone in the car that was wrecked while other members of the party traveled in two other machines. The chauffeur notwithstanding the serious damage to the machine, escaped with a cut on the throat from flying glass of the broken windshield and some bruises. The damaged car was towed to a garage here.

PROSPECT OF BEAR HUNTING FOR LOCAL SPORTSMEN

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 14—"I would like a license to hunt bear." If Town Clerk Frank T. Preston receives a request of this nature, it may surprise him, for bear hunting licenses are not regularly issued in Killingly. Probably a license to hunt bear is not required. But, anyway, there's "bar" to the east of here, on the word of Frank O. Plummer, one of the borough's business men.

Mr. and Mrs. Plummer both have seen within a week a large, lumbering animal and a small animal of the cub type, while en route in their car to their home in North Sterling. Mrs. Plummer saw one of the animals one night and Mr. Slummer the smaller animal on another night. Mr. Plummer says that what he takes as a bear cub was caught full in the glare of the headlights of his machine as he was going down what is known as Sawmill hill, not far from the Deloss Wood place near North Sterling, just over the line from the Killingly boundary. Mr. Plummer insists the animal he saw was not a coon, that it was too large for a coon and had a stub tail.

Here's something to interest the hunters and to give a chill to the timid. But to these latter it may be said one need not be afraid of a bear. Upon meeting one, a person should merely say "Woof" fierce and disdainful-like, for everyone knows what a bear will do if a person says "Woof" at him. It's a sure safeguard of safety.

LINNELL HOUSE, WESTMINSTER BURNED WEDNESDAY MORNING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTMINSTER, Oct. 14.—Westminster has had another disasterous fire, this time by daylight. The place was Rose cottage owned by Frank Linnell, whose wife died last July after a long illness. Mr. Linnell closed his house for the winter after his daughter returned to high school in New York where she is head of the English department. He had gone to the home of his nephew, Moses A. Linnell, in Mancehester, Sept. 27th, leaving his keys with Mrs. T. Edward Davies. As she has not yet been able to go in person, Mrs. Davies had had Miss Julia Green, her helper for several weeks, go daily to see that all was right at the Linnell place, and Miss Green did so at 9 a. m. today.

William Davies, who lives next to the Linnell place, passed the house twice a little later. He said he had been asked to keep an eye on it, so he looked both times and it was all right. So said two other persons who had passed shortly after.

At about 11.30 Miss Green looked out a window and saw what she thought was a grass fire near the Linnell place. A look from the door sent her running to MacLeod's store shouting "Fire." The only available men on the hill were Earl MacLeod and William Williams. The church bell was first rung by Mr. MacLeod, then by schoolboys glad to help in this work. Miss Green took the keys to the place, but Earl MacLeod aided by two young men who were passing in an automobile and stopped to aid had forced the door and they and the other men and women of the neighborhood gave what little help they could. Others came, but too late to save more.

By 12.30 the furious wind and fire had burned the house and outbuildings, barn and chicken houses to the ground. Mr. Linnell carried insurance but to what amount is not known. The cause of the fire is unknown.

DEATH OF MRS. WM. H. CHAPMAN COUSIN OF HORACE GREELEY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 15—Sarah Elizabeth Chapman, 89, widow of William H. Chapman, oldest resident of the West Side, died Wednesday. Chapman was a first cousin of Horace Greeley, her father and his mother being brother and sister, and she recalled throughout her life the many visits the famous man made during her early years to her parents' home in New Hampshire.

Mrs. Chapman was born Sarah Elizabeth Woodburn, at Londonberry, N. H., April 11, 1836, a daughter of John and Mehitable Malvern Woodburn.

June 13, 1856, she married at Nashua, N. H., William H. Chapman, of Danielson. They lived there about a year before coming to this community. Mr. Chapman died in May, 26 years ago.

It happens that Mrs. Chapman is the last of the residents of the West Side who were among the original property owners in that section. The Chapman property had been in the family for 70 years. In her church affiliations Mrs. Chapman was a Congregationalist. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Ella Chapman Mills, with whom she made her home for many years and who gave her every loving care, Mrs. Lillian Foote, wife of George Foote of Southbridge; a grand-daughter, Mrs. Ruby Foote Chipman of Southbridge and three great-grandsons, all residents in Southbridge.

At 8 o'clock Supt. John L. Chapman telephoned Driver John Kingsley that the schoolhouse had been burning for 15 minutes. Under those conditions Chief F. W. Ledger felt it unnecessary to sound an alarm, but gathered a few firemen, who on arrival, with the aid of hand chemicals, saved all the books, etc, and the teacher's desk. The fire started in the woodshed adjoining the schoolhouse. Miss Dorothy Knight, teacher at Flat Rock, stated that everything was all right when she left the school at a little after four o'clock, and there had been no fire in the stove.

HALF CENTURY OF SERVICE

When the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment station was established a half century ago at New Haven there was recognition of the need of such an institution. It was anticipated that it would be in a position to render valuable service to the people of this commonwealth, and now as the 50th anniversary is reached it is easy to look back and note with satisfaction the provisions that were made in the past for so ably meeting the present-day problems and to give those who use the soil as well as others the benefit of a half century's development in meeting and bettering the conditions.

Connecticut has reason to be proud of the results that have been obtained, the service that has been rendered in the many directions and the demonstration through the past five decades that an experiment station was actually needed.

It would be impossible to estimate the value of the study and researches made by the station during its lifetime in behalf of Connecticut agriculture, Connecticut soils, the various pests that have been suffered and the best methods of combatting them, the orchard, poultry, dairy and floral conditions. Highly valuable have been the many tests which have been made for the protection of the buyer relative to the purity of fertilizer and other commodities into which the public would for the most part be pouring its money without otherwise being able to protect itself.

The station has long had the able guidance of Dr. E. H. Jenkins, who has surrounded himself with a competent corps of assistants. Its record of achievements during the first 50 years of its existence has been highly meritorious and as it starts on its second half century there is reason to anticipate an even better record when the century mark is reached. Connecticut invested well when it established its experimental station.

SEARCHES AND SEIZURES

Individuals have rights which are given to them by the Constitution of the United States. For the most part those rights are respected but there are times when they are disregarded and it becomes necessary to go to the courts to have it set forth what can be expected under the various amendments.

Of late years the supreme court of the United States has been busy interpreting the 18th amendment and in connection with the enforcement of the Volstead act it has been called upon to determine whether that amendment nullifies the fourth amendment in regard to the matter of searches and seizures.

This latest case arose from the failure of the authorities to follow the proper course. They had obtained warrants which entitled them to search the premises of a Brooklyn man and the search was made in accordance with the provisions of the law. But during the course of that search they found evidence which tended to incriminate another Brooklyn man living at another house. Instead of proceeding as they had done in the first case and getting a warrant to search they proceeded without it and the result is that the case was carried to the highest court in the land and by the decision of that court the man who was illegally raided and convicted is granted a new trial. The rights of the second man under the fourth amendment of the Constitution had been violated. That amendment reads: "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no warrant shall issue unless upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched and the persons or things to be seized."

By the amendment it is clearly stated what is required in making searches and seizures, but the court decision serves to bring it to greater attention at this particular time.

INDIVIDUALS, NOT REPRESENTATIVES

Even when the department of state saw the advisability of stating its position in regard to the Americans who had enlisted in the war against the Riffs as aviators, it was realized that it would not of necessity force such aviators to give up their part in the foreign air service. It however placed this country on record as showing that such is not in accord with our laws and not countenanced by this government. In other words we have shown that they cannot be regarded as reflecting the sentiment of this government in connection with the trouble in Morocco, where we are taking no part and intend to take none. Those who are fighting under the claim of being Americans are simply serving their own wills and satisfying their eagerness to get into some such kind of fighting.

It would probably have been the same had the war broken out somewhere else. They are not representatives of this government, but are to be classed as adventurers, ready to go into the fray for the excitement and glory of it. Possibly their personal sympathy is with the opponents of the Riffs, but there is a good chance that had they been able to enlist under the banner of the Riffs they might have yielded quite as readily to the enticement of air fighting.

That the flying corps, operating in that region, made up of foreigners, has been disbanded makes it possible to regard it as a response to the protest of this government. But it is to be realized that this dissolution comes at the beginning of the rainy season, when there would be no fighting and there seems to be nothing in the way of its reorganization when the time seems to be ripe. Likewise there is nothing which can prevent Americans from enlisting so far as is known, but it would be just as well in case of such a development if there was less disposition to bear now on the claim that they were participating as Americans. They are simply acting on their own initiatives and in no way serving as representatives of this country.

AIRPLANES AND THE NORTH

From reports which are being credited to Donald B. MacMillan, he has come back from the polar regions with the belief that there is little service which can be rendered by the airplanes in the exploring of that part of the world. He is credited with saying that he will have no more of them in expeditions with which he is connected.

It is to be gathered from that, if he is correctly quoted and his decision is final, that he has undergone a change of heart as the result of his experiences. The actual test has served to upset the theoretical possibilities. But even as he was being quoted another explorer was making plans for employing this very means of transportation in scouring the top of the world.

MacMillan was not in the north as long as he had expected to be, but during his stay he put to actual test the use of flying machines in the frozen north. He did it in a different manner than Amundsen did. He did not undertake to fly over the pole or to reach it in one great dash. The opportunity for these two well known explorers to compare notes on their experiences for the benefit of themselves and others who like to plunge into that region is now open. From their experiments and experiences there should be much valuable information available to serve as a guide in future attempts, whether undertaken by sledge, airplane or dirigible, or by a combination having the assistance of vessels.

On first trials all new inventions are not successful. It is not improbable that this is the case with airplanes in the north and that with a knowledge of their shortcomings better results may be obtained from improved vehicles in the future.

LOOKING AFTER PUBLIC

Given a chance to gouge the consumer, there are those who are only too eager to get busy. It makes no difference how it can be done, whether it concerns foodstuffs or fuel, there's a willingness to take advantage of conditions to place an added load upon the burdened for the sake of raking in a few more dollars.

This has been the situation whenever coal shortages have loomed up or actually arrived. It is one of the problems that is being faced by fuel commissions in different states as the result of the coal strike, and it is interesting to note that the head of the state coal commission in New York, Major General Berry, has announced that if the investigation of gouging, following complaints to that effect, shows that situation to exist he will resort to the publication of a list of dealers resorting to such practices for the protection of the coal consumers.

Such a move is certainly justified, but it will be unfortunate if some further penalty cannot be applied to those who are taking advantage of a hold-up situation to put on additional getting fuel is one problem and dealing with coal gougers another. Both call for increasing attention and the public should lend all possible cooperation in steps which are being taken in its behalf.

THAT FENCE

"I can't stop her!" confided the Hyde Park man bitterly to his friend from Woodlawn. "Women are the natural-born tightwads of the human race—all this talk about their wide sympathies and all-embracing affection for human kind is poppycock! The minute they get a thing their instinct is to shriek to the world it's theirs and to keep off! Imogene—"

"It was a great mistake for you two to go over to your summer cottage all by yourselves," reproved his Woodlawn friend. "Nothing to distract you from quarreling with each other when the work is done."

"It wasn't!" the Hyde Park man replied gloomily. "Done. I mean!

"But things would have been all right if Imogene had not become possessed of a mania to fence in the darned place. She said she adored the feeling of owning everything inside a certain line, and she wanted a rustic fence. I said that rustic fences were things of beauty for about five minutes, when they just naturally lay down and died, and, anyhow, timber was worth a million dollars an inch, and I was a poor man. Then she wanted an ornamental wire fence, and I explained that of such was the kingdom of the millionaire and, anyhow, if you had one of those wire fences you had to line it with too costly vines and trees.

"Then she said there certainly must be some substance of which a man in straitened circumstances might make a fence and she was going to find something! Then I tried artfulness. I asked why she wished to bar the populace from enjoying the beauties of our modest estate. She countered that during the summer season the hotel visitors simply roamed through the whole place, plucking our carefully transplanted wild flowers and lilies and sunflowers and various buds.

"The next time I sauntered outdoors I found Imogene busily building a regular Chinese wall, two bricks high, across one side of our place. She would walk several hundred feet to where the workmen who had been doing repair work had dumped some old brick and trot back with four clasped to her chest, which she laid down two by two. Some of them toppled over and I laughed—and the lady, with flashing eyes and covered with brick dust from her chin to her waist, told me exactly what she thought of me. It is really marvelous what a woman does actually think about her husband and the occasions are not many when she comes right out and informs him—but this was one.

"Imogene became rather discouraged after the bricks had fallen a dozen times or so, and then she had the inspiration to plant a hedge of little pine trees from the woods. I said how was she going to get 'em from the woods, and she said that was easy, because I was going. And then I said how was she going to plant them after she had acquired them, and she said, oh, that was easy, too, because I was going to dig the holes and shovel in the earth.

"Right there was where I gave one long, wild, hopeless howl and jumped on my hat.

"I must have made myself clear, for nothing more was said about a fragrant pine hedge, 600 or 700 feet long. She decided, then, she'd plant large ferns from the swamp along the border of the lot. That was before she discovered that the most ladylike, graceful fern has businesslike roots firmly cemented into concrete, or some such substance, and extending to China. Imagene broke the hatchet trying to chop one out.

"When I left Imogence to stay by herself and finish up the housecleaning and Alpine scenes—I'm somewhat expression on her face before the large pile of tin cans and empty bottles left from last season, and I have no doubt that when I return I shall find a fence built of the debris, all varnished over and hand painted with pansies.

"And well you may be!" agreed his worried friend.

"And well you may be!" agreed his Woodlawn friend. "When they are 6 years old they fence in the canary bird's grave with twigs, when they are 10 they put a row of pebbles around the puppy's tomb, and from then on they are jealously inclosing whatever belongs to 'em, including our pay checks! My boy, you haven't a chance — little bird tells me you're going to have a fence around your estate!"—Chicago News.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

WALLABIES AND FIREFLIES

White house officials recently were puzzled over a gift of a Tasmanian wallaby. What would they have done if the white house, instead of the imperial palace of Japan, had been the address on a recent consignment of 10,000 fireflies? The emperor gave half his insect stock to the Prince Regent, and pastured the rest in the royal gardens at Nikko.

"The sickening sense of beauty which Americans feel before the magnificence of a skyscraper or the vastness of a stadium, the Japanese catch from small things: a firefly freed in a garden, the tilt of a flower in a vase or the staccato song of a cricket," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"Fireflies and crickets aare always popular merchandise at temple festivals. A 'midway' of booths selling toys and flowers, sewgaws and games is a main attraction at these celebrations. To buy a firefly one joins a milling crowd in the temple park at night under the soft varicolored gleam from hundreds of lanterns. Every gaudy stall in the lane seems an oversize lantern cut away on one side to flood the passing throng with light.

"The firefly bazaar itself is like nothing else in the world. Innumerable tiny straw and transparent paper cages breathe in darkness and expel glow in slow pulsations. Among his fireflies the merchant stands like an idling leader of an orchestra of lights which seem ever to be tuning for a grand symphony of illumination that never comes off. Each of these truly magic lanterns costs only a fraction of a cent.

"Bound up in a common Japanese phrase is a legend about their cherished fireflies. It is a companion for the story of young Abraham Lincoln working problems in the flickering firelight with a shovel for a slate.

"There lived in Japan a very poor family, as poor in their nation as Abraham Lincoln's father and foster mother were in Illinois. They were blessed with a son who had great eagerness for learning. But the poor parents could not afford to send their son to school. They could not buy candles that he might study at night. So the boy collected fireflies from the fields, imprisoning them in a cage. By crowding this curious lantern close to his borrowed books he could make out the characters. Winter came, snuffing out his firefly lantern, but he learned to hold his book where it caught the dim light reflected by snow against the window. Study and work brought him honor and success.

"Today when a Japanese student wishes to remark about a fellow student 'burning the midnight oil,' he says that he is using 'hotaru no hikari mado no yuki,' literally 'firefly light and window snow.'

"Before one sees the cricket booth one hears it. A miniature storm of noise rises above the murmur of conversation. Elbow your way to the front of the crowd and it will soon be apparent that crickets are not all just crickets. Sweet singers among the crickets come high just as good coloratura canaries command a good price in the occident. There is the weaver cricket whose whirring tune is the sound of a hand loom. Another shrills like an electric bell heard in the distance. But it is not the true 'suzumushi' or bell cricket. The 'suzumushi' song is that of jingling tiny bells Shinto priestesses use in sacred dances.

"The attraction of crickets for light makes their capture easy by countrymen with lanterns. Male and female are usually imprisoned at the same time since Cricket's wife is always tagging along. But mankind is ruthless with these family ties: the male is immediately separated from the female for he alone sings. Placed in company with his mate he ceases to sing and soon dies. His silent partner is kept for breeding purposes.

"Breeding crickets are placed in crocks half-filled with moist clay. The male dies first and the female, lives only until her eggs are laid. Left to the normal course the eggs hatch about the middle of July. But merchants incubate crickets for the early spring trade in warm rooms. But merchants incubate crickets for the early spring trade in warm rooms. A cheap diet of eggplant parings, melon rind, cucumber rind or the soft interior parts of the white onion satisfies the singing crickets.

"Musical frogs also delight the heart of the Japanese. Certain places in the vicinity of Tokyo are well known and often visited in the evening by people who love to listen to a certain species of small frog whose song is highly esteemed."

From Small Beginnings

Johns Hopkins, the Founder of a Great University.

Eggs? Yes, Ma'am. Want any flour today? Or sugar? Tea? We have the very best."

"He's a good boy," said Johns Hopkins' uncle as he watched his busy nephew wait on the customers in the grocery store. The boy was a willing and faithful worker, and he had strength gained from years of hard labor on the farm. He did not hesitate to life the heavy barrels and boxes. Being a Quaker boy, he was of even disposition and had thoroughly good habits.

Johns Hopkins was born in Maryland and spent much of his life in Baltimore, the city that now so honors his memory.

His boyhood work in the grocery store led him to look about him for wider opportunities. What more natural than that he should have a store of his own and try to do as well as his uncle had done? He set up his store and put into it all his natural honesty and all the lessons he had learned through observation in the days of his clerkship. He reached out to one house then and then to another. People liked to trade with him because they could be sure of what they bought. Soon he was known not only all through his own state, but also in the neighboring states. When women wanted groceries they went to him—and so did other grocers. When men wanted advice they went to Johns Hopkins, the wise Quaker. Everyone in Baltimore and in Maryland knew who he was. From being a farm boy and a grocer's clerk he became the wise and trusted adviser of great corporations.

Today Johns Hopkins university, which he founded, is known as the home of high scholarship. From that university, endowed by the grocer's clerk—who handed over something like $7,000,000—have come some of the best American scholars. That is, indeed, a memorial worth leaving—the memory of an honest and useful life, of a wise brain and a kindly heart, and a great university to spread its blessings forever. All honor to the little Quaker clerk who knew how to be both honest and clever.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

"Don't you dare tell any one where I hid that nut," cried Happy Jack Squirrel

Peter Quizzes Happy Jack.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Who would keep a secret well
Never any one will tell.
—Happy Jack Squirrel.

Do you know what is to quiz? It is to ask questions. Peter Rabbit, as you know, has the habit of asking questions. Having found out from Striped Chipmunk how the latter was preparing for winter, Peter scampered over to the Green Forest where Happy Jack Squirrel was very hard at work. Happy Jack was gathering hickory nuts. Happy Jack has no pockets in his cheeks. He has no pockets at all, so he cannot carry several nuts at a time as can his little cousin, Striped Chipmunk. Peter Rabbit watched him a few moments. He saw Happy Jack run with a big hickory nut in his teeth. He scampered off to one side of the Lone Little Pine and with his forepaws he pulled over the leaves and dug a little hole in the earth. In this he put the nut and covered it up. Then he turned to go back for another nut and saw Peter Rabbit.

"Don't you dare tell any one where I hid that nut!" cried Happy Jack Squirrel.

"Of course I won't," replied Peter indignantly. "What do you take me for?"

"For a busybody poking his nose into other people's business," retorted Happy Jack.

"It's no such thing!" declared Peter still more indignantly. "I'm not poking my nose into other people's business, and you have no business to say that I am. I just happened along and I couldn't very well help seeing you bury that nut unless I turned my back. Of course I won't tell anybody about it. Why should I? It isn't the first time I've seen you bury a nut. I never yet have told anybody where you buried them."

"That's true, Peter," said Happy Jack, regaining his good nature. "That wasn't kind of me. But you know I have to watch out all the time for fear that thieving cousin of mine, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, will see me burying nuts. If he does he'll steal them."

"Then why do you hide them in the ground this way?" demanded Peter. "Why don't you hide them in a storehouse?"

"For the simple reason that it would take too long to run over to my storehouse with each nut right now. If I could carry several at a time it would be different. As it is the next best thing is to hide a lot right near at hand and later take them to my storehouse. Of course I do have a storehouse."

"I'd wondered about that," said Peter. "Of course I had supposed you did. Where is it?"

Happy Jack laughed right out. "That's a personal question," said he. "It's too personal for me to answer. I am the only one who knows where that storehouse is and I hope I will always be the only one to know."

"Do you have more than one storehouse?" inquired Peter innocently.

"Sometimes," replied Happy Jack. "Sometimes I have two. Then if anything happens to one I have the other. That is just good common sense."

"And do you pick up all those nuts that you are hiding now and carry them to your storehouse?" inquired Peter.

"No," replied Happy Jack. "No, I leave a lot of them on the ground hidden under the leaves and in other places. Then instead of taking nuts from my storehouse in the winter for my daily food I come and get these."

"Goodness, gracious, Happy Jack how do you remember where they all are?" exclaimed Peter.

"Well, if you don't remember, how do you find them?" asked Peter.

"That's telling," replied Happy Jack. "I do find them and that's enough. Of course it is easier when there is no snow on the ground, but even when there is snow on the ground I find them."

"I know you do," said Peter, "because I've seen you dig them up and I've always wondered about it."

A lot of other people have wondered and still wonder," replied Happy Jack. "But goodness, I can't talk any more. I must get busy. These are busy days, Peter. These are busy days."

Stories That Recall Others

A Warning

A Clergyman and his wife were to be entertained in the home of one of the parishioners and four-year-old Ralph, the youngest inmate of the home, was being coached as to his warned about remarks concerning the choice and quality of the food.

"Well," he exclaimed, "if you don't want me to say anything, don't give me the gizzard."

Almost a Total Loss

The educational campaign Fire Prevention week has its good results. As the result of what was told to some of the school children, George, age eight, brought this home:

"Say, dad, did you know there are 5,000 fires in this state every minute? Well that's right. There was a man at school today who told us about how many fires there were and how much damage they do, and that's what he said. And more than that, dad, I'll bet you didn't know that every day in the state four schoolhouses, five hospitals, three factories, seven churches, and I don't remember just how many plain houses that burn clear up. Yes, sir, that's a fact because that's what we were told in school." George had got the point of the lesson but was a bit mixed in his figures.

Late the other afternoon a man flipped a half-smoked cigarette to the street pavement. It fell on the concrete but before it stopped rolling four children were running to see who would be the first to stamp it out. They came back and rebuked the man for his carlessness and he gravely apologized.

DILO, Oct. 14—Amundsen's airship in which he expects to fly to the North Pole next year, will undergo its trials in January after being overhauled and equipped with Mayback motors. Three mooring masts will be erected at Rome Trondhjem and Svalbard.

If the North Pole is successfully reached the ship will proceed as far as possible toward Nome. A suitable landing place will be sent by the airship's radio.

THREE MILLION FASCISTS NOW ANSWER MUSSOLINI'S CALL

ROME, Oct. 14—When Benito Mussolini stretches his right arm forward in Roman salute and calls: "Fascists, attention!" the answer "Present!" is a chorus of voices of about 3,000,000,—men women and children.

Fascism, only a handful of men some ten years ago, is now a formidable army, according to an official report made by Roberto Farinacci, secretary general of the Fascist Party. Here are his figures:

6,317 communal organizations.
317 national trade unions.
16 children's organizations.
16 vanguard organizations.
500 women's groups.
9,000 men's groups.

Abandon Imperial Game Acres

TOKYO, Oct. 14—Three of the large royal game preserves are being abolished because the Imperial Family wishes them to revert to public use, and also to eliminate the rather heavy expense of keeping them up.

Their abolition is expected to effect a saving of about 20,000 yen yearly in the Household Department.

Experiments are now being conducted by the United States army to produce cloth maps stiff enough for easy reading to replace the easily worn out paper strip maps now used by aviators.

HERE AT LAST IS REAL RELIEF FROM EXCESS FAT!

Silph Reducing Chewing Gum—

No longer need you suffer from excess fat. No longer need you be humiliated by sarcastic looks or remarks. No longer need you starve yourself to distraction or tire yourself out with exercises. With Silph Reducing Chewing Gum, the latest and most wonderful discovery ever made, every man, woman and child can today safely, quickly and easily reduce. Silph Reducing Gum is the result of years of scientific study and experiments—it is different from anything ever advised to take off FAT. It is simple, safe, cheap and easy. It is almost like telling you to eat candies to reduce. It is just as pleasant and as harmless.

Silph Reducing Gum is not a drug nor a laxative—it contains juice extract of sea plants known for years to possess wonderful reducing properties but until now it was impossible to obtain sufficient quantities of these plant extracts to supply a public demand. Today a group of scientists have found a way to obtain it and to incorporate it in a delicious, refreshing chewing gum. When mixed with the gastric juices, through the flow of saliva it eliminates fat forming elements in the system—at the same time it is great for stomach or intestinal trouble. The quick and amazing results already obtained with Silph have simply been overwhelming. Silph sells for 50 cents a box, enough for one week, at all good drug stores. Remember that to "CHEW SILPH IS TO BE SYLPH-LIKE," that's New York's latest slogan.

"I am the shadow of my former self," writes Mrs. N——, beautiful Brooklyn girl. "Silph Reducing Gum is wonderful!"

In case your druggist is out of Silph you can get it from the Silph Medical Co., 9 W. 60th St. N., Y. City. Silph sells for 50c. per box or two full weeks' supply, $1.00.

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestents that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

She was twice married, her second husband being William G. Haselden to whom she was married here in 1901. Besides her husband she is survived by a son by her first marriage, Fred Lathrop. RUMOR OF AN ELOPEMENT STIRS STONINGTON BOROUGH

Police of Westerly, Providence, New Bedford and Fall River have been asked to aid in the search for Miss Evangeline Travers and Manuel Matues, both of Stonington, who, officials believed eloped Monday night after a fair held in Borough hall, Stonington, by Pioneer Hook and Ladder company. Friends of the girl last saw her at about midnight in the yard of her home shortly after she had left the fair. Matues also disappeared immediately after the fair.

Although it is not known positively that the man and girl ran away together, investigating officials incline to the belief that such was the case, since they had been very friendly and were seen together in Borough hall.

Matues, formerly of Fall River, had been living in Stonington only a few months. When seen at the fair he wore a light cap, blue suit and khaki shirt. He is about 23. Miss Travers, who is described as 15 or 16 years old, and five feet, two inches in height, had a brown coat with fur collar and cuffs.

LEDYARD CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH HOLDS BI-CENTENNIAL ANNIVERSARY

Two hundred years, the span of the life of the Ledyard Congregational church, were reviewed Wednesday when the church celebrated its bicentennial with exercises in the morning and afternoon that were attended by congregations of between 150 and 200, which included a number of former members of the church who now live in other localities, but had returned for the day for this special occasion.

Three historical addresses, the first by Deacon Billings T. Avery, the second by the present pastor, Rev. Giles F. Goodenough, and the third by a former pastor, Rev. William F. White, now of Trumbull, this state, were included in the morning exercises, which were opened at 10 o'clock with invocation by Rev. A. E. Kinmouth, a former pastor, who still resides in Ledyard.

An excellent New England dinner was served by the Ladies' Aid society in Grange hall where over 200 enjoyed the bountiful provision made by the Ledyard church women.

At the afternoon exercises which opened at 2 o'clock, an interesting address upon The Port of Ledyard—Gales Ferry—was given by Rev. Alden Shaw Bush of that place, and informal greetings were given as follows:

First church, New London, Rev. J. R. Danforth. First church, Groton, Rev. H. W. Hulbert. Our Associate on Church Hill, St. James', Poquetanuck, Rev. T. M. Ockford. The Associated Churches, Rev. C. H. Ricketts, Norwich. Records, Judge B. F. S. Crandall.

Old hymns of the church were sung under the leadership of the choir and brief reminiscences were given by a number of neighbors and old residents.

Ecclesiastical Society History

Billings T. Avery made the first address of the afternoon, speaking upon The North Groton society and preceding his account of the history of the ecclesiastical society with a brief review of the conditions which brought about Puritan domination of religion, government and thought in New England.

In part he said:

When the English came to these parts they found dwelling on the shores of Rhode Island Sound on either side of the river Thames a powerful warlike tribe of Indians known as Pequots. The crimes they committed, the punishment they received from the English which only excited them to other acts of savagery and the war of extermination planned against them which culminated in the battle of Mystic Hill in the spring of 1637 which destroyed this Pequot tribe and left their tribal lands as conquered territory are too well known to be repeated here.

This warfare with the Pequots acquainted the English with this section of Connecticut. A few years later John Winthrop, the son of John Winthrop the governor of Massachusetts, with a few others and with Thomas Peters an ejected Puritan clergyman from Cornwall, Eng. as their minister began a settlement on the west bank of the Pequot river where New London now stands. Their first work was commenced in 1645, only 25 years after the first Puritan settlement. They were soon found by Jonathan Brewster an Indian trader, son of William Brewster, the leader of the Mayflower company. In 1650 Richard Bluman who had been the minister of a church on Cape Ann, Mass., was called to be their minister. He accepted the call and brought with him many of his church members. New London was now fairly settled by Puritans in the orthodox way.

The Pequot lands were given free to all settlers and the settlement grew and spread out to both sides of the river. Much of the land on the east side were given to settlers by grant as early as 1656. Jonathan Brewster soon after coming to New London established a trading post up the river at a place now called Brewsters Neck. Later a survey was taken to determine whether he belonged to the new settlement at Norwich or to New London. His house was found to be south of the line making him a legal resident of New London. I therefore claim Jonathan Brewster, the son of the leader of the first Puritan company, whose wife Susanna was one of the Mayflower passengers to have been the first settler in this society. This north west corner of Ledyard was set off to Preston about 1876.

The numbers on the east side of the river had so increased by 1678 they thought themselves able to support a minister and so petitioned the General Court to be allowed to have preaching on their side of the river, claiming that they could not get to New London to attend the public worship of God on the Lords day without great hazard and trouble having a great ferry of about a mile over besides many miles that many had to travel by land. This petition was not granted through opposition of those on the New London side. Nine years later in 1687 they were ordered that for the future they should have liberty to invite the town minister to preach on their side of the river every third Sabbath during the four most inclement months of the year.

A story has come down from those early days through my family that tells of the distances that some had to travel to attend church at New London. It tells of a company of people from the extreme north part of this society returning from meeting at New London. As they came to the top of the hill known as Avery Hill as they looked across the valley to Rose Hill beyond they saw the house of Thomas Rose on fire. They hastened to the house. Edward Avery whose wife Joannah was the daughter of Thomas Rose, having the swiftest horse arrived at the burning house first but only in time to make one entry and bring out a pewter platter and a gun. The gun is now in my possession with the initials of Thomas Rose deeply carved on the stock. The distance these people traveled on horse back, the only mode of travel in those days, must have been 10 or more miles each way, 20 miles too and from church and a wide river to cross twice. We do not wonder that they continued to petition for the right to establish religious worship and settle a minister on the east side of the river.

Our reflective minds may carry us back to those times, see this Edward Avery and wife Joanna, mounted on their horses joining their near neighbors in their long journey to church with them are Gears, Spicers, Stoddards Allyn, Chapmans, Maynards and Lesters, joining on the road farther down or at the ferry those from the east side, the Morgans, Parker, Gallups, Williams and others, all early settlers in this section.

They cross the mile wide river, probably leaving their horses on the east side of the river and walking from the river to the meeting house. Then listening to a long sermon, perhaps two, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, then retracing their long road home.

In 1702 the inhabitants on the east side were allowed to organize a society and have a minister. In 1704 the east side became the town of Groton including the present towns of Groton and Ledyard. The First Society of Groton built their first meeting house not far from Groton Ferry. Although this shortened the distance the people of the north part had to go and removed the hazzard of crossing the river they were still a long distance from their house of worship, but they continued to attend meetings there for more than 20 years without complaint so far as is known, but in 1724 they asked to be set off from the south part and to become a separate parish. This petition received but little if any notice. They petitioned again in 1725 at the May session of the General Assembly and their petition was received with favor.

I have not a copy of the petition, but the answer of the General Assembly to their petition is this. "Upon the petition of Capt. John Morgan and the rest of the inhabitants of the north part of the town of Groton desiring of this Assembly that they may be a parish by themselves to set up the worship of God there: Resolved by this Assembly that Capt. Timothy Peirce, Capt. Thomas Noyes and Mr. Joseph Bacchus, be a committee, at the charge of the petitioners, to go and make diligent enquiry into the circumstances of said parish and set the bounds thereof and make report of their doings in the premises to this Assembly in October next."

Their report to the General Assembly in October is "Whereas the General Assembly in May last did, upon the petition of Capt. John Morgan and the rest of the petitioners of the north end of Groton, moving to be a society and to set up the worship of God amongst them, appointed us the subscribers to take a view of said town and to inform ourselves as well as we could of its circumstances, and whether they are sufficient for the support of two ministers among them: We have therefore, pursuant to our orders, been and taken a survey of said place and from the best knowledge we could gain, both by our own observation and their information, we are of the opinion that they are of estates sufficient for the ends proposed by the petitions; and further, having heard the argument on both sides respecting a dividing line between them it is our judgment that said line ought to begin at a monument to be erected at the extent of a line drawn from Groton meeting house due north one mile and twenty rods and the dividing line to begin at said monument and to run west and by north to the great river on the west, and from said monument to run east and by south to the extent of the east bounds of said town, which lines shall divide between the south and north society. Joseph Backus, Timothy Pierce, Thomas Noyce, committee."

The report was read, approved and accepted by the Assembly and ordered to be recorded. The north part of Groton by this act became a separate society known as the North Parish or Second Ecclesiastical society.

The first records of the society are lost but there are some facts about its early history that we know. The first meeting of the society was held at the house of Capt. John Morgan Jan. 3 1726. In November of the same year a parish which the inhabitants had determined should be the site of their meeting-house. It was found to be according to Caulkins History of New London "forty or fifty rods from the southwest corner of Capt. John Morgan's great pasture" on land belonging to Samuel Newton from whom it was obtained by exchange for the society training field." The house was raised in 1727. While the house was being built meetings were held in private houses. The houses designated were Capt. John Morgans to the east, William Williams, north, Roberts Allyn and Williams Morgan, west.

The only description we have of this first meeting house is from a historical sermon of Mr. Tuttles. He said: "From what can be guthered from the old society records, it seems, that it must have stood a considerable time before any covering was put upon it. Then, whatever was done to it was done at intervals. So long as it stood, during 116 years it was never completely finished. It was in shape like many of the meeting houses of former days with the main door on the front side, with the pulpit opposite to it on the other side of the house, and with a door at each end, and having nothing in the form of either porch or steeple. The ground floor was sold to individuals and they erected pews for their own accommodation and to be held as their property. During three successive pastorates there was no inside plastering, except on the right and left of the pulpit; and it was open above to the ridge. The timbers of the house, above the ground floor might all be seen, and they were of huge dimensions. So it remained till after my settlement. About the year 1790 the body of the house outside was repaired. After my settlement it underwent in 1814 a more extensive repair than it ever had before; but not a complete one. By 1776 other religious societies had gained an influence in the parish and had drawn many from the Congregational church which kept together for a time but soon became extinct." The house became deserted except as Mr. Tuttle has said by cattle. The Ecclesiastical society may not have held its annual meeting or made any great efforts to secure a minister for there was a lack of religious interest and funds. But the society existed and held its property. After the depressing effect of the Revolutionary war were passed and the Separatist church had disappeared for the want of a strong leader and the Episcopal church had moved away. An effort was made to secure a minister. In 1810 in conjunction with the First Church in Groton (which had also been without a pastor for some years) Timothy Tuttle was engaged to preach to the two churches. One Sabbath in one church, the next in

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Oct. 14.—A New York-to-Boston bus, of the Colonial Line, bound from Westerly to Providence, about 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon figured in a collision with a truck of Peter L. Priore, of Westerly, when both were proceeding along High street. It was reported to the police that the truck was about to turn into Pierce street when the cars came together with such force that the forward right door of the bus was smashed in and the bus went off the road onto the Dotolo property corner of Pierce and High streets. The forward mudguards of both automobiles were broken. Of the passengers in the bus the only one injured was Mrs. Elizabeth Kane, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was attended by Dr. J. GIVES DECISION IN FORECLOSURE IN LEBANON

Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court Wednesday handed down a decision in the foreclosure suit of Progressive Finance & Realty Co., Inc., of New Haven against Morris W. Lebanon, in which two New Haven banks and several Colchester business men were named as party defendants. The note and mortgage in the case cover on the so-called Daniel Abell place of about 60 acres and another tract of about 30 acres in Lebanon.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Brown says:

In this action in which the plaintiff seeks a foreclosure of its mortgage and certain of the defendants upon their cross complaints ask for the foreclosure of their claimed mechanics' liens upon the property, under the pleadings and the facts stipulated in open court by counsel for the parties, but four controverted issues are presented to the court for determination; to wit: 1. Has the defendant Meech & Stoddard, Inc., a valid mechanics' lien upon the property? 2. If so, what is the amount thereof? 3. Has the defendant, John J. Shea, a valid mechanics' lien upon the property? 4. If either or both of such liens are valid, what is the order of priority of the valid encumbrances upon the property?

It is my conclusion upon all the evidence that Meech & Stoddard, Inc., has a valid first lien upon the property for its claim which with interest to date amounts to $14,613.31; and similarly John J. Shea a valid second lien upon the property for $2,826.81; the Progressive Finance and Realty Co., Inc., a valid third lien for $11,260.85; the Broadway Bank and Trust Co., a valid fourth lien for $15,951.92; P. Cutler, Inc., a valid fifth lien for $2,765, and the Merchants bank a valid sixth lien for $15,207.56.

Judgment may be entered upon the defendant Meech & Stoddard, Inc.'s, cross complaint for a foreclosure by sale.

Since, as was suggested by counsel at the close of the arguments, an early sale will apparently be for the benefit of all parties concerned, a decree may be prepared providing for such sale to be had within three weeks. If counsel can agree promptly as to the precise time and other necessary details with relation thereto, the court will be pleased to incorporate such suggestions in the decree. Otherwise the court will order the decree entered determining the matters as mey be necessary. No costs are taxed.

GILPATRICK GREETS BROTHER AT ATLANTA PRISON

"My, but you are looking good," was the greeting of G. Harold Gilpatric, former treasurer of Connecticut, now serving a 15 years' sentence in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., for embezzlements which led to the failure of the First National bank of Putnam, Conn., of which he was treasurer, when he greeted his brother, F. R. Gilpatric, of New Britain, Conn., at the prison on the holiday.

The former banker is entirely blind as the result of an attempt to commit suicide just before national bank examiners exposed his defalcations from the Putnam bank, and his brother, struggling to keep back the tears which filled his eyes, was unable to reply for some moments.

Gilpatrick is one of the most cheerful inmates of the federal prison and is said to be a model prisoner. He does little except sit in a ward in the prison hospital, hoping, according to the doctors who attend him, that some day he may be able to see again. Doctors say this is impossible as the bullet which he fired into his head cut the optic nerve.

RAIN CAUSES POSTPONEMENT OF FINAL GAME OF THE WORLD'S SERIES STRUGGLE

Deluge Soaks Playing Field an Hour Before Game Time and Contest is Called Off—Aldridge and Johnson Slated to Go to the Mound in Final Battle—Rest Will Prove Beneficial to Both Hurlers—Diamond May Not Be Fit to Play on Today.

PITTSBURGH, Penna., Oct. 14 (AP)—Rain blocked the world's series program for the second time today when a heavy downpour, starting about an hour before the seventh and deciding game was scheduled at Forbes field, drenched the ball park and forced a postponement.

The deluge not only disappointed close to 50,000 fans, the largest crowd of the series, but continued steadily tonight with prospects that it would even be impossible to resume play tomorrow.

The weather man's forecast was for rain throughout the night and morning, with a chance of clearing in the afternoon. Even so it would be doubtful whether the diamond would be in playing condition, although tarpaulins were spread over the infield to keep as much of the field as possible from becoming a quagmire.

The delay came unexpectedly, in spite of the overcast skies and murky atmosphere of the day, but the accompanying extra day of rest was hailed as a benefit by followers of both clubs after the first feeling of disappointment had subsided.

Johnson vs. Aldridge in Final

The benefit rests chiefly among the pitching aces of the rival staffs, Walter Johnson and Victor Aldridge, who might were picked definitely by managers Bill McKechnie and Bucky Harris for the final battle in which the title now held by Washington and the aspirations entertained by Pittsburgh both will be in the balance.

These two, each victorious twice so far and standing head and shoulders above all swirling rivals, were slated to have had it out in the final struggle today in spite of the short rest they have had. Johnson, as a matter of fact, who also has been handicapped by a "Charley Horse" in his right leg, was keenly disappointed by the postponement, feeling that he was "right" for the day, but tomorrow, if the deciding game goes on, the Big Train will be able to take the hill with the benefit of three full days of rest since his performance last Sunday, when he shanked the Pirates.

This was as much rest as Johnson had between his first and second games, should been sufficient to give him the needed stamina for a crucial tussle.

Morrison Was to Start Game

A good deal of mystery shrouded Pittsburgh's pitching choice today, with the prevailing opinion that "Jughandle Johnny" Morison was to start, stick as long as he was effective and then give way to Aldridge, who pitched his last victory only on Monday.

Aldridge, however, is the most rugged member of the Pirate staff and his mates are confident that with two day's rest he will be in top condition to make his bid for a third triumph tomorrow.

McKechnie and Harris both agreed that any advantages to be gained by the postponement were about equally divided and both were equally confident that they will pull out the decisive victory.

"The Senators are just as much afraid of Aldridge as we are of Johnson," said McKechnie, "and Vic will be ready to go out at top speed tomorrow. I think he would have done it today if we called on him but the additional day of rest will give him just what he needs."

Meadows May Pitch Today

At the same time, McKechnie intimated that he might be able to count tomorrow, if necessary, on Lee Meadows, bespectacled veteran whose arm went bad after the first game and necessitated a slight operation to straighten out the muscles.

Meadows has recovered rapidly, McKechnie said, and may be in condition to pitch effectively with another day's rest, Lee has been warming up regularly the last two days. If Aldridge is not able to shoulder the entire final burden, Meadows may get back into the fray.

Harris, Johnson and Clark Griffith, Washington president, mapped out their strategy at a council of war in the clubhouse and it was a disappointment to them to have their plans put off. The players as a whole took the postponement calmy though there was evidence of the strain that is upon both teams and their desire to reach a conclusion as quickly as possible.

Record Crowd Present

Except for the weather, the setting for the final game would have been ideal today, with an apparent record crowd on hand and both teams prepared to put their strongest foremen into the fray, each seeking the glory [illegible] series victories that [illegible] only four men—[illegible]chewson, Stanley Coveleskie [illegible].

Rain Decides Issue

The rain started to dampen the colorful picture, however, nearly an hour before game time. It increased in intensity until 2 o'clock, scheduled starting time, it was obvious that there would be no letup and that the field was unplayable, even so, however, Commissioner Landis, in whose hands the final decision rested, delayed the definite announcement of postponement for another half hour, pointing out that calling it off meant hardship to probably 15,000 fans from out of town and widespread inconvenience.

Spectators Are Drenched

Thousands were still outside the park, standing in the drenching rain to hear the commissioner's decision, while those inside the field shifted, yelled and grew restless during the delay. Thousands in the extended and uncovered portions of the grandstand as well as those in the bleachers, were thoroughly soaked and disgruntled, although there was a welcome bit of comedy relief from the Washington comedians, Nick Altrock and Al Schacht.

Everything off for the day, Nick Altrock and Al Schacht came out in high rubber boots and put over a fishing and diving stunt on the big tarpaulin which was filled with pools of water. Nick fell overboard in a miniature lake and was rescued by Al, which brought the only laugh of a dismal and sodden afternoon.

Old Barney Johnson cocked an eye out of the Senators dugout twenty minutes before game time and figured it was all off for the day. He did not even shed his sweater and remained in seclusion on the visitors bench. Neither Johnson or any of the Pirate pitchers came out to warm up and everyone was still guessing tonight who could have faced the invaders had there been a game.

The local scribes told the visiting newspapermen that when it rains here it is for three days this time of year. There was a hurried telegraphing home for money, all of which brought no gloom to the bonfires. The world's series contests were held up for about a week in Philadelphia in 1911 by rainy weather.

Joe Judge hopes to get himself a few hits in the final game to make a respectable showing in the composite box score. Judge has not been getting many blows in the present fracas and has been sitting away below form.

The four umpires made two trips from their quarters to the box of Judge Landis before the game was finally called off. The last trip of the arbiters was nearly a swim.

With the extra day or rest the last game should be a battle of pitchers—Johnson and Aldridge. Not much of a cheering prospect for either club since they have both lost two games to these hurlers.

The Pirates swung a mean mace in batting practice and the crowd looked forward to Johnson being beaten to the proverbial pulp. The Senators also did some long distance clouting, Goslin planting a few in the lower right field stand just to remind the home folks that there was a Goose still to be cooked. Rain spoiled the desired carnage.

Bill McKechnie, Fred Clarke and Chick Fraser, constituting the Pirates board of strategy, have catalogued all the weaknesses of the Washington players but were busy guessing today on a pitcher to follow the catalogue. The postponement solved that question and it will be Aldridge tomorrow.

Everyone was surprised by the number of women who sat in the uncovered stands risking their finery and fall hats in the bad weather. With the coming of rain newspapers were the popular headgear.

"GUS" SCHMELZ, FORMER BASEBALL MANAGER, DIED

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 14—(A. P.)—"Gus" Schmelz, who was playing big league baseball when John A. Heydler, president of the National league, was an itinerant umpire and Connie Mack was leading the Pittsburgh Pirates, died here today.

Gustavus P. Schmelz was seventy five years of age. His professional baseball career, begun in 1884 and ended in 1897, was rich in picturesque incidents of the national pastime.

There was the story of how "Johnny" Heydler broke into the professional game, through the instrumentality of Schmelz. The latter was manager of the Washington Nationals, who were jousting in as important series with Connie Mack's Pirates. When the teams were ready to take the field in the deciding game it was found that there was no umpire.

The stands were packed and spectators were beginning to get markedly and vocally impatient. Finally Manager Schmelz yelled from the field: "Hey, Johnny Heydler come down here."

Young Heydler was a government printer and did a bit of amateur umpiring on the side. He got $12, for that job.

Schmelz managed the Columbus American association team in 1884; in 1885, he was manager of the St. Louis Nationals and for the next three years, he piloted the Cincinnati American association team. He was the head of the Cleveland Nationals in 1890. He went with the Washington Nationals in 1894.

RUETHER'S CHILD CRITICALLY ILL IN SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 14—(A. P.)—One of life's tragedies, linked with the playing of the world's series is being enacted here this week as Washington and Pittsburgh struggled in the east for baseball supremacy, Ruth Naomi, 9 year old daughter of Walter Ruether, Washington pitcher, is in a hospital here critically ill.

Although suffering from pneumonia the little girl had one great thought in mind—the world series. What was the score? Was her father pitching? It was the first time in eight years that Ruth had not attended baseball's annual classic with her father.

Every day, however, has come a telephone call from Washington or Pittsburgh to St. Mary's hospital, and a voice has asked for the latest words from the bedside of the child.

Each day brings a bouquet of flowers bearing the names of many of baseball's greatest players. But better still, each day brings a message of love and affection from a father whose thoughts, if not his person, are in San Francisco.

HOOPER HAS ASKED FOR HIS UNCONDITIONAL RELEASE

CHICAGO, Oct. 14—(A. P.)—Harry Hooper, star outfielder with the Chicago White Sox, said today that he had asked for his unconditional release and intended seeking a managerial berth before the opening of the 1926 season.

Hooper who has been in the major leagues for seventeen years, came to the White Sox from Boston in 1921 when owner Charles Comiskey started re-building the club. Hooper, together with Tris Speaker and Duffy Lewis, composed one of the greatest outfields when they were members of the Red Sox.

Michelson Enters Nat. Race

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Albert (Whitney) Michelson of Port Chester, N. Y., who within the last month has won the fifteen-mile national championship and a marathon event of about 26 miles from New York to his home city, today filed an entry for the national 10-mile title race to be held here on October 25.

WORLD'S SERIES BRIEFS

Rain not only erased the world's series game off the schedule but washed nearly 50,000 spectators right out of Forbes field into the arms of a fleet of taxicabs which cleaned up a young fortune for their owners. Some folks were nearly two hours getting away from the ball yard.

Speculators did heavy business outside of Forbes Field after the game had been declared off, buying rain checks from those who could not remain in town to see tomorrow's contest.

Just when everyone in the uncovered places was soaked to the skin and the umpires were about the declare

DARTMOUTH WILL PLAY YALE NEXT YEAR

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 14—(A. P.)—Dartmouth will be returned to the Yale football schedule in 1926, it was announced tonight by the Yale Athletic association in giving out the schedule of games for next year. The University of Pennsylvania, who plays in New Haven next Saturday, does not appear on next year's schedule.

The schedule as announced follows: October 2, open; 9, University of Georgia; 16, Dartmouth; 23, Brown; 30, West Point; November 6, Maryland; 13, Princeton at Princeton; 20, Harvard. Middlebury, which opened this year's schedule, does not appear on next year's list.

The Yale athletic association issued this statement:

"Dartmouth has again accepted Yale's invitation to play the mid-October game in New Haven, a 1924 football relations with Dartmouth were resumed after a lapse of several years and a game, resulting in a 14 to 14 tie, was one of the most interesting and colorful ever played in the Yale bowl. This season, because of the fact that Dartmouth had scheduled three out of town games, faculty permission for a game with Yale was denied, but the Dartmouth authorities agreed to allow the team to fill a place on Yale's schedule in 1926. The date, corresponding to one on which Dartmouth appeared in the bowl in 1924, was accordingly agreed upon.

"The announcement of the selection of the team to open Yale's 1926 schedule on October 2, will be made soon. So far, negotiations with other colleges have been unsuccessful, due to the fact that these colleges were unable to rearrange schedules to fit in with this date.

"The athletic association is glad to announce the acceptance of a date by the University of Georgia. The splendid showing of this team during the past seasons has won them a host of admirers in this section."

AGGIE FRESHMEN HAVE TWO HARD GAMES AHEAD

STORRS, Oct. 13.—The Connecticut Aggie Freshman eleven, which scheduled to play the Tufts freshman team at Storrs on Friday, will also stack up against the Wesleyan Frosh eleven the following Monday, according to the announcement of Freshman Coach Alexander.

Arranged at the request of the Wesleyan athletic authorities, the contest will be staged on Andrus Field at Middletown. It will mark the first athletic competition between the freshman teams of the two institutions, and to a certain extent will give a line on prospective varsity football material of the two colleges.

Following the initial game with Kent School last Saturday, which ended a 0-0 score, Coach Alexander has worked towards correcting the defects in play which cropped out in the contest. With the Tufts yearlings due here Friday afternoon, Alexander has been driving his men in order to have them ready for what shapes up to be another hard fought struggle.

With only ten days in which to prepare for the game, the yearlings did well to hold the veteran Kent eleven to a no score game, and Coach Alexander of his team. He has shifted his lineup, was not displeased with the showing however, and there will be a few changes when the freshman line up against Tufts.

Brown, colored youth from Amherst, Mass., has been shifted from end to halfback. Although only weighing 140 pounds, his tackling against Kent was a feature of the game, and he will be used to back up the line on defense. His place in the line will be taken by Schildgren, formerly with Naugatuck High, who could not play last week because of a bad knee. Usher of Willimantic will probably hold down the other wing berth.

Sayers, Hartford boy, will probably start at tackle, as he is fully recovered from his injury now. He will be acting captain. Crombie former Suffield athlete will hold down the other tackle berth.

Two Norwich boys, McNamara and Gilman, will get the call for the guard berths. Shoved into the fray when Kent was ripping through the center of the Connecticut line, they effectively stopped further advances, and they have undoubtedly won regular berths if they can continue with the same brand of play. Callahan of Revere, Mass., who played a good game at center will start in the same position again.

Knaut, former New Haven High star will call signals. He showed good judgement in the selection of his plays in the first game. Teamed up with Brown at halfback will be Dixon of New Haven, who filled the berth very well against Kent. Sahagian, who starred against Kent will play fullback.

LOCAL SENTIMENT IS STRONG FOR JOHNSON

Washington, with Johnson pitching, loomed as the favorite with the older fans in yesterday's betting on the game. The younger generation stuck firmly with the fighting Pirates and the youth has, for the greater part, been with the Pittsburgh club. Yesterday's postponement came as a welcome relief for the Washington team as it gave Johnson one more day in which to rest before the final battle. It was just as beneficial to the Pirate cause as it now gives Vic Aldridge a chance to get back into the game.

It was not really baseball judgment that caused local fans to back Washington to win yesterday's game but it was purely for sentimental reasons. Those who picked Washington to win the final game freely admitted that the chances that Johnson would be able to perform as well as in the other games, were very slim but yet they were willing to let sentiment overrule good judgment. Today it is a different story.

TO MEGAPHONE SERIES PLAY AT BULLETIN OFFICE

The play in the world's series games both at Pittsburgh and Washington will be megaphoned from The Bulletin office window every day. The games will be given to the fans play by play as it comes from a direct wire to the playing field.

Play will start at 2 o'clock, eastern standard time.

TWO DRIVERS FINED ON CLOSING DAY OF RACES AT STAFFORD FAIR

(Special to the Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Oct. 15—Extra heat racing and a general squabble among the drivers in the 2.17 race featured the closing day of the racing at the Stafford fair here this afternoon. Two of the drivers in the 2.17 pace were fined and one of the two was suspended for three months.

Driver Wheeler, who was piloting Joe Dillon was accused of pulling his horse and letting Judge Sale win in the third heat. Wheeler was removed from his mount and fined $50, Fleming driving the horse to a win in the next three heats. After the performance in the third heat Andrew Crowe driving Belleworthy for Noman Collison of Bridgeville, Del., withdrew his horse without permission and was fined $50 and suspended for three months. The first and fourth money went to the winner.

Gold Quartz after placing far behind the leaders in the first three heats stepped out and won the next three with little trouble. The best race of the afternoon was the 2.17 trot which went to Prodigal Guy. Fry up. The Fry horse placed second in the first two heats, but came back strong in the last three heats. The summary:

NUTMEGS TO PLAY SUNDAY AT SACHEM FIELD

Football enthusiasts who visit Sachem field Sunday afternoon to witness the game between the Jewett City Speedboys and the Norwich Nutmegs will undoubtedly see one of the hardest fought battles that has ever been playing in this section of the state. From present indications Sunday's game should be a thriller as the Nutmegs are going at top speed having piled up large scores in their three games to date, while their opponents have been unable to score against them. On the other hand the Speedboys, getting off to a poor start, losing by the narrow margin of a 6 to 0 score last Sunday to the Greeneville Tigers, putting up a game and plucky fight are out to even up matters by grabbing a win from the Nutmegs.

The Jewett City aggregation is putting in much practice in preparation for Sunday's game so as to be in the pink of condition when they enter the fray. The Nutmegs have also drilled hard and faithfully during the past two weeks and should not be far behind their opponents in fitness.

Friday night will witness the final Nutmeg practice in preparation for the game. At that time the team will be given a long signal drill, Coaches Parkhurst and MacLaren have both refused to announce their lineup before Saturday morning. However the team that will represent the Nutmegs will probably be selected from among the following players: Ends, Vin Carlin Capt. F. McGrath, Ludlow, Harris, Chase and Kelly; tackles, Hyatt, Pallocha, Jones, Pekowski, and Boldrighine; guards, Grover, Hagberg, Butts and E. Fidell; center, Sullivan and Sudinsky; quarterbacks, MacLaren, and Burpee; halfbacks, Williams, C. McGrath and Conerfry; fullbacks, Herberts and D. Blinderman.

The management of the Nutmegs has spent considerable time and trouble in putting Sachem field into perfect condition. The manager of the Nutmegs has again secured the services of Ed Healy, Tommy Winters, Pete Labenski and Gib Kampf to handle the game. These four have given the utmost satisfaction in their decisions during the past three games to players and fans alike.

The Nutmegs are putting on some fast games which have so far been well attended. It is expected that a larger crowd than usual will attend the game Sunday and preparations have been made accordingly.

McBurney Again

Sporting Editor:

In your paper, the Norwich Bulletin, my attention was drawn to an article, supposed to be written by Mgr. Oney of the St. Joseph's. He there in declared, that the Sachems did not have their team on the Duwell Field, and that Umpire Gross was not upon the grounds last Sunday. He furthur states that the Sachem B. B. club, is yellow, and also its manager. Well we cannot help, what he thinks but we know that the public in general knows better, and of all the games, that we played, in the last season, the clubs and the spectators, gave us a great ovation, for the way that we took decisions and played the game, without a word of protest. I think, in every game played upon the Duwell Field during the twi-league season, Mgr. Oney was quite a conspicious figure with his hollering and protesting nearly every decision made. And as for us being yellow, I don't know what Mgr. Oney means.

He showed his true colors Sunday, when he sent a single man over to the Duwell Field to see what kind of a team we had, and when this fellow made his report, Mgr. Oney must have thought it the better part of valor to take his team and go see a ball game, than to show what kind of a game they play upon a field, against a real ball team. Yes! we have to admit Mgr. Oney plays a good game of baseball, (now dont mistake me) I mean through the sporting columns of the Bulletin, but when it is to be played upon a diamond, well you know, just how it is, he is the yellowest of all yellow there is. And I furthur wish to state, I had eleven men on the Duwell Field, at 2.15 P. M. and that we forget more about the game of baseball, than Mgr. Oney, ever will know.

Yours in sports,
J. E. BURNEY,
Mgr. S. B. B. C.

Football Player Breaks Neck

URBANA, Ills., Oct. 14, (AP)—Little hope for recovery is entertained tonight for James E. Whitfield of Rock Island, Ills., candidate for the freshman football team at the University of Illinois, who this afternoon suffered a broken neck in practice.

AGGIE VARSITY PERFECTS ATTACK AGAINST YEARLING

STORRS, Oct. 14.—The Connecticut Aggie varsity scrimmaged the yearling team here this afternoon, when Coach Dole had his team run through the plays that will probably be used against Massachusetts Aggies here next Saturday.

With Schofield calling signals, the varsity made substantial gains through the yearling forward wall almost at will. Many forward passes were used, and the varsity gained much ground over this route.

Eddy, who is still bothered with an ankle injury was not allowed to take part in the scrimmage.

Massachusetts Aggies will bring mank veterans when they come to Storrs on Saturday, according to reports received from Amherst today. Eight of the eleven that will start against Connecticut played against the Storrs team which last year defeated M. A. C. 12-10 at Amherst. They are Gustafson, Sullivan, Moberg and Hillyard in the backfield, and Captain Jones, Gavin, Thurlow and Coubig in the line. With the other positions filled by capable performers, and backed by a wealth of strong reserve material, the Bay Staters will bring to Storrs a team that ranks among the top in the small colleges of New England. In Captain Jones, who plays right end, the Massachusetts farmers have one of the best place kickers in eastern collegiate ranks, and his ability in this respect may play an important part in Saturday's contest.

Two games have been played by the Bay Staters to date, both of which resulted in victories. Opening with Bates at Lewiston, Me., the charges of "Kid" Gore romped to an easy 19-0 victory, and one week lated they downed Norwich University at Amherst by the same count. A crashing offff tackle play coupled with powerful drives through the center of the line has been the main stock in trade of the Massachusetts aggregation. "Kid" Gore, it will be remembered, is the man who last year raised the cry against the forward pass shortly after the curtain was rung down on the 1924 season. He contended football would degenerate into a game of "outdoor basketball," in which the more desirable features of play would be missing. He is a strong advocate of the rushing game, and the team he is bringing here Saturday is reputed to have an exceptionally powerful running attack. This being true, the game may furnish an interesting contrast between two extremes of play, as Coach Dole is as strong for the forward pass as Gore is for the running type of play. Viewed from any angle, the game at Storrs next Saturday shapes up as one of the most attractive among the smaller New England colleges for next Saturday.

HARTFORD HERRUPS PLAY AT JEWETT CITY SUNDAY

The Ashland A. A. will play their last game of the season against the fast Herrups of Hartford on Sunday. The Ashland team has proven to be one of the premier clubs in this part of the state. Playing against some of the leading semi-pro clubs in southern New England they have given a mighty good account of themselves.

Against the Herrups Sunday Manager Liberty will start Stanley, a young righthander, who has been with the local club for the last two months. This lad has pitched brilliant ball this summer and looks like a comer. He is a well built youth with a nice fast ball and good hooks and should give a good account of himself against the Capitol city aggregation Sunday.

"Spike" Liberty Ashland's mainstay has had a wonderful year, in fact, one of the best in his career as a pitcher. Fans well remember "Spike" as the leading twirler in this section until he threw his arm out against the Norwich K. of C. in 1921.

From that time he didn't pitch much ball till this summer. Taking good care of his arm he came back strong this summer, pitching against faster clubs than any other pitcher in this territory. He has many victories to his credit. He will be held in reserve in case Stanley should go bad.

Lineup for both clubs will be announced in Saturday's Bulletin.

STONE GETS UNPOPULAR VERDICT OVER PAL REED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 14.—Jack Stone, local middleweight, defeated Pal Reed of Boston in the star ten-round bout in the opening show of the boxing season at the Lyceum theatre here tonight. The bout went the limit with Referee "Jiggers" McCarthy of New Haven, rendering the decision in favor of Stone. The decision was greeted with jeers. Reed forced the fight from the beginning and was winning by a wide margin up to the sixth round. Stone staged a comeback with a left jab and a right cross to the jaw mixed with a right uppercut to the jaw and carried the final round.

In the semi-final bout scheduled for eight rounds between Johnny Saxon, Bridgeport welterweight, and Soldier Byron, of Newark, Byron was knocked out in the fourth round when Saxon floored him with a terrific crash to the stomach.

Phil Jackson of Milwaukee knocked out Young Hicks of New London, who substituted for Baltimore Joe Gans, in the second round of a scheduled six-round bout.

In the preliminary Willy Mack, Stamford featherweight, was awarded the verdict over Joe King of New York in six rounds.

Joe Humphrey, well-known New York announcer, officiated in that capacity.

DEMPSEY'S OBJECTIONS WILL BEAR NO WEIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—(AP)—Objection of Jack Dempsey to the proposed heavyweight fight at Newark, N. J., between Harry Wills and Floyd Johnson on October 26, will not alter the arrangements made yesterday, the negro boxer's manager, Paddy Mullins, announced today.

Although the heavyweight champion claims he understood that Wills would not engage in any bouts before their anticipated title battle next year, Mullins said that Floyd Fitzsimmons, who signed Dempsey and Wills, knew the latter intended to box this month for the national sportmen's club of Newark.

He said he would so write Dempsey. Wills, meanwhile, will proceed to get in shape for Johnson, he added.

RUMORS CURRENT OF BIG BASEBALL TRADE

CINCINNATI, Oct. 14.—(AP)—The sport writer of the Cincinnati Times Star, who is in Pittsburgh attending the world series, says rumors of a tremendous trade which will involve the Cincinnati Nationals filled the air at baseball headquarters in Pittsburgh today. He said the reports have it that Luque and Hargrave will be traded to New York for Snyder, Meusel and Terry. It was also reported that "Rabbit" Maranville will be with the Reds next season.

IT STOPPED RAINING IN PITTSBURGH AT MIDNIGHT

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—Whether or not the seventh and deciding game of the world's series, postponed today will be played tomorrow is entirely up to the weather man. Early forecasts showed the chances none too good, but late tonight a report said that rain might be expected in the morning with fair weather in the afternoon. Rains were reported south and west of Pittsburgh by the local weather bureau, but it was not raining here at midnight. The weather forecast from Washington was about the same as the report sent out by the local bureau.

ROCKNE SAYS NOTRE DAME WILL BE BEATEN BY ARMY

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—(A. P.)—Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's football coach, went on record today to the effect that the Army eleven would defeat Notre Dame in their game at New York next Saturday.

"Notre Dame will be beaten by the Army," Rockne said. "But the defeat will do us good. Our team has brains and ability, but it needs a lot of experience. I understood that the Army has the best team since the war."

Challenge to East Ends

Sporting Editor:

Although the world's series is almost over and the baseball season of 1925 is about to close there arises some doubt in our minds as to whether the East Ends are a better team than we are. In the last meeting of these two teams it will be remembered that Hank Morii forfeited the game to the East Ends in the fourth inning with the score 5 to 3 in their favor. Now we would like to play the East Ends Sunday, Oct. 18, on Duwel field with the same lineup as before. We will play on a winner-take-all or a 60-40 basis. If Manager Peduce wishes to play us he can answer through this paper as soon as possible. Yours in Sport,

Central Baseball Club.

Light Practice For Academy

The academy football squad put in a light practice Wednesday afternoon. The principal work that Coach Whitney gave them were signal drills and a long backfield practice. The team has advanced rapidly in the last week or ten days and should make Westerly travel to emerge the victor in Friday's contest at Westerly.

Owing to the early season cold weather the squad has been forced to transfer their dressing rooms from the old club house to the basement in Slater Memorial.

Fidel La Barba, the new world's flyweight champion, is a native of New York city, although he has done all his fighting on the Pacific coast. A most remarkable feature of La Barba's record is that he won the title only ten months after he had made his first professional appearance in the ring.

Football, like most other sports, has seen some notable comebacks. One of the most remarkable of these was in the season of 1916, when Yale was badly beaten by Brown in a game that Yale really wanted to win. But two weeks later the Elis came back and defeated Princeton 10 to 0, and then downed Harvard for the first time since 1909.

WESTERLY

The seventh day for trial of cases before Associate Justice Antonio A. Capotosto in the Westerly calendar of the September term of superior court for Washington county, was begun this (Wednesday) morning in the county court house on Union street.

The jury had reported at 5.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, when Foreman Charles H. Cushman informed Judge Capotosto that the jury impanelled to try as one the four automobile damage cases vs. Michael Donovan of New York, were hopelessly deadlocked and could not agree on a verdict. The jurymen had filed into the courtroom twice for instruction before they were discharged by the judge from further consideration of the case.

A third automobile damage case for the session was set down for trial, that of William F. Totten vs. Lawrence R. Maine. This damage case grew out of an automobile collision near the Wellstown bridge in the town of Hopkinton.

Trial of the case was taken up at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning when the jury was drawn as follows:

Ira H. Dickens, mill operative, North Kingston; George W. Holgate, state road, North Kingston; Ernest W. Crowther, spinner, Westerly; George W. Jordan, painter, Hopkinton; Walter H. Green= weaver, Westerly; Walter E. Palmer, laborer, Hopkinton; Arthur E. Trotman, insurance agent of Westerly as seventh juryman, when it was stated that he had been excused for several days; Alexander W. Lewis, farmer, Hopkinton; Stephen B. Wells, farmer, Richmond; Edwin A. Lillibridge, Jr., laborer, Hopkinton; Arthur E. Trotman, insurance rer, North Kingston; John H. Fowkes, lace weaver, Richmond; and Carlos B. Hamilton, farmer, North Kingston. Stephen B. Wells of Richmond was excused and William C. Tourtee, store manager of Westerly was named in his place. George W. Holgate was named foreman.

Attorney Clarence E. Roche, for the plaintiff stated that the accident occurred about 11 o'clock at night, July 29, 1924 on the road leading from Hope Valley to Westerly. Attorney John F. Gallagher, for the defendant, asked that the jury be permitted to view the wrecked automobile of Mr. Totten which was at a garage on Main street. Attorney Roche objected, saying although the auto had nothing done to it since the time of the accident, it had been exposed to the elements and could no therefore be said to be in the same condition as it was just after the collision with the car operated by Mr. Maine. Judge Capotosto ruled that the case could proceed and if it became material for a view by the jury, it could be taken later.

Continuing, Attorney Roche, said the collision occurred on a public highway 100 feet south of the Wellstown bridge, in the town of Hopkinton. Mr. Totten with three others was proceeding from Hope Valley to Westerly in his 7-passenger Studebaker touring car and had just crossed the bridge when the lights of the Ford roadster with truck body was seen approaching towards Hope Valley. The truck in a zig-zag course was reported to have crossed to the left center of the highway, sticking the touring car near the forward hub cap. It tore off the side of the Totten car a 1918 model, valued at $275 to $300, making it worth practically nothing. He said it would be shown that Maine was intoxicated at the time and that a jug of cider was found under the Ford car. With Mr. Maine was Ernest York, who was thrown out of the auto and who died a week later at a hospital in New London.

William F. Totten, the plaintiff testified that on the night of the automobile collision he was returning to Westerly from Hope Valley where he operated a concession at a carnival being held there. He was accompanied by Mario A. DeFanti, Timothy Deady and Manager Stinson of the carnival. At about 11 o'clock after the Wellstown bridge had been crossed a distance of 150 feet, the Ford car driven was observed zig-zagging toward them going at a rate of from 35 to 40 miles per hour. Witness was driving his car at from 12 to 16 miles per hour, and just before the crash pulled off the road so that his wheel was only six inches on the metal, had set his brakes and was almost still. His car had its left front wheel broken, broken spring, transmission and rear end broken frame sprung and tortion rod broken. Mr. Stinson was thrown out and 22 paces ahead of the Maine auto York was unconscious in the roadway, where he had been thrown.

Dr. Warden of Ashaway and Constable Brown of Hopkinton were called. In the presence of all the members of his party, Mr. Totten testified, Dr. Warden pronounced Main, "Drunk, good and drunk!"

John Galin, a proprietor of the former Cafe Dubreile and Galin, in Westerly, followed the sale of which he went to Europe for a visit in France and Italy, sailed from Genoa, Italy, Saturday, Oct. 10th on the Transatlantica-Italiano line steamship Lenardo da Vinci, due to arrive in New York about Oct. 25th. After a pleasant visit, Mr. Galin was taken seriously ill just previous to his intended sailing for America, but has recovered.

Babcock, a former Grand Marton of Rhode Island Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, left Westerly Wednesday morning for East Providence, wh re the thirtieth annual session of the R. I. Girl Married to Dead Man

Mrs. Franz Heirach, who married her husband by proxy in Vienna, was in reality married to a dead man when the ceremony was performed it has been discovered. Heiach was in a Siberian prison at the time of the ceremony, a friend of the prisoner acting as the proxy when she desired to have the ceremony performed. It was later learned that the bridegroom had in reality died several months before the marriage was performed and as the girl was sincere in the ceremony and had no knowledge of her bethrothed's death at the time, the Austrian government is trying to find a way legally to undo the ceremony.

Protects His 300 Children

Under the Mohammedan law a man is legally responsible for his children regardless of wether they are born in or out of wedlock. He seldom, if ever evades this responsibility, which is sometimes a heavy one. Nasreddin Shah, who ruled Persia during the middle of the nineteenth century, was reputed to have had 300 children, every one of whom he either successfully married off or provided jobs for.

It is difficult to find a man who is willing to hold the ladder of success while you ascend it.

WHY PHYSICIANS RECOMMEND SANGRINA TO FAT PEOPLE

"If I had not carefully analyzed, tested and seen my own sister reduce and improve her health with 'SAN-GRI-NA,'" says Dr. McAlpine, "I would not be recommending it to my patients to-day."

Dr. Jacoby writes: "My wife has about finished the 'SAN-GRI-NA' you sent her, and I wish you could see the wonderful change in her appearance. She never felt better in all her life."

"I have used 'SAN-GRI-NA' for my wife," says Dr. Harris, "and now recommend it to my fat patients."

"I recommended 'SAN-GRI-NA' to my mother," says Dr. Narbonne, because I knew, after working at the formula for years, it was absolutely harmless to the health and positive in results. It is the only way I know of to a good figure and perfect health."

REDUCES 63 POUNDS

"I weighed 200 pounds," writes Mrs. M. D. Pasquale, of Worcester, "and lost 63 pounds. . . . I would like to have another box of 'SAN-GRI-NA.'"

Up to now physicians have rarely advised anything to reduce outside of diets or exercises (both tiresome and inconvenient) because they knew of nothing HARMLESS and EFFECTIVE, but to-day in recommending "SAN-GRI-NA" a doctor feels that it is something with real merit, so entirely different from all the advertised fat reducers, that he does not hesitate to advise its use even to his own family. Prominent medical men, such as Dr. Rudolph, former Health Commissioner, endorses "SAN-GRI-NA" AS THE ONLY SAFE, positive and quick way to slenderness he knows of.

"SAN-GRI-NA" is the formula of a French physician. It is put up in a small, convenient tablet, to be taken three times a day. Although only recently introduced in America, "SAN-GRI-NA" is now recognized as a most effective treatment for fat people, because:

➡ IT HAS REDUCED MOST OBSTINATE CASES OF OBESITY.

➡ IT DOES AWAY WITH HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE, PUFFING, HEADACHES, TIRED FEELING, AND THE FAT MAN OR WOMAN WHO TAKES SAN-GRI-NA ONCE MORE ENJOYS LIFE.

➡ IT IS ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FROM ANYTHING EVER OFFERED.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC: Beware of worthless imitations. San-Gri-Na is sold with a guarantee of satisfaction or money refunded. Go to your druggist to-day, be sure to ASK FOR AND GET THE FRENCH BOX MARKED "VERI-TABLES TABLETTES SAN-GRI-NA."

On sale at any good drug or department store. If your druggist does not carry San-Gri-Na in stock he can get it from his wholesaler or you can send a money order or check for $1.50 direct to the Scientific Research Laboratories, 1841 Broadway, N. Y. City.

the other. This arrangement continued for many years. Later his whole time was given to this church.

A few things gleaned from the society's record books may be of interest. The oldest book in existence has on its first pages the record of a gift by the will of William Woodbridge of $500 if the society would raise the same amount. The date of this gift is 1826. The record gives the names of the subscribers and the amount each gave. The total subscription amounted to $501.50. Mr. Tuttle records in one of his historical sermons that $2,000 was raised by lottery a few years before he came. In this same printed sermon preached in 1859 he reports that the funds of this society amount to $3,300. To this amount there has been added many substantial gifts.

The next record in the old book is the minutes of a meeting held March 3, 1837 when they voted to rent the pews and appointed a committee to assess them. The highest assessment was $3 for pews 1, 2, 3 and 4, the lowest $1.25 for pews 25, 26, 27 and 28.

The whole amount raised by this assessment would amount to $54.

The next record of interest is the copy of a warning to the members of the society to meet in the church, April 15, 1843 for the purpose of taking into consideration the subject of building a new meeting house by subscription to decide where it shall stand and to dispose of the old meeting house and for the subscribers to appoint a building committee. In the minutes of the meetings held according to the warning it appears that the subscription was already made and it was voted to give the subscribers privilege to build a new meeting house on or near the spot where the old one stands. Voted that the subscribers appoint a building committee and have the right to dispose of the old house as they thought best. The building committee appointed was Isaac Gallup, William Williams and Henry Avery.

At a meeting of the Ecclesiastical society held Dec. 2, 1843 eight months after the 15th of April when they voted to build a new house they accepted the new house as built by the building committee.

The committee report showed that the house had cost $2,689.11 and that the subscriptions amounted to $2,486.10, leaving $203.01 to be provided for. In 1849 the society voted to grant liberty to any person to build a shed on the north side of the society's lot In 1848 it was voted to buy a bell. After the bell was hung some one was elected at each annual meeting to ring it. Another appointment new to me was the election of a key keeper. What were his duties?

The First Century.

The pastor, Rev. Mr. Goodenough, spoke as follows upon the topic, The First Century of Struggle:

The history of a small country parish is more than a history of the evolution of theology; but it is in some respects a thermometer to measure contemporary thought in its fevers and its chills. No one can honestly try to picture Ledyard, as it passed through the pioneer phases as a part of the Puritan reaction, without finding an explanation of its experience in this world-setting.

As a part of the first church of New London we first find it. Some of its blood was of the Mayflower, Pilgrim stock from the south of England, and mingled with them the Welsh mystics from Cape Ann, with a lot of Irish to make good measure.

Some fighting stock like the Gallups, the Morgans, the Lesters and the Masons, whose religion was a loyalty to their crowd rather than an essential theology. Who tried their friends occasionally with their casual habits almost as much as their enemies with their efficient violence. Side by side with them were those who believed in peace and grew by patient possession of their souls. Essentially farmers, deeply religious, but with no set theology, of the petty sort; ready to adjust the details of their belief to that which seemed best for the community and develop best the kindly qualities and social graces. Such seem to have been the Geers, the Lambs, and some branches of the Allyns. There were the sturdy partisans, rather enjoying theologic wars, ready to debate their side and always ready to take a definite side, despising all who did not.

Anyone who goes to Butler's Hudibras for an adequate picture of our Puritan ancestors will find it hard to understand why they had such a prohold upon our colonial destiny, and left such a deep impress upon our nation and its institutions. It is a funny caricature at which some Puritans of that day laughed as well as the cavaliers. For many of them were great-minded and proved it. Of course it is always easier to describe them by their grotesque side, but the portrait lacks vitality

In Ledyard very early were some of the most irritating zealots, some of the smoothest and slickest hypocrites, some of the best and truest men and women and some of the roughest and toughest pioneer stock living side by side and connected by marriage and ties of blood so closely that it is impossible to attribute to any one name the virtues or the vices without running across one of the opposites of the same name.

Gurdon Saltonstall, friend of Fitz John Winthrop, was pastor of the first church of New London. Among the homes he visited for a quarter of a century were many in our borders. The children of Robert Allyn, George Geer, Thomas Rose(Peter Spicer, Edward and Cristopher Avery, Ralph Stoddard, John and William Morgan, Edward Culver, Joseph Lamb, Philip Bill, Edmund Fanning, William Williams and Edward Crury, were already scattered through the clearings and would come by horse back and by boat to the old meeting house on the hill overlooking the river of the Pequots.

They must attend or be fined in those days. A friend of mine suggested that now only those are fined who do attend. There may be something in it. This first law was not so offensive as it sounds. For it was vital in a pioneer town to know if the farms on the outskirts still stood. Besides the religious impulse, was the social, the protective, and the economic. In the days of his mid-ministry the need for protection against Indians became much less, and where there were no highways, only bridle-paths and foot-paths leading through the forest, it seemed harder to get together, so after much petitioning of the general court the east side of the river Thames was set off.

Two years later Winthrop died, and so strongly recommended his doctor, that Rev. Gurdon Saltonstall became colonial governor. This roused all those who feared a reunion of church and state whereby the state became the dominant partner. The New England theocracy had demanded that the church be dominant.

It was one thing to be adviser of the governor; it was one thing to favor the care of souls; these two could be partners. But it was another thing to be a magistrate. Now a culprit must be suppressed for the sake of the common weal;—before he must be saved from his sin for his own sake and for the ultimate good of the community. The patience of a pastor with an offender, could not be endured in a magistrate who bore not the sword in vain. His new friends were picked men of the colony, men of affairs. He had less and less time to cultivate his old acquaintance. This estranging process did more than anything to rouse the spirit of the Rogereses, who felt that the world and the true church were positive antagonists, and any acceptance of the glory and honor by men, proved delinquency from the faith. They also felt that the poor and struggling pioneers should not be asked to minister to the luxury of such antagonists of the true church as clergymen "who strutted about in prideful clothes." Anyone visiting the state library and seeing Gov. Saltonstall's magnificance can easily see where they got the idea. But how they would have retained the idea down through the days of Jacob Johnson and Timothy Tuttle can only be explained by the philosophy of the "fixed idea". For the amount of luxury they had from $350 a year, as their maximum salary, and usually even less), can be imagined much easier than calculated by a householder. In fact there has never been a time when North Groton has been heavily burdened by ministerial exaction; possibly due to the influence of the battle axe of Zachariah Watrous upon the budget of his neighborn.

But the Battleaxe had not yet been published and now we turn to Yale college and its gift of books from Davie, who used to live in Groton until he inherited a barony. The effect upon the rector and tutors was to emphasize the new political opportunity of the whigs as the days of Queen Anne merged into the Hanoverian dynasty. Timothy Cutler and William S. Johnson led the defection to the established Church of England and its prelacy and its ways. Cutler had already a tentative call to a church in Boston, but did not publish the fact as widely as he questioned the validity of local ordination. This was the only rule of it he expressed to his enthusiastic students. Among them was Samuel Seabury, the son of Deacon John Seabury of the Centre Groton church. When the agitation resulted in the relinqu'shment of the services of President Cutler and Tutor Brown, some of the boys completed their courses at Harvard as a protest.

Samuel Seabury bought a small farm in North Groton that is now the Congregational parsonage farm. He faithfully labored and organized the Christian forces in North Groton, and preached at four homes, until the establishment of the site of the church building in the center of the town. This church was built in William Morgan's goat pasture, but was never entirely finished, through the 116 years in which it stood.

While he lived in Ledyard, Samuel Seabury's eldest son, (who later became the first bishop of Connecticut, and established the doctrines of the apostolic succession for the Episcopalians) was born 1729. When the question of his settlement came up, Seabury concluded to go to England and obtain ordination from the bishops and so gave up his church to Rev. Ebenezer Punderson of New Haven, who was ordained Dec. 29, 1729, and resigned Jan. 1, 1734 to follow Seabury to England for his ordination.

He also returned as a missionary of the L. P. G. S., but unlike Seabury who tried not to disturb his early church, Punderson settled here and tried to form a church out of the friends of the one he had served. He succeeded and enthroned the new church on Church hill opposite the home of Henry A. Allyn today. St. James stood there undisturbed until 1784, when it was moved to Poquetannuck, but still remained on the Groton side of the border.

It was not until 1841 that a new church on the Preston side was built, and then another followed it a few years ago.

Punderson was an active polemic. From North Groton he traveled up and down through Connecticut, and went to and fro therein. He seemed to enjoy controversy.

During Mr. Cutler's bachelor days, Henry Bill of Norwich bought the house where he was born and presented the farm to the Ecclesiastical society to be used as a parsonage. I find that they thanked him for it in 1876, so it probably was near that date when it became the property of the church, with about fifty acres. Here Mr. Cutting brought his bride and here their two eldest children were born. He planted trees, improved fruit and a barn was built across the street.

1881-1893—Rev. John Avery succeeded Mr. Cutting and built up the church reconciling it to many who had drifted away and reviving interest in many who had been indifferent. Some young men worked the farm on shares with him, part of the time. During a severe thunderstorm when many were at the church, Mr. Avery's horse was killed and his daughter, Mary, rendered unconscious. She has lived for nearly forty years since that experience and is with us today.

Rev. Albert E. Kismonth—July 2, 1893-Feb. 3, 1908—a native of Great Britain and at one time a secretary of a mission organization in England, after serving at Montville, entered upon the pastorate here, to stay some fifteen years. After a like length of time, spent in New York pastorates and returning to Connecticut he again comes among us and has his home here, too

Rev. William J. White, July 12, 1908, Feb. 8, 1914, came from New Hampshire to us and for five years tries many methods of interesting and organizing the people into a working church. He is here today.

The Second Century.

In his address upon The Second Century of Progress, a former pastor, Rev. W. F. White, spoke in part as follows:

Here was the land of the Pequots. We have come up to this ancient sanctuary along many of the trails they climbed, sometimes to answer signals from Lantern and other hills, as did the fathers later. Tradition makes one of those signal points a fortified house that stood near the present home of Hon. Wm H. Allyn. A well-swept arrangement raised and lowered an iron basket of burning pine knots that conveyed the fathers' wireless messages, pointed and brief like all their messages since.

Later there were stores:

On the present parsonage corner, built by John Packer followed by Gurdon Bill, where for many years was an agency putting out garments to be made up.

In a part of the late Dea. McCracken's house in the forks of the road west of John Gray's store, where was an agency putting out yarn-spinning.

In a little unused building and former post office to the west of the church, and severally kept by Elijah Galley, Solomon Chapman, and Edmund Spicer. There were numerous little taverns also:

In the parsonage building where is the remaining evidence of a bar in the south west corner.

In two or three buildings at different times about the church, one of which was the present house to the east.

That religious worship was kept up from the first there can be but little doubt, but by whom conducted we know not.

The first officially called meeting, "the first meeting of the society," was held in the house of Captain John Morgan, Jan. 3d., 1725-6. The house opposite Gallup school house, one mile north of the church, formerly owned by Jacob Gallup, and now owned by James Holdridge, was probably the meeting place. Here was a warning post, a "training field", and a center of community life.

Meetings, baptisms, communions, and other public functions were known to have taken place here until a late date.

Here it was in the house of Stephen Morgan, grandson of Captain John, that "the church articles" were signed that brought again into existence the church that had died.

Captain John Morgan and "the rest of the inhabitants of the north part of Groton (now Ledyard), petitioned the General Assembly in May 1725, asking that they might "be a parish by themselves to set up worship of God there." The privilege having been granted, a society of five or six members was formed which resolved to build a meeting house in the "center" of what is now the town of Ledyard.

A survey was made in Nov. 1726, and the "center" was found about "forty or fifty rods south west of Captain John Morgan's goat pasture," on land belonging to Samuel Newton.

Tradition says that Samuel Newton lived where Randall Holdridge, formerly lived and where Nathan Holdridge now lives. He, with Captain John, was a large owner of lands in these parts.

Mr. Newton consented to an exchange for the "society's training field," conveying the desired site of the center of the town for church purposes.

The First Meeting House

A subscription was taken and a frame erected. The following vote was passed Dec. 21, 1727, accepting it:

"It is further voted that the meeting house that is begun in said North Society in Groton by way of contributions is the said society's meeting house."

The Rev. Timothy Tuttle says "The meeting house must have stood for a considerable time before any covering was put upon it. Then, whatever was done was done at intervals. So long as it stood, during 116 years, it was never finished—a mere shell during three successive pastorates—opened even to the ridge, with no plastering within except to the right and left of the pulpit, and as high as the gallery floor, and designed probably to break the force of the north west wind. The timbers above the ground might all be seen and were of huge dimensions. It was in shape like many of the meeting houses of former days, with the main door at the front side, with the pulpit opposite to it on the other side, a door at each end, having nothing in form either of porch or steeple or chimney.

For the purpose of raising funds, so as to render it fit to meet in, the ground floor was sold to individuals, and they erected pews for their own accommodation, and to be held as their own property. These pews were like square boxes or pens, with seats on all sides within, except the doorway. The upright sides of the pews afforded no convenient place for sleepers in time of worship. So it remained after my settlement.

Sometime during the Revolutionary war it became a forsaken place—forsaken except by cattle which, feeding on the common, entered it as a place of shade.

About 1790, the body of the house was repaired, the pew owners consenting to give up their rights, and making the house common stock, so that the pews might be rented.

After my settlement, it underwent, in 1814, a more extensive repair than it ever had before; but not a complete one."

With this description and the memory of those recently living, we have a plain, nearly square, two-story weather-beaten building, standing almost on the site of this building a few feet to south and west of this building, the remains of whose foundations crop above ground. The northeast" corner stone, marked 1843 at the time of the erection of this building, may be seen.

Before the old meeting house began to take form there was an earnest effort to secure a preacher of ability. Rev. Samuel Seabury, a licentiate, the son of Dea. John Seabury of the church in Groton, a Yale and Harvard man, was engaged to preach in 1726, "four sabbaths at Captain John Morgan's, four at William Morgan's, two at Ralph Stoddards. Other preachers succeeded Mr. Seabury, each engaged for a limited time."

Rev. Samuel Seabury occupied the house that stood down the lane west of the parsonage barn. Here was born his son, Samuel Seabury, who in 1783 was made the first bishop of Connecticut. He became an Episcopalian about the time of the birth of the old church. This fact may have hindered but it did not stop the organization of the old church.

The date of that organization is unknown but may well have been the same as the ordination of its first pastor.

Rev. Ebenezar Punderson, first pastor, ordained in the comfortably fitted meeting house in North parish, Groton, Dec. 29, 1729, age 31 years.

"He was a native of New Haven, and a graduate of Yale college in the class of 1726." He was called Aug. 28, 1729. He remained pastor five years, and was dismissed by council, Feb. 5, 1734.

Shortly before leaving he avowed himself a conformist to the Episcopal church of England. He may easily have been influenced by Rev. Seabury Johnson of Stratford, Dr. Cutler of Yale college and other ministers going over to the Episcopacy.

His announcement was received with great sorrow by this church, and a committee was chosen of Robert Geer, Christopher Avery, and Benadam Gallup "to reason with him and see if he might not be persuaded that his ordination was good and that he might return again to his people."

They waited upon him but, instead of their winning him, he won over their chairman, Robert Geer, and he became one of several to pay his expenses to England. He went to England for ordination, but not, as it has been supposed, did he gain ordination there, though he sought it earnestly. It was not until he reached Aberdeen, Scotland, that he gained ordination.

Later he returned a missionary under the auspices of "the Society for the propagation of the Gospel in foreign parts."

Instead of going elsewhere, he returned directly to this town and began to organize and build a regular English church cemetery in the background, on what was later known as "Church Hill", one mile north of this "Meeting House Hill", opposite the home owned by Henry Allyn.

Naturally so earnest a man drew off many leading families, and was for a time the Episcopal church flourished.

Later it found the greater number of families living in Poquetsnnuck, and the church was moved to "Shingle Point", west of the present Episcopal church.

Mr. Punderson was appointed first missionary to Norwich Long Society at its formation in 1736-7.

He preached for the church in Hebron from 1746 to 752. and later assisted in the organization of Trinity Parish, New Haven, and was their first and only priest from 1755 to 1737. Afterward he removed to Rye, N. Y., and died in 1771, aged 63 years.

Rev. Andrew Croswell, second pastor. "He was not a college graduate of Yale, nor is it believed, a native of Connecticut."

He was ordained Oct. 14, 1736. Was to receive two hundred pounds the first year and the second and thereafter one hundred pounds. The two hundred pounds the first two years was to enable their minister to get some land with such "settlement" so he might exist later on a smaller salary. He remained with the church until April 1748.

Rev. Jacob Johnson, third pastor. He was a native of Wallingford and a graduate of Yale in 1740. He was ordained here in June 1748 or 9 and continued in the pastoral office twenty-three years, so long that his church came to be called "Johnson's Meeting House."

He was granted a "similar settlement and salary of former pastors with stipulation that he should pay back four hundred pounds if he became an Episcopalian, or joined another persuasion.

At a Society's meeting in Oct. 1772, he asked for a dismission, and it apparently was granted without council.

The Long Interin of Decline

From the going of Rev. Johnson to the coming of Rev. Timothy Tuttle, nearly thirty-nine years, there "was no state preaching." An occasional service conducted by traveling preachers was no doubt conducted during the Revolution, but so much was transpiring in this town in those unsettled days of war, that no thought seems to have been given to public religious services. Men were making gunpowder or off to war. Gunpowder was made in an old shed on what was the town farm. It got a fire and charred boards are there to this day. Many an old patriot and fallen hero rests in old cemeteries. Twenty six fell at Fort Griswold out of 44 in the war.

As services ceased and membership died off, the meeting house fell into decay, the window lights fell out, and the doors hung by broken hinges. The spiritual and moral decline elsewhere spoken of by Mather, Whitman of Farmington, Russell of Middletown, was felt here.

Thus did Rev. Timothy Tuttle find this church "extinct", with "no records," and "no living members." About the only thing that had come down from the past, beside the old dilapidated meeting house, through which cattle was wandering for shade, was a pewter communion set treasured up in some home, possibly in the home of Stephen Morgan by his mother Prudence.

It may be well to here mention that the communion set that took the place of the ancient pewter set, and which has been used to the present, was the gift of Timothy Allyn, a Revolutionary hero, and brother of the first male member of this present church. He was born in 1743, and died in West Springfield, Mass., in 1833. He also gave a set to the Gale's Ferry Methodist church.

Rev. Timothy Tuttle, was the first pastor, of the present church, Aug. 14, 1811 to June 6, 1864-53 years).

Among the foremost New England apostles to the country town would I put this man of God. Others may have come into greater prominence, but taking into consideration, few excelled him in that apostleship.

Rev. Timothy Tuttle was born in East Haven, Conn., Nov. 29, 1781, almost in sight of Yale college from which he was graduatrd in 1808. At the age of eighteen his family moved to Durham of this state where he intended to be a farmer.

But his mother's religious catechetical training the acquiring of some common school education, the influence of a revival of religion, and the personal religious influence of his pastor and of Mary Norton, who later became his devoted and faithful wife, turned his attention to educational and religious matters. He taught some and later entered college.

He preached in Groton as a candidate from Dec. 12, 1810 to August 13, 1811. On the latter date a council met at the house of Captain Elijah Bailey in Groton "for the purpose of setting apart Mr. Timothy Tuttle to the work of the ministry of the Gospel, over the Congregational churches and Societies in said town."

Dr. Strong of Norwich was moderator and Rev. Abel McEwen, a lifelong friend of Mr. Tuttle, was scribe.

Mr. Tuttle was ordained the following day in the Groton church, Rev. David Smith of Durham, his pastor with whom he studied theology, preaching the sermon.

He preached in Groton and North Groton, and was to receive 450 pounds, each society paying half. This relation existed until April 1834, when Mr. Tuttle said that each parish needed a pastor. "I am tired being half a minister," he said. Notwithstanding he was considered a whole minister in both places, honored and respected by all. He was in demand to preach the anniversary sermon in the old fort in Groton, Sept. 6, 1821.

There came into existence this present church organization Dec. 12, 1810, the same year that our American Board of Foreign Missions was born. And this church is on record as giving to the Missionary Society of Conn. as early as May 1817.

In 1842, thirty three years after Mr. Tuttle's coming the "friends of the new meeting house" circulated a subscription paper, and one morning early before daylight, greatly to the consternation of the opposers, the frame of the old meeting house came down. The stone of the new foundation was laid May 9th, 1843, and the superstructure was raised July 13, 1843, "all the young men of the town being present," and was dedicated Dec. 6, 1849, six years after it was begun.

A few of the high spots in Mr. Tuttle's ministry were:

An old fashioned Sunday school organized in 1818, two years before the reputed first Sunday school in Norwich, started by a young woman in a building outside of the church, her pastor greatly resenting the undertaking and opposing. Father Tuttle's Sunday school Sally Sterry, Anna Billings, and Tabatha Lamb each recited one thousand verses from the Bible.

This Sunday school was omitted from Thanksgiving to April. A Bible class of young people took its place. Questions were asked by the pastor and written replies were read in the class.

The beginnings of a Sunday school library, which may well have been the beginnings of a circulating library that for many years existed in some home in the community changing the library from time to time to different sections of the town, which library eventually became the nucleus of the present library, was first housed in a walnut case that stood in the gallery. Through the generosity and kindness of Henry Bill these libraries were housed in the present building and the Bill family have united in its support and success.

This present library came in Mr. Cutting's day.

Singing schools and courses of lectures at different times by Father Tuttle on subjects such as naturn, philosophy in which he was greatly interested.

It is evident that during the 3[illegible] years that the old church was dying without a pastor, the life of the people was changing for the worse. Lightness and triviolity and irreverence was common. How else could it be when liquor was sold in 12 places at one time in this period? Mr. Tuttle evidently endeavored to overcome all this by being the more serious, thoughtful and reverent. He entered God's house with great dignity, just recognizing the people and departed the same way.

He was impatient with inattention. For years a "wake-up" built her nest in the rotten post of the old meeting house.

Many in the gallaries watched the bird and were amused.

"Can it be that little bird is more interesting than my sermon?" he would stop to inquire.

In January, 1864 he exposed himself visiting his parishioners, and began to fail. In April he preached at a meeting in New London, at a gathering of ministers, for the last time.

Monday, June 6th, 1864, he passed on, and after a largely attended funeral in this church, six brother ministers bore him to his last resting place beside his wife in the cemetery south of his home.

Rev. N. R. Cook was Stated supply from Nov. 15, 1860, to June 25 1868. Mr. Cook was son-in-law of Mr. Tuttle. He was a forceful preacher. While here the library was founded by Hon. Henry B. Bill, and he became the first president of the library association, retaining that office until his death.

Rev. Charles Cutting was pastor from June 25, 1868 to Sept., 1881. During his ministry the membership was more than doubled by a great revival for which Father Tuttle prayed, and which he prophesied would come. It was during his ministry that Henry Bill gave his old family home with 50 acres of land for a parsonage. Here Mr. Cutting brought his young and cultured wife to grace the new home.

Mr. Cutting, I believe, was later the pastor in Whitneyville, a suberb of New Haven. His widow was until recently living there with her daughter, engaged in Christian work for which she so well qualified.

Rev. John Avery was pastor from Nov., 1881 to April, 1892. As Rev. Timothy Tuttle neared the end he was heard to say, "Who will be my successor? I wonder if John Avery would come." Mr. Avery had studied

BROUGHT RELIEF AFTER 2 YEARS SUFFERING

"The makers of Tanlac will always have my warmest thanks, for I don't consider it any exaggeration to say I owe my life and present good health to Tanlac," is the striking statement of Andrew Breisetiner, fireman.

"Words simply can't express the misery I endured for 2 years from indigestion. At times gas pains would catch me around the heart and almost cut off my breath. These awful pains would last two and three hours. My nerves were all unstrung. I slept poorly and got in such a bad way that my days seemed to be shortening rapidly.

"I tried everything. But disappointment was my only reward until I began taking Tanlac. I have been taking Tanlac off and on for a year now and feel so different that there's no room for comparison. I eat good and feel that Tanlac has given me a new lease on life."

NEW LONDON'S MAYOR SPEAKS WELL AT HIS FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 14—William C. Fox, as mayor of New London, under the council manager form of government has served for the first time as head of the municipal government as a speechmaker. He had his opportunity at the banquet given to the delegation of southerners who were in the city yesterday, and he acquitted himself very well in that he talked interestingly and what he said was appreciated and understood. He appeared as the best-equipped talker the city has had as a mayor in many years. There was a time when New London had orators for mayors, but that was long ago. In this respect no city in the state could compete with the late Augustus Brandegee and with Former Governor Thomas M. Waller. The late Robert Coit was another orator, as well as an able lawyer. Former Judge John P. C. Mather was a thinker rather than an orator, but he had facility of expression that was instructive and entertaining. Judge Ralph Wheeler was a mayor of the same stamp. He led the city aright, though he did not do it by oratorical display. Judge Wheeler was first to introduce a practice of gatherings of members of the council at his home. He was followed in that course by Benjamin L. Armstrong, who sought to attain the good will and the friendship of members of the council by way of the stomach rather than by eloquent diction. Mr. Armstrong was a business mayor, so considered by all who had relations with him as chief executive of the city. Charles A. Williams was another business man who served the city as mayor. He was the Chesterfield of all the long list of officials within the memory of living residents here. Dignified and polished he was always courteous and won his way to the hearts of the citizens. Jonathan N. Harris was another courteous executive. He was not gifted with the resonant voice with which some of the others named were endowed, but he was eloquent at that, notwithstanding, at times. The late George Williams was another shrill-voiced mayor, and he was impetuous at times as he attested, when he resigned because his wishes were not conformed to by members of the council. Mr. Williams was beloved by the people generally, with his single fault, and his death was sincerely regretted. He was more liberal perhaps than his financial means would allow, in the opinion of many. George F. Tinker followed Mr. Williams into the mayoralty. He was not a talker by any means as orators are classed, but he was a prudent and judicious chief executive and he surpassed all others in his liberality to the people. For many years he maintained a bread fund for the poor and needy and he did not limit the demand made upon it if the applicant was worthy—worthy in that an effort was made to get beyond the needs of the bread fund. In later years this city had for its mayors Ernest E. Rogers, now state treasurer, a native of New London or perhaps Waterford, and one who received his business training in this city. Mr. Rogers was a worker as mayor and he could express himself well in addresses. He went to the root of affairs when he talked. The late Cyrus G. Hewitt, as popular a mayor as ever served in the office, won the reputation of talking well without any oratorical graces. His voice was an asset that stood him well in debate. He had his ideas of management and he carried them along with earnestness. Arder L. Bentley was another mayor whose oratorical ability was limited, but he made up in hard common sense what he lacked in the direction of speechmaking. He had constructive ideas and he insisted upon using them. M. Wilson Dart was a mayor who made no pretense to address-making. He did not take the affairs of life too seriously and in that he found no need for speechmaking. The late Byram F. Nisbam, at times made some excellent speeches. And what he did not say in words he performed in deeds. He was the shrewdest of the politicians who occupied the mayoralty office. Mr. Nisbam was a tireless worker and what he accomplished is evidence that he labored not in vain, for he left the evidence of his handiwork on the city.

Under the new form of government New London has had as mayors, Waldo Clarke, John F. Murray, Malcolm M. Scott and Lucius E. Whilton. All made a good presentation of matters they were called on to talk about, but none of them got into the oratorical class.

All the coal dealers in New London are reported well supplied with fuel, but there is a shortage of coal of chestnut size. As yet no effort has been made here to put into use an unusually large quantity of bituminous coal though some of the citizens expressed enthusiasm when the manufacturer's association and individuals were proclaiming that the soft quality of coal could be successfully substituted for the harder kind.

John Stewart, who was stationed here in the office of the inspector of steamers for the United States government as the inspector of hulls, returned here this week in connection with the inquiry to determine the cause of the disaster to the submarine S-51, or rather to get at the degree of responsibility, if blame is attached to anyone. He did not care for the mission, but he responded to the call for his services and performed them well. The investigation has now closed and the investigators will make their report to the department at Washington.

There was no business for the police court today, so no session was held, something unusual of late in this city.

William Mansfield Corcoran, of Hartford, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Corcoran, 134 Willetts avenue, and Miss Agnes M. O'Connell, daughter of Mrs. Nora O'Connell, of Montauk avenue, were married at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Josephs church, the marriage being solemnized and the nuptial mass celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimmons in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends. Attorney Russell H. Corcoran, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Eleanor O'Connell, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Following the ceremony, there was a reception and a breakfast at the Hotel Mohican, after which Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran started on their wedding trip. Mr. Corcoran is an actuary in the employ of the Travelers Insurance company, Hartford and Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran will reside in that city.

Mrs. Phoebe Martin, 90, widow of Louis Martin, died last night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur LeBrie, 15 Central avenue, after illness, covering many weeks. Mrs. Martin was born in Canada, but had resided in New London several years. She is survived by three daughters, other than Mrs. LeBrie, Mrs. Mabel Peaky, this city, and Mrs. Fatuna Jubert, and Miss Rose Martin of Fall River, Mass., and a son, Alphonso Martin, of this city.

Mrs. Wesley Young and infant daughter of 54 Cottage street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were able to go to their homes today.

Miss Frances McKay, New Haven, formerly of New London, has concluded a visit with Miss Ruth Evarts, of Howard street.

Boleslaw Orluchi, 318 Huntington street, complained to the police this afternoon that while he was at his work at the plant of the Bloom Silk company, Garfield avenue, he left his automobile parked between the two mills. During the afternoon a thief stole his operator's license and his certificate of registration from the pocket of the car.

Robert Shea, a stranger hereabouts, became intoxicated this afternoon and went to the Fort Neck yard of the New Haven railroad, where he staggered about the net-work of tracks and was in danger of sustaining serious if not fatal injury by being struck by a locomotive, until he was taken into custody by Sergeants Martin Kane and Edward McGrath of the force of railroad special agents. Shea was locked up and will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

William M. Whewell, Jr., of lower Pawcatuck road, Westerly, was operating a machine in New London this afternoon and his driving of the car attracted the attention of Traffic Officer John Courtney. The officer interrogated the driver and determined that the latter possessed an operator's license, but the car was not properly registered. Whewell was ordered to appear in the police court tomorrow morning and answer a charge of violation of the automobile laws.

The delegation of business men from the South that spent last night here got away at 7 o'clock this morning, going by busses of the New England Transportation company through the principal streets of the city to the Connecticut college, thence via Main street to the old mill and to the state pier and the marine base, whence they visited Eastern Point and went on by the shore road to Westerly and to Providence via Noank, Mystic and Stonington. They said they were royally entertained here and expect trade relations between the south and New England to be expanded because of their visit.

PORTEOUS & MITCHELL CO. ANNOUNCE FASHION SHOW

The Porteous & Mitchell company has arranged a fashion event for Friday of this week, that will be of widespread interest to the women of Norwich and vicinity.

The newest fall and winter modes including coats, dresses and millinery for larger women exclusively. This New York models. A most interesting feature of this event will be the fact that the women of this community will have the services gratis of the fashion experts in charge of the show, who will give personal advice in the selection of coats and dresses that will be most becoming to the individual requirements of each woman. There will be special models for short women who wear larger sizes in addition to those modes that will be shown for the taller women. Conn. College Concert

The New York Philharmonic orchestra which comes to New London October 20 to open th current college concert series is the oldest orchestra in the country, now in its eighty-third year. It is the third oldest organization of the kind in the world, likewise. It is recognized everywhere as one of the very best in the world. While it is perhaps unnecessary to restate these facts, it is important that the public be familiarized with what it may expect to hear at the concert next Tuesday evening. Sometimes a person will say, or think, "I have heard the orchestra," and reason that it might be well to spend the cost of a ticket to hear another attraction. The point is not well taken because no two orchestral concerts are alike unless the same program is played and the conductor is the same. Each time the Philharmonic comes it presents an entirely different program, and this appearance will be no exception to the rule, for as in former years an entirely new one will be given in New London. Then there is the personality of the conductor to be considered. Just as pianists, organists, singers, and violinists differ in their interpretations as well as in their ability to thrill an audience, so do conductors differ. All these same factors which serve to make any program enjoyable. The vehicle or instrument used by the orchestral conductor through which is expressed his own musical thought, is the hundred and more musicians who respond to his instruction, his beat, and his mood, and the effect upon an audience differs as widely as do the effects produced by individual performers upon a single instrument. Several local musicians who have heard him conduct, consider Willem Mengelberg the greatest conductor now appearing in America. His reputation is worldwide, and anyone who enjoys music will be immeasurably rewarded by hearing this concert. The sale of tickets is now in progress

DISTURBED SLEEP

No. 160

J. H. Hanford, 7155 Yale Ave., Chicago, Ill., says, "For two years I have been troubled with gravel. Many times it would cause me to get up eight to twelve times at night, and it was very painful. Lithiated Buchu cleaned me up in one week. I will be glad to tell or write my experience." Lithiated Buchu is not a patent medicine as the formula is on the label. It cleanses the bladder as epsom salts do the bowels, driving out abnormal deposits, neutralizing excess acid, thereby relieving irritation which causes disturbed sleep. It is not a cheap medicine. The tablets cost 2 cents each at all drug stores. Keller Laboratory, Mechanicsburg, Ohio. Local agent, Geo. Engler Drug Store.

Broad Theater

Tom Mix, according to report, has packed an unusual number of thrills into his latest William Fox starring vehicle, The Rainbow Trail, which will be shown at the Broad theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Rainbow Trail is even more thrilling than Riders of the Purple Sage, to which it is the sequel. Both Stories are by Zane Grey, and therefore both breath the spirit of the west.

Several hilariously funny episodes are contributed by Mark Hamilton and Lucien Littlefield, a picturesque pair of western comedians. Bancroft, the principal villain; Diana Miller, a lesser villain; Steve Clemente, Vivian Oakland, Tom Delmar, Fred De Silva, Carol Halloway and Doc Roberts.

The Rainbow Trail is an engrossing story of a man's hunt for the girl of his dreams. The trail leads him to Surprise Valley, where his uncle, Jim Lassiter, a woman and the girl have been held prisoner for years. An outlaw band tries to thwart his efforts to rescue them, but, after overcoming apparently insurmountable obstacles and fighting a desprate battle, he succeeds.

Palace

The picture, which is based on Sada Cowan's colorful adaption of "that great love-classic, "The Lady of Lyons," by Bulwer-Lytton, is the finest kind of entertainment in the truest sense of the word.

There is virtually every desirable fan element—a warm, pulsating romance, bright, sparkling comedy, gripping, exciting action, and dazzling display of ultra-modern Paris gowns, luxurious settings, beautiful photography and some out-of-the-ordinary French backgrounds.

In the matter of cast, the most captious critic would have to admit that Howard Higgin, the director, has chosen wisely. Ricardo Cortez is an ideal choice as the dynamic, impetuous lover; Greta Nissen, the sensational new screen discovery, fully lives up to the glowing predictions that have been made about her. Wallace Berry, in a comedy role, proves that even a villain may have a sense of humor; and Raymond Hatton gives a highly polished performance as an impoverished nobleman.

Briefly, the plot has to do with the efforts of Cortez, Beery and Hatton to marry the wealthy but snobbish Miss Nissen.

The girl, however, is socially ambitious and determined to marry a royal title. In sheer desperation, finally, Cortez hits upon the idea of masquerading as a Prince. The ruse, at first successful, develops unlooked for complications which almost lead to tragic consequences.

"In the Name of Love" marks the directorial debut of Howard Higgin, and he has every reason to feel proud of his initial effort. The story moves along with smoothness and precision. Not for a moment does the interest sag, and suspense is admirably maintained right up to the thrilling close.

The mule doesn't admire the short ears of the horse.

GENEVESE HOG DESCRIBED LIKE RAZOR BACKS AND OLD IRISH PIG

The Duchess of Northumberland's description of the Genevese hog, "remarkably tall, slender and long legged, all black, with their ears hanging down," suggests that the old Irish pig and the "razor backed hawg" of the southern states were once a universal type, says The London Post. The Chinese were the first to domesticate the pig as well as to roast him, and every pig in the world today has some Chinese blood in him.

The pig's physical adaptability to environment is unsurpassed. A famous biologist has stated that he would undertake in 50 generations to breed a pig that could outrun any greyhound. In New Zealand the one-ton pig is already considered a practical possibility, and a two-year-old pig weighing more than half a ton has been raised.

POETRY

The Night-Blooming Cereus

Flower of the moon!
Still white as her brow whom we worshiped on earth long ago,
Yet, purer than pearls in deep seas, and more virgin than snow,
The dull years veil their eyes from her shining and vanish afraid,

It is we are unworthy, we worldlings, to dwell in her ways;
We have broken her altars and silenced her chorus of praise.
She hath hearkened to singing more silvern, when raptures more bright;
In some planet more pure she hath fled on the wings of the night.—

Yet she loveth the world that forsook her, for lo, once a year
She, Diana translucent, pale, scintillant, down from her sphere,
Floateth earthward like star-laden music, to bloom in a flower,
And our hearts feel the spell of the goddess once more for an hour.
See! she sitteth in splendor nor knoweth desire nor decay,
And the night is a glory around her more bright than the day.
And her breath hath the sweetness of worlds where no sorrow is known;
And we long as we worship to follow her back to her own.—
Flower of the moon!

—Harriet Monroe.

Abbie Ben Adams

Abbie Ben Adams, may her life be spared,
Awoke one night and felt a trifle scared;
For on her shirt-waist box, cross-legged, sate
A vision writing on a little slate.
Exceeding nervousness made Abbie quake
And to the vision timidly she spake,
"What writest thou"? the vision looked appalled.
At her presumption and quite coldly drawled,
"The list of our best people who depart
For watering places, sumptuous and smart."
"And am I in it?" asked Miss Abbie.
"No,"
The scornful vision said, "You're poor, you know."
"I know," said Abbie, "I go where life's cheap,
I can't afford mountains or prices steep.
But ere you leave, just jot this item down:
I never leave my cats to starve in town."
The vision wrote and vanished. Next night late
He came again and brought the little slate,
And showed the names of people really great,
And lo! Miss Abbie's name led all the rest.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"Did your sister marry a rich husband?"

"No. He's a rich man, but a poor husband."—Twice Told Tales.

"My car was stolen last night."

"Get a look at the fellow?"

"No; but I got the license number."—Yale Record.

Her Ladyship — "Will there be enough silverware, James?"

Hen—"And you married Margie! Well, well, why I knew her long before you contemplated such a move."

Pecked—"That's where you had the edge on me. I didn't."—Sense and Nonsense.

Safety First—Agent—"You had better let me write that insurance for you Rastus."

Blake—Did your wife hear you when you came home late last night?

Briggs—Did she? Why, man, she woken up when the thermometer falls.—Life.

A darky called at a hospital the other day and said: "I come to see how mah friend Joe Johnson am getting along."

"Well," said the darky, "I'll jest set down and wait till he's through."—From Everybody's Magazine.

The professor, who told his class to write on their conception of heaven, was surprised to receive a blank paper from Jones.

"What is the meaning of this?" asked the professor. "I told you to write your conception of heaven and here you have done nothing."

"Doing nothing, sir," said Jones "is my conception of heaven."—University of California Pelican.

Artificial fibre silk is recommended by a well known British physician as better for the health than real silk or wool because it is more transparent to the ultraviolet rays of sunlight.

It has been predicted that Germany's total consumption of copper in 1925 will reache the record figure of 300,000 tons. This includes raw copper content of alloys and scrap. The pre-war figure was 290,000 tons.

A wave of enthusiasm for tobacco cultivation passed over the Holy Land last year, and as a result thousands of acres were devoted to it in Arab and Jewish villages, yielding a crop that indicated it may become one of the chief sources of agricultural wealth in the future.

"Ladies are not allowed to use the telephone between the hours of 10 o'clock in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon." So reads a sign by stockbrokers in Paris. The latter maintained that the monopolization of the telephone by gossiping women prevented them from keeping touch with their offices.

Official forecasts place the Japanese spring cocoon production for 1925 at 39,131,410 kwan (kwan equals 8.24 pounds), a decrease of 346,350 kwan from the actual 1924 spring crop. The 1925 estimate indicates an increase of 800,000 kwan for yellow cocoons and a decrease of a little over 1,000,000 kwan in white cocoons as compared with 1924.

A flight of migrating grasshoppers encountered the airplane of Leo Waldron, aerial fire-ranger, while soaring over the Wenatchee (Wash.) forest and clung to every part of the machine. Large numbers of swallows following the hoppers immediately began to feast off the stowaways. For forty miles Waldron feared an accident from the grasshoppers covering his windshield. To birds in the northwest airplanes are becoming a very familiar and it is not uncommon for many to alight on the wide planes for a lift across the green carpeted hills.

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. (AP)—Speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement in today's Stock market, but they were forced to contend with another large volume of profit-taking and bear selling which gave the market an irregular appearance most of the time. Professional observers declared that the market acted "tired," but new leaders were constantly brought forward in an apparent effort to maintain bullish enthusiasm. Total sales crossed the two million share mark for the third consecutive full time.

Operations for the rise reached their maximum intensity in the mercantile issues. McCrory Stores B scored an extreme gain over 14 points by touching 135 and then slipped back to 130 5-8. R. H. Macy & Co., was bid up over 6 points to a new high peak at 109 1-2, closing within a point of the top, and Weber and Heilbrenner closed 5 points higher at 80 3-4. Kinney company attained a new high at 89 and National Cloak and Suit at 81 3-4.

Some of the day's selling undoubtedly was inspired by the continuance of relatively stiff money rates although these were generally regarded as only temporary. Trade news was mixed in character. Unexpected cuts in crude oil and export gasoline prices checked an advance in the oil shares after Marland had crossed 50 to a new high level for the year.

The weekly steel trade reviews were optimistic in tone. Iron age, reported that the week has brought a number of favorable developments in steel and probably has been more marked in that prospect than any week in months." Steel shares, however, failed to make much response to reports of trade improvement, although U. S. steel common received good support, closing fractionally higher at 123 1-2.

A better demand was also noted for the equipment shares in anticipation of large railroad orders for 1926 delivery. General American tank was one of the leaders of that group, closing 1 1-2 points higher at 57 1-2.

Buying of the public utilities was of a selective character with favoritism strong for the stocks of companies reporting large current earnings. Columbia Gas and Electric assumed the leadership of that group by moving up over 4 points to new high at 81 7-8 and Federal Light and Traction advanced 3 1-2 to a new top at 29 1-2. Western Union and North American also broke through their previous high levels.

U. S. Realty led the advance in the so-called "Rich Men's Stocks," soaring 15 points to 171 1-2. American Can soared nearly 3 points to 242 and then eased to 240 3-4. Typewriter stocks also showed conspicuous strength, both Remington and Underwood closing about 4 points higher.

Barnet leather broke five points and heaviness out in General Asphalt, Postum Cereal, Railway Steel Spring and Willys-Overland preferred.

Rails failed to follow up an early advance, although New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Railway, Baltimore and Ohio, Texas and Pacific, Kansas City Southern, Colorado and Southern and several other popular issues closed a point or so higher.

An increased demand was also noted for non-ferrous metal stocks, Howe Sound establishing a record high price at 25 3-8 and International Nickel and Federal Mining and Smelting preferred touching new 1925 highs at 36 3-8 and 73 3-4, respectively.

Call money renewed at 5 per cent. and then advanced to 5 1-2 and Interior banks continued to withdraw their funds from New York, limiting the sums available here for loans on stock collateral. Title money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Renewal of selling pressure against French francs, which broke below 4.50 cents, featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held steady around $4.83 3-4 but most of the continental rates showed slight krone displayed independent strength, ruling around 20.30 and 24.70 cents, respectively.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 14. (AP)—Wide fluctuations in the high-priced specialties featured today's irregularly higher curb market, National Tea soared 3 points to 600 and then yielded to 590; Ford Motors of Canada recorded a similar extreme gain at 690 but slipped back to 679 and McCrory Stores (New) jumped 15 points to 125, all establishing record high levels.

Oils held relaxively steady in the face of unexpected crude oil price cuts, most of the active issues showing only fractional changes on the day. A few ordinarily inactive issues such as Standard Oil of Nebraska and Ohio and Galena signal closed a point or so higher. Revival of activity in Lion oil, based on the bringing in of new wells in the Smackover field, featured the independents.

Industrials presented several strong spots, Armour "B" certificates again leaped into prominence by touching a new record high at 19 in anticipation of being listed on the "Big Board" tomorrow. Among the many other issues to reach new high ground were Bor

TAFTVILLE

Thomas Phalen of South A street has returned from Washington, where he was the guest for a week of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Norman and family. While in Washington Mr. Phalen attended some of the games of the world's series.

The Sunshine class of the Versailles Methodist Episcopal Sunday school held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Banker of Occum. After the business meeting, the president of the class presented Mrs. Banker a boudoir lamp on behalf of those present, the occasion being her birthday. There were games and music, followed by a chicken salad supper.

A number of members of the parish of the Taftville Congregational church met Tuesday evening in the vestry of the church to make plans and appoint committees for the annual fair. It was voted that the fair be held two nights as usual and that an entertainment be presented each night. Miss Elsie Heap was appointed chairman of the committee which will have charge of the entertainment on the opening night, and Victor H. Davis will have charge on the next night.

Conrad Tessier has resigned his position with the No. 4 weaving department of the Ponemah company.

The teachers in the Congregational church school, who are using lessons in the old testament, met in the teachers' training class at the parsonage Monday evening.

HAD GONE HUNTING WITH FISHING LICENSE

At a hearing in chambers at the city court Wednesday morning, a charge of hunting without a license against Michael Malerba, 32, of No. 133 Cedar street, was pulled by Judge Arthur F. Libby. Malerba was arrested by Game Warden Watson, after he had exhibited to the game warden a fishing license when asked to show his hunting license. Malerba, it is said, was under the impression that the fishing license he had was a hunting license.

LAUNCH COMMUNITY DRIVE TO AID ST. JOSEPH'S NEW PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

The names of 23 team captains who will lead some 200 team workers to victory in the raising of a fund of $25,000 to help defray the expense of the handsome $150,000 school building being erected by St. Joseph's Polish parish, were announced Wednesday evening at a dinner meeting of the general committee in charge of the campaign at the Wauregan hotel. If the interest shown in the drive by the members of the committee in point of attendance and enthusiasm is any indication of the success of the campaign it will go "over the top" with a rush when the campaign is launched the last week in this month. The general committee which includes representative business men and women of Norwich, had a splendid representation at the meeting which opened with a dinner at 6:15 o'clock. Grace was said by Rev. S. A. Iciek, pastor of St. Joseph's church.

During the dinner a fine concert program was given by D'Atri's orchestra. William A. Anderson, president of the Norwich Lion's club, was the song leader. There were community song numbers, a solo by Edward T. Connelly and a quartet number, Sweet Adeline, by Edward T. Connelly, Nicholas J. Spellman, Charles F. Wells and John J. O'Rourke.

With General Chairman Adelard Morin as toastmaster, the assemblage was called to order about 7 o'clock. We feel highly grateful at the large representation here tonight, said Chairman Morin. The proposition being laid before the people of Norwich tonight, is that of answering for the first time the call of a portion of our citizens, perhaps the largest foreign element group in the town. St. Joseph's parish is bringing to completion a new school building. We are going to be asked to lend our moral support and perhaps our financial support to St. Joseph's parish under its gallant leader, Rev S. A. Iciek. Chairman Morin then presented Mayor Mile R. Waters.

Mayor Waters Speaks

I am not going to say anything about the technique of this drive or how it should be run, said Mayor Waters, who briefly urged the people of Norwich to get back of Father Iciek and put the drive across. Father Iciek has dared to do things that no other man has done, said the mayor. It is up to us to get back of him and put this drive over. It is up to every man and woman regardless of creed or color to get out and help put this drive across.

Presents Appeal For School

Rev. S. A. Iciek, pastor of St. Joseph's church, was then presented by Toastmaster Morin. I greatly appreciate the honor you have conferred on me tonight by coming here, said Father Iciek. You came here because you are interested in your city. I am especially pleased that you have come here regardless of race or creed, he said. You have shown that you are real and genuine Americans, over and above party lines, political and religious questions. I have tried to do all I can to show my appreciation of the fact that I was born, raised and educated as an American citizen.

After telling of how he came here nine months ago, Father Iciek said: I saw that I had hundreds of children in poor quarters, poorly lighted, trying to get an education. I saw a lot of young men, and adults, too, that have no place to spend their evenings. Within two months I started to erect a new school building. There will be 17 classes, bowling alleys, club rooms, assembly rooms and evening classes for adults who wish to prepare themselves for American citizenship.

The social end will not be confined to the Polish people, the Catholic people. The social room will be open to everybody, regardless of creed. This is quite an undertaking. I found that the school will cost close to $150,000. Above all things it is an American school. It is conducted by American teachers, trained in American institutions. I don't feel that religion or knowledge of any language is detrimental to good American citizenship.

How long I will be in Norwich I don't know. I want to stay here, because I like the town, I like the people in it, and particularly this crowd here tonight. I know that you want to help me and that you want to help the Polish people here. I started to build this school with little or nothing. The Polish people are coming across with $25,000. They are saving Norwich from the necessity of erecting two school buildings which would cost $200,000. They are asking the people of Norwich tonight for $25,000. You are being asked to help me save and educate thousands of children, many yet unborn, who will attend this new school.

You by your efforts are going to help make this project a success. I already extend to you a royal and cordial welcome at the housewarming when the new school is completed.

Presents Resolution

Following Rev. Father Iciek's address, Jeremiah J. Desmond, coroner and ex-mayor of Norwich, presented the following resolution, which was read by Acting Secretary Thomas Shea.

"Shortly the new St. Joseph school, fireproof and modern in every respect will be opened on Cliff street. It is a seventeen classroom building and can accommodate nearly a thousand pupils. About six hundred children will attend there after the first of January, 1926 and more will come the following years. All of those children are American citizens and natives of Norwich. Their teachers are also American citizens, educated and trained in American institutions. The course of studies in this school is the same as the one followed in the public schools with the addition of christian doctrine and Polish language. The children are carefully trained to become God-fearing and law abiding citizens of this great republic. A high school department will be opened next fall.

"The land, building and contents of the new school are estimated at $150,000. The taxpayers of Norwich are not assessed one single solitary penny for its construction and maintenance. That burden is assumed and will be carried by the members of the Polish Roman Catholic congregation. The per capita annual cost of educating a child varies in different communities. In some it amounts to $70, in others it is over $100. The average for the Norwich public schools is around $85 per child. The new St. Joseph school educating over 500 pupils is saving this township close to $50,000 a year or over $2 per capita for every man, woman and child living in this community. That burden is also assumed by the members of the St. Joseph parish.

"A large number of children that will attend the new school come from the Greeneville and Falls sections. The public schools in those districts are already overcrowded. If it were not for the new St. Joseph school the town would be compelled to spent at least two hundred thousand dollars for new schools and a proportionate amount each year for their maintenance. That money and expense is saved to the taxpayers by the members of St. Joseph Polish Roman Catholic congregation who take this burden upon themselves.

"There are other important considerations, besides the great financial saving to the taxpayers of this township, which should be brought to the attention of the citizens of Norwich. The new building besides providing school accommodations for nearly a thousand pupils, will have special features for the education, recreation and amusement of the young men and the young women not only of that parish but of the entire neighborhood. Father Iciek intends to make that a community center not only for his parishioners but for others as well, who may wish to avail themselves of the facilities that the new building will offer.

"The new school will have a well equipped reading-room, pool-room and four bowling alleys all of which will be opened not only to the young men of the parish but to all other young men in the city without distinction of creed or nationality, who may wish to spend an evening in clean and wholesome surroundings. We all realize the need and importance of just such places for the youth of our city. The present school will also be remodeled. One part will serve as a meeting hall and night school for those adults who wish to learn the English language and prepare themselves for American citizenship. The other part will be made into a club room for the young ladies. A well equipped domestic science room will be attached to the club room. Here lectures will be given on cooking, sewing, hygiene, the care and nursing of children, in a word, on everything that pertains towards making a good American home for our working people. These facilities will likewise be available to the public. Any clubs or organizations of women will be welcomed to use it. Thus the new St. Joseph school will radiate its influence for good to all classes of people in the entire community.

"The Poles, who perhaps form the largest foreign element in the city, numbering around five thousand souls, have always contributed their share to the "drives." They "came across" with men and money during the war. They are a law abiding and thrifty people. They are anxious, at great expense to themselves, to give their children a suitable education and thus prepare them well for their duties in life. They are at the same time saving the town a large sum of money and establishing a needed social center for that neighborhood.

"The driving power behind this great enterprize is the pastor, Rev. S. A. Iciek. He came here with a name and reputation well established for doing things. During and since the war he rendered this government valuable service. he also served the Polish cause well as a chaplain of the Polish army in France. Although but a short time in Norwich he has made his presence felt. Things began to change rapidly upon the hillside and now a splendid new school is approaching completion. He is a booster and a worker, a broad-minded man who treats all people regardless of creed or nationality with the same kindness and consideration. Father Iciek is an asset to this community and he deserves the support and co-operation of everybody in it. Let us help him to put it over.

"Father Iciek is making a public appeal at this time to the citizens of Norwich for $25,000 dollars to equip the new school, to furnish the clubrooms bowling alleys and other quarters which will be given to the public and especially to the young people of the neighborhood. That is only a small fraction of what the building costs. We had many drives in the town, all of them were for a worthy cause, but none for better than this—the education of children and the welfare of our young boys and girls. This is the first time in the history of Norwich that the Poles are asking for help and they are prepared to give us far more in return than what we are asked to give them.

"A committee was formed consisting of many of the representative men, both Catholics and non-Catholics, Jews and Gentiles alike, who are willing to give their full support and co-operation to Father Iciek and his people in their great enterprize. A drive will be made in the town commencing the last week in October for the purpose of raising and if possible even oversubscribing the amount of 25,000 dollars, necessary for the equipment of this much needed social center. Solicitors will call on you the latter part of this month and please give what you can towards this worthy cause."

Timothy C. Murphy, former mayor of Norwich, moved the adoption of the resolution and it was unanimously adopted.

Pastor of St. Mary's Memorial Church

Chairman Morin then called on Rev. William A. Keefe, pastor of St. Mary's Memorial church. I appreciate Father Iciek's position, said Father Keefe. I am in the same position myself. We have a big burden in St. Mary's parish and we are trying to swing it along. Years ago the Polish people belonged to St. Mary's parish. Since then they have organized a separate parish. They have assumed a separate burden and they are asking us to help them.

From the taxpayer's point of view I believe the plan is practicable. I think it is a fact that if anyone drives around Norwich and then drives around other cities in the state he will agree that we are pretty badly off for new schools. Father Keefe called attention to the fact that the schools in town, even the newest school buildings, are overcrowded and that some of the older school buildings are in bad shape. He said he made this statement without any reflection whatever on the town of Norwich.

It seems to me this plan is practicable from the taxpayers' point of view. It is a bargain, if you put it that way. It is a bargain which Father Iciek is putting before you tonight. This is a pure matter of business. I say to the Polish people and to the people of Norwich that we hope movements of this kind will continue to be successful.

William A. Anderson, president of the Norwich Lions club, was next called upon. I think we as citizens of Norwich should feel proud of the fact that we have a man of Father Iciek's ability among us, he said. With reference to the new school building, Mr. Anderson said, I think it is one of the finest things started in Norwich, I don't know of any more worthy cause that has been placed before the citizens of Norwich. In closing Mr. Anderson offered to Father Iciek his personal services and any aid that the Norwich Lions club can give.

Principal Tirrell Speaks

The final speaker of the evening was Henry A. Tirrell, principal of the Norwich Free academy. I am sure this group of young Polish children is in good hands, said Principal Tirrell. The thing that has particularly impressed me about this new building is the social end. Learning a thing is not simply committing it to memory. Learning a thing is to be able to do that thing. I don't think a man's religion prevents him from being a good citizen. I want to express my enthusiastic approval of this plan, he said in closing.

Team Captains

Acting Secretary Thomas Shea then read the names of the selected team captains as follows: George P. Madden, Francis T. Diggins, John H. Carney, Michael D'Atri, Maurice Looby, Joseph Gadie, George H. Dolan, Jeremiah Sweeney, John E. Fitzgerald, Patrick T. Connell, Walter G. Casey, John Dumbroski, Martin Rozycki, Wrona, John Tumicki, Joseph Rozanski, Mrs. Morgan Cronin, Mrs. Thomas O'Rourke, Miss Stasia Stecewicz, Mrs. Lucien Bissonette, Mrs. W. Krzescial, Mrs. Rank Owstack. The general committee meeting came to a close about 8:30 o'clock with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner, with Nicholas J. Spellman at the piano.

Following adjournment of the meeting, the team captains gathered for a brief conference with General Chairman Morin. After briefly explaining the campaign plan, Chairman Morin asked Acting Secretary Thomas Shea to read the list of districts assigned to the various team captains. Following a final word of instruction from Chairman Morin, the conference of the team captains adjourned.

GOVERNOR TRUMBULL HEAD COLLEGE ENDOWMENT EFFORT

NEW LONDON, Oct. 15.—Governor John H. Trumbull today accepted the general chairmanship of the $550,000 endowment effort to be made next month for Connecticut college for women, the only woman's college in this state.

In accepting, Governor Trumbull paid tribute to the remarkable record the college has achieved since it was originally started. Today it is an A-1 classified college. No other college in history has attained so high a rating in such a brief span of years, authorities claim.

The governor as chairman will name the executive committee which will have direct control of the effort. The general citizens' committee, of which Governor Trumbull will be directing head, will represent 100 prominent persons from all portions of Connecticut. This committee will be named within the next week.

In the event the college attains its goal, it will be given an additional $150,000 by the general education board thus raising the total to $700,000.

The party that visited the governor included Ernest Rogers, George S. Palmer, Valentine Chappell and Benjamin T. Marshall, president of Connecticut college, all of this city.

The governor is among the many who have watched with interest the rise of Connecticut college during the past decade. Although chartered in 1911, the institution did not begin functioning until 1915 and hence its first class did not graduate until 1919. Although its oldest alumnae are still under 30 years of age they have won recognition in virtually every field of business.

One hundred and twenty-five are teachers; 19, social workers, while others are librarians, physicians, editors, missionaries, dietitians, mental examiners and scenario readers. Eighty-six of the 479 graduates are married.

The college started with a faculty of 15 and a student body of 67. The college was founded upon the principle of maintaining with high standards and to conduct with highest efficiency a curriculum prepared to develop each woman's peculiar talents toward her most effective life work.

Today the faculty has 50 members, while the original student body of 67 has increased to 515. There are 163 members in the freshman class this year and more than 700 others were refused admittance owing to the lack of accommodations. Several hundred others are on the waiting list for 1926. Last year there were 164 girls in the freshman class. This year all but one returned as sophomores, a record in itself not equalled by any other college, according to authorities.

THE 2:11 PACE, STAFFORD FAIR, GOES SIX HEATS FOR DECISION

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Oct. 14. — One of the most successful fairs in the long list of successful exhibitions of the Stafford Springs Agricultural society closed today at the fair grounds with fully four thousand in attendance.

Racing was again the big attraction but the feature event of the racing card, the 2.11 pace, went six heats for a decision and the 2.16 trot and 2.17 pace, each of the latter carrying a purse of $500, were battled out to five heats. The 2.17 trot was taken by Prodigal Guy in the fifth, winning from Georgia Reden and Laurette Forbes in a hard finish—Prodigal Guy breaking for a break-taking few seconds in the last quarter, but passing under the wire in snappy comeback.

The ushers of the midways were taking down their tents—but rather noisily packing them away for a trip to warmer climates—while shouting final praise of their particular wares to the home-going crowds.

In the exhibition hall the prize winning displays were being packed away with several of the first and second prizes going to Tolland county fruit and vegetable growers, while Massachusetts farmers also had entries which took prizes.

MAN KILLED ON TRACK FRED DRAPER, WILLINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, Oct. 14— The body of the man killed Tuesday at the Stafford Fair grounds track was identified late Wednesday afternoon as that of Fred Draper, 74, of the Willington glass section. The body was identified by Julius C. Meyer, of New York and Willington. Mr. Meyer identified the body by means of a coat which Draper was wearing and which Meyer had given to the dead man about a year ago.

Draper was a silk manufacturer and had lived in Willington for the past 25 years doing farming. His wife died about 15 years ago.

ROTARIANS HEAR REPORTS OF EXECUTIVE'S CONFERENCE

The weekly meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel was devoted largely to a resume of the meeting of the club executives with District Governor John Allison of Holyoke, Mass., who made his official visitation to the Norwich club last week. Secretary Edward Jewett and President J. Nelson Weymouth made brief reports of the executive session.

Herbert C. Adams, chairman of the committee in charge of the concert which is to be given by the Vannini Symphony Ensemble at Slater Hall, for the benefit of the John S. Blackmar Boys' Work fund of the Norwich Rotary club, urged a spirited effort in the sale of tickets and the tickets were distributed for sale among the members of the club. Mr. Adams said that this concert is one that should appeal to lovers of good music and is not for Rotarians only but is open to all the public.

During the luncheon William G. Park acted as song-leader and Johnny Egan, talented young pianist, was at the piano. There was the customary group singing which included the selections from the guests and others. Hardly a member escaped the vocal obligations at Wednesday's meeting.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

SUIT AGAINST COLCHESTER OVER ABANDONED ROAD

Trial of the suit of Joseph Plecarz against the town of Colchester, which began Tuesday afternoon in the superior court here before Judge Allyn L. Brown continued Wednesday at New London. The suit arises over the discontinuance by the town of Colchester of a road leading to a bridge which spans a body of water on the farther side of which is property owned by the plaintiff. Some time ago a heavy rain caused the water to swell and the bridge was destroyed. The plaintiff sues to force the town to construct a new bridge and open up the road leading to it. It is the contention of the defendant that the road is a private one while the plaintiff maintains that it is a public one.

NAVAL BOARD INVESTIGATING SINKING OF SUBMARINE S-51

Commander Lenny, U. S. N., Testified That the Masthead and Stern Lights of the Sub Should Have Been Visible For Seven Miles on the Night of September 25, When She Was Rammed—First Rescue Steps Were Described by Commander Brownell of the Second Submarine Division.

BOSTON, Oct. 15—The masthead and stern lights of the submarine S-51 should have been visible for seven miles on the night of Sept. 25 when she was rammed and sank with the loss of 33 lives by the steamer City of Rome off Block Island, Lieut. Commander Maurice J. Lenny, U. S. N., testified today before the naval inquiry board investigating the disaster.

The officer, commander of the S-50, close sister of the defeated vessel said he was not able to see from the conning tower of the S-50 on the night of the disaster, he said, was excellent.

Testimony that the S-51 sank two miles south of the spot reported by Capt. John H. Diehl of the City of Rome when he sent the first news of the disaster by radio to the submarine base at New London, almost four hours after it had happened, was given by Lieut. Commander J. A. Brownell, commanding officer of the second submarine division.

In describing the first rescue steps, he said that he proceeded from the submarine base to the scene of the disaster at 4:30 o'clock in the morning of Sept. 26 on the submarine S-1, which was followed by the U. S. S. Camden, mother ship of the submarine fleet, and every other craft in the base which could be manned. The destroyer Putnam, which put out of Newport, was the first on the scene.

Commander Brownell testified nothing was sighted about the spot indicated in Captain Diehl's radio message but that two miles south was an oil covered area a mile long and a half mile wide. It was in this area, he said that an aviator sighted the sunken submarine while flying overhead. When the S-1 steamed over to the spot where the S-51 sank, Commander Brownell said he saw two streams of air bubbles arising to the surface, about thirty feet apart.

The S-1 was anchored over the streams, he said, and her listening gear tried out. Nothing was heard. Other submarines tried listening gear without success. When two divers descended to the S-51 they tapped out signals on her hatches but received no answer. The witness said that none of her secret records or documents had been recovered.

Commander Brownell said that the S-51, with the S-50, was making her monthly seaworthy run when she was rammed. This consists of a 12 hour endurance run on the surface to test engines and an underwater test to three hours to try out batteries and motors. The S-51 started her surface run at 5:30 p. m. so that she could commence during the daylight hours of the afternoon.

When the court was adjourned until tomorrow morning, the board announced that Captain Diehl and the members of the crew who will be called to testify will not appear until October 26.

Counsel for the Ocean Steamship company, owners of the City of Rome, had announced that Diehl and his men would take the stand tomorrow. It was said that they were to have been transferred to the steamship St. Louis also owned by the company, when their ship arrived in New York today. The City of Rome, however, did not arrive there until after the St. Louis had sailed.

The board, which consist of Captain Orton P. Jackson, the presiding officer, Captain Walter M. Hunt of the Portsmouth, N. H., navy yard and Captain David A. Weaver of the United States submarine service, will call to the stand tomorrow the three S-51 survivors, who were rescued by the City of Rome after the crash, and seven navy divers.

Lieut. Charles A. Lockwood, Jr., is acting as judge advocate and the steamship company is represented by a staff of three attorneys.

A. F. OF L. RE-ELECTS WM. GREEN AS PRESIDENT

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 15—(A. P.)—The American Federation of Labor today re-elected President William Green and his associate officers by acclamation, chose Detroit as next year's convention city; settled two important jurisdictional disputes; declared against formation of an independent labor party and opposed recognition of the Russian Soviet by the United States.

Many other resolutions also were adopted, but the convention was unable to clear its calendar, and another session will be held tomorrow. Twenty of the resolutions remain to be acted upon. A number of delegates already have left the city, as today was to have been the concluding session.

Mr. Green's re-election was foreshadowed. He was elected president in New York last winter by the executive council, after the death of Samuel Gompers, head of the federation for more than 40 years. Previously he had been secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America. During the latter he was instrumental in settling three vexatious inter-union disputes after others had failed, and he acquired a reputation among his fellow unionists as a peace-maker.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers', an old co-worker of Mr. Green, made the nominating speech. He brought the delegates to their feet cheering when he recounted that Mr. Green was the son of a coal miner.

A bit of sentiment was further added when George W. Perkins veteran head of the Cigar Makers union, seconded the nomination for re Mr. Perkins for years had gone the honor of nominating Mr. Gompers.

When the nomination was made unanimous there was an enthusiastic demonstration and Green several minutes before Mr. Green could speak. Then he brought about another longer and more demonstration when, with tears obviously in his declared in a voice broken with emotion:

"Besides my life, my hope, my dream, my service—all is in your cause."

Two other officers re-elected were: Vice president—James Duncan, Quincy, Mass.; Frank Duffy, Indianapolis; T. A. Rickert, Chicago; Jacob Fisher, Indianapolis; Matthew Woll, Chicago; Martin F. Ryan, Kansas City; James Wilson, Cincinnati; James P. Noonan, Washington; treasurer, Daniel J. Tobin, Indianapolis; secretary, Frank Morrison, Washington. Hutcheson of Indianapolis, president of the Carpenters organization were elected fraternal delegates to the British Trades Union congress. James Connors of Buffalo, N. Y., vice president of the Switchmen's union was elected delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor congress.

There was a lively contest between Detroit and Birmingham, Ala., for the choice of the 1926 convention. Detroit winning on a roll call vote of 15,875 to 11,609. Sacramento, Cal., withdrew from the race and other aspirants, St. Petersburg, Fla., and Montreal did not figure.

PRESIDENT'S AIR BOARD HEARS DIVERGENT STORIES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15—(AP) — The president's air board heard two stories today each of a different nature, but both telling of the trials and hardships incident to aviation.

One, related by Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, Jr., set forth the difficulties encountered by the navy flyers with the MacMillan arctic expedition in their effort to conquer the ice barriers that the far north has reared in the pathway of those who seek to explore its waters.

The other, told by several representatives of aircraft manufacturing companies, dealt with the handicaps which, they allege the government has placed on the aviation industry through failure to establish a definite policy in regard to aviation development.

Grover Loening, president to the Loening Aeronautic and Engineering company, which constructed the amphibian planes used by Commander Byrd, also criticized Colonel William Mitchell for his statements concerning the obsolescence of planes used by the United States government.

The American planes, he declared are equal to those possessed by any other nation, and the types now used in the first line by the United States are "not obsolete." Their quality, he insisted, is as good, if not superior, to any made in the world.

"Our competitors in Europe," he asserted, "Billy Mitchell's statements and send them to South America. This has seriously hurt the sales of American flying in that continent."

Another witness, Chester W. Cuthell, attorney for the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., Inc., testified that the government gives "no protection to airplane inventor's rights," and that the present law "amounts to virtual confiscation of patents and property."

ESTIMATES OF COTTON CROP ARE DISTURBING

BOSTON, Oct. 15—On the ground that early season estimates of the size of the cotton crop are "disturbing to the cotton industry and to the cotton growers," the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers in annual meeting here today voted to urge congress to have estimates by any government agency discontinued. William B. MacColl of Pawtucket, R. I., was elected president of the association, succeeding Morgan Bitler of Boston, son of U. S. Senator William M. Bitler.

Other officers elected were Russell H. Leonard of Boston senior vice president; John A. Sweetser to Boston, junior vice president; representative to the national council, Russell H. Leonard.

In the matter of cotton crop reports the association voted to request the National Council of American Cotton Manufacturers "to formulate a resolution on this most important subject urging congress to so amend the present law as to provide that no estimate of the size of the cotton crop be made by any government agency before some date when the crop is sufficiently advanced to make possible a reasonably accurate estimate."

DEER HUNTING SEASON OPENS IN MAINE TODAY

BANGOR, Maine, Oct. 15—With conditions said to be the most favorable for many years from the stalker's point of view the deer hunting season will open at dawn tomorrow in the eight northern counties of Maine —Aroostook, Piscataquis, Penobscot, Somerset, Franklin, Washington, Hancock and Oxford.

The long summer drought shrivelled the leaves so that trees in the north woods were almost bare when heavy rains fell last week, completing the process of denudation. In many districts sufficient snow remained from the storm of last Saturday to make tracking easy. Game wardens report deer somewhat more plentiful than last year. Under the amended law only one deed is allowed to a hunter.

STORY OF THE BAND ... RECEIVED CHA... LOOT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 15.—(AP)—Mysterious actions in a New York hotel by two alleged members of the band that is said to have obtained enormous loot from Gerald Chapman and his pals after they had held up and robbed a mail truck of securities valued at $1,300,000 were described today by witnesses in the federal district court. The testimony was given by government witnesses in its case against A. W. Perelstrous and Stephen Robinson Jr., charged with having assisted in the disposal of $300,000 worth of the stolen securities. The case is expected to reach the jury tomorrow. Eight other men, indicted with Perelstrous and Robinson were granted separate trials.

Count Victor Von Brandenburg, of New York, who yesterday told of a secret room in the Russian quarter of that city, where gems of all kinds and negotiable securities of great value were "piled high on large tables," was the principal witness today. He is among those under indictment.

Von Brandenburg testified that he had acted as agent for Perelstrous in what apparently had been a legitimate deal to obtain loans on the bonds, $300,000 worth of which eventually were placed with the Co rn Exchange National bank here. He said he understood the loans were made Colonel N. K. Bobroff, late of Siberia," a friend of Perelstrous. Bobroff, who has since disappeared, was supposed to have been in this country to purchase crude oil and soil pipe for Russia.

At a conference with James B. Halbert, George Kimball and Frederick C. Munns, three other defendants, von Brandenburg said Munns asked him whether he had gotten any money from Perelstrous for his services. Replying in the negative, the witness quoted Munns as having said:

"That is strange. I got mine and Kimball got his."

Describing another meeting in New York, Von Brandenburg said that he was told by Halbert to return to his hotel and "would be visited."

"A few minutes later," the witness said, "Halbert and Harry Levinson (a Boston lawyer, also under indictment in the case) came to my room. Both looked around carefully and flatly said 'Put on your hat and coat and come downstairs to the lobby, we don't want to talk here.' When we reached the lobby Levinson asked me if I had received any money from Perelstrous. I told him I had not. Levinson pulled Halbert's arm and asked "Are you pussyfooting with these fellows?"

We then walked down Seventh avenue, Halbert and Levinson talking in undertones. I didn't hear their conversation, but soon Levinson said to me: 'You go back to Philadelphia and sit tight, and in a few days you will receive collateral on which you can make a loan for your business. You haven't been treated right.'"

Shortly afterward, Von Brandenburg testified, Perelstrous who was his partner in the radio business, deposited $1,200 to the firm's account with a check drawn on the Corn Exchange National bank. The witness said he was given to understand by Khinball that the bonds were "the product of the Russian revolution."

Halbert and Munns also appeared as government witnesses today. Kimball testified that in August, 1922, while he and Munns were in Kimball's office, Halbert had come in and handed Munns $1060 with the remark that it was commission "on a little deal Mr. Perelstrous put over in Philadelphia." Two weeks later, he said, Halbert gave them $500 with a similar remark. He said that he and Munns had divided the money equally.

None of today's testimony connected Robinson with the case.

SKETCH OF THE CAREER OF HANFORD MACNIDER

MASON CITY, Iowa, Oct. 15 (AP) —Hanford MacNider, Mason City banker and former national champion of the American Legion, appointed assistant secretary of war today, fought with President Coolidge over the adjusted compensation measure, but the personal friendship of the two never was imperilled. As head of the Republican Service Men's organization in the 1924 campaign he performed service which won the commendation of President Coolidge.

Mr. MacNider began his education in the schools here and later attended Milton Military academy at Milton, Mass. He was graduated from Harvard university in 1911. Upon completion of his college work he entered his father's bank here as a teller.

He enlisted in the Iowa National Guard a year later but resigned his commission in order to have active service in the World war. He entered the Fort Snelling Mine Training school as a private and emerged as a second lieutenant in the second division.

ITALIAN DEBT MISSION IS READY TO NEGOTIATE

ROME, Oct. 15—(By the Associated Press)—Count Volpi, the finance minister, who will head Italy's war debt mission to the United States, today told the Associated Press correspondent that the Italian government is ready to negotiate with the United States a definite and final, and not a temporary agreement regarding the Italian debt to America.

"In the coming negotiations at Washington," Count Volpi, said, "Italy is ready to follow the lines laid down by the American government in the agreements concluded with Great Britain and Belgium and the negotiations with France. The Italian government has not been influenced and will not be influenced by the provisional agreement concluded by France.

"I will demonstrate with facts and figures the real economic and financial conditions of our people to the American government, trusting to the spirit of justice of the Americans. There are historical ties between Italy and the United States such as surely will outweigh today's computation of debt and credit."

Count Volpi confirmed the announcement that he and the members of his mission will sail from Naples for New York on the steamer Duilio, October 22. He said that he would be accompanied by Countess Volpi.

Dealings Averaged Nearly 8,500 Shares a Minute—Wild Wave of Bullish Enthusiasm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—(By the Associated Press)—In one of the broadest and most active stock markets of the last decade, prices were whirled upward 1 to 14 points today in a wild wave of bullish enthusiasm that carried over 50 issues to their highest prices of the year, more than a score of them to the highest prices ever recorded.

Total sales, which exceeded two and one half million shares, or an average of nearly 8,500 a minute, were the largest, with the single exception of one day last November, since December 21, 1916, when the volume ran over 3,000,000 shares following the "lead" on President Wilson's peace note. Trading embraced 373 individual issues, or one less than the record established yesterday, or slightly more than half of the total stocks listed.

The sudden outburst of strength, which was unusual in that it took place in the face of relatively stiff money rates, which had been the cause of heavy liquidation of the last few days, was attributed to a variety of factors by stock market observers. Chief of these was the widespread speculative belief that the new tax bill, hearings on which begin in Washington next Monday, will provide for a substantial reduction in taxes.

The announcement that Secretary Mellon would propose a maximum surtax of 20 per cent lent color to this belief. Comment also was heard that the administration's virtual embargo on loans to countries that have not funded their war debts and the heavy shipments of gold from England to the United States would make available a plethora of funds for commercial and stock market purposes in the months to come.

The steady improvement in business, as reflected in expanding steel mill operations and hardening price tendencies for steel and non-ferrous metals, record breaking automobile sales by the principal manufacturing companies in the third quarter, unprecedented chain store and mail order business and bank clearings, also were stressed by the powerful financial interests working for higher prices. While there was a feeling in some quarters that the new Rhine security pact to which Germany officially announced her adhesion at the Locarno conference today would hasten Europe's economic recovery and eventually lead to increased foreign competition of American manufacturers, the first reaction was generally regarded as bullish.

Considerable significance was attached to the strength of the so-called "Morgan Industrials," namely U. S. Steel common, General Motors and Dupont.

The best demonstration of group strength were made by the motors, steel, public utility, merchandising, tobacco and typewriter shares although the advance was by no means uniform in all groups. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe was the individual feature, soaring 14 points to 180.

In the house of deputies today, a majority and minority reports were presented from the joint commission on the ministry of healing. Both reports were placed on the calendar.

The committee on canons on the house of deputies reported unfavorably a resolution to reduce the number of clerical and lay delegates to the general convention from the four at present to three.

Debate in the house of deputies centered about the office of baptism. Dr. F. H. Nelson, Cincinnati, proposed that in baptism, the church should no longer require a confession of belief in the creed but would substitute an expression of personal devotion to Christ. Both suggestions were rejected the result being that no change was ordered in questions asked in baptism.

Adjournment was reached as the deputies were discussing the proposed list of memorial days for saints.

SECURITY PACT DESIGNED TO OUTLAW WAR ADOPTED

At Locarno Germany and the Allied Powers Have Approved the Text of Such a Measure—The Pact Pledges France, Germany and Belgium Not to Invade One Another's Territory and to Abstain From War—Permanent Court of International Justice, Boards of Conciliation and the League Council Are All Possibilities For Arbitration, and and Arbitration is Obligatory.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 15.—(AP—Today, treaties were adopted at Locarno designed to render impossible any reopening of a world war.

Germany and the allied powers approved the text of a security pact outlawing war.

The Rhine pact of security adopted today, which will be initiated tomorrow or Saturday, pledges its signatories, France, Germany and Belgium not to attack or invade one another's territory and to abstain from war Great Britain and Italy stand as guarantors of this engagement and promise to throw their forces against any of the three parties which violates its terms.

France is allowed to keep certain rights embodied in the treaty of Versailles, and, notably, take immediate action should Germany commit a hostile act by constructing fortifications either on the left bank of the Rhine or within fifty kilometers (about 30 miles) of its east bank, or keep armed forces within that area.

The pact ceases to hold when combined penalties against any aggressor nation are ordered by the league of nations, or when by virtue of Article XV of the league covenant and failure of fatigue of the council to reach unanimity on any dispute, the league members may take such action as they deem necessary for the maintenance of right and justice.

The permanent court of international justice, boards of conciliation and the league council are all possibilities for arbitration of all disputes under the pact, and arbitration is obligatory.

Besides the Rhine pact, an agreement was reached on collateral arbitration treaties between Germany and France and Germany and Belgium; these interlock with the pact itself. There will be in addition, arbitration treaties between Germany and her eastern neighbors, Poland and Czechoslovakia.

These are expected to be concluded tomorrow, and will follow the same scope as the western treaties. There will also be separate conventions between France and her eastern allies, guaranteeing France the right to come to the assistance of Poland or Czechoslovakia in case they are subjected to an unprovoked flagrant attack.

Lastly comes the gentlemen's agreement, whereby Great Britain, France, Italy and Belgium inform Germany that they interpret the covenant in the sense that no penalty contributions can be expected from members beyond the member's means. By this statement, which will take the form of a letter, Germany is relieved of the fear that the operation of league sanctions might embroil her with Russia.

Germany is insisting that this statement should have the guarantee of the respective governments behind it, and not merely that of the foreign ministers, and there was some gloom among the Germans tonight that this question appeared to be not entirely cleared up.

The Germans are demanding, too, clarification of the assurances that Cologne will be evacuated at an early date, that French occupation of the left bank of the Rhine will become partly invisible and that conditions in the Sarre basin will be made less distasteful to the German population there.

Yat Austen Chamberlain's utterances at a press luncheon today were so bold and unequivocal that nobody in Locarno really expects last minute obstacles which would wreck the things achieved. The British secretary for foreign affairs emphasized that no delegation had triumphed over another in the negotiations.

"If there was the least suspicion of that, it would have been a disaccord, not an accord, which had been given birth at Locarno," said Mr. Chamberlain. "Relations have been established which will have their repercussion and repetition in the near future in the relations between other nations, and there will emerge for Europe not a peace imposed, but a peace consented to by all."

The various treaties will probably be signed at London, within a fortnight and league of nations offices here for the closing conference are no reason why, with the treaties ratified by December, Germany cannot enter the league by the end of the year. For one of the outstanding causes of the Rhine pact is that whereby Germany joins the league.

League leaders are anxious that Germany's entry shall be consummated at the earliest possible moment, so that she may participate in the preparatory studies for the disarmament conference which the league will convoke as soon as it is convinced that real security for Europe has been attained, and also that Germany, which will have a permanent seat in the council, may have a potent voice at all league disarmament problems.

Germany hides from none that obstructs her neighbors cut down on armaments, and feels that with peace consolidated at Locarno, there is no reason why this cannot be done.

The reduction of the armament burdens of Europe therefore, looms on the horizon as one of the possible consequences of today's achievements.

A genuine Franco-German entente in all directions, economic, financial and political is believed to be very much on the boards.

OPPOSITION TO NEW HAVEN R. R. ACQUIRING BUS AND CAR LINES

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—(A. P.)—The Connecticut Motor Stage association through its attorney today took a stand in opposition to efforts of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad to obtain federal permission to acquire trolley and bus lines in Connecticut.

Joseph F. Murray, counsel for the association, after consultation with Assistant Federal Attorney Royce, said that he intends to file in the case an affidavit of Patrick Healey, of Waterbury, Conn., president of the organization, opposing the railroad's move.

In 1914 a decree obtained against the railroad under the Anti-Trust act forced it to dispose of its Long Island Sound steamship lines, and trolley and bus lines in New York state, Connecticut and Massachusetts. The road contends that conditions now justify modification of the decree to permit its ownership of Connecticut bus and trolley lines.

Mr. Murray said that the Motor Stage association members believe that "the possibility of the New Haven's domination of the newly developed motor bus service throughout the state threatens a violation of the anti-trust laws" to the injury of the independent bus operators and the public.

CORONER FINDS WEST HAVEN POLICEMAN RESPONSIBLE

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 15—William H Slater of West Haven, a supernumerary policeman, is held criminally responsible for the death of Andrew P. Wellman in a finding handed down by Coroner Eli Mix today. The coroner finds that on October 5, Wellman stepped from a trolley at Campbell avenue and Elm street and started to walk across the street towards his home.

At that time Slater was operating an automobile in Campbell avenue and when he observed Wellman in the path of his machine sounded his horn. This confused Wellman. Slater then applied his brakes, the finding says, but the automobile was not brought to a stop before it had struck Wellman. The latter died later in the New Haven hospital.

CHARGE OF BOOTLEGGERS' UNION IN CHELSEA, MASS.

BOSTON, Oct. 15—(A. P.)—The existence of a "bootleggers' Union" in Chelsea is charged in indictments returned by the federal grand jury today naming nine members of the alleged organization for the manufacture and sale of liquor.

The indictments based on evidence obtained by federal agents who have been at work for several months in Chelsea, gave December 10, 1924, to February 15, 1925, as the dates within which the activities of the liquor organization were carried on. The defendants, it was charged, "formed themselves into an organization for the purpose of manufacturing intoxicating liquor and for the purpose of selling the liquor so manufactured at a uniform price and only to a person or persons agreeable to all of the said conspirators."

Those indicted were George Weinstein, Ernest (Dutch) Henry, Meyer Brown, Louis Siegel, Sam Goldsmith, Sam Zetzel and Arthur Woorow, all of Chelsea; Wolf Palace of Winthrop, and Sam Bigler, of Everett.

Henry and Weinstein, the indictments charge, were designated by the ring as the sole persons to whom liquor might be sold or delivered. Henry now is serving a sentence on a conviction for selling liquor. He was named in indictments returned some time ago against Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley, of Chelsea, and others for conspiracy to violate the Volstead act.

Rub It On At Bed-Time

For Deep Chest Colds

All colds should be treated with vapors, for vapors alone can carry the medication DIRECTLY to the air passages and lungs.

Vicks is a "vapor" treatment in salve form. For deep chest colds you first apply hot wet towels over throat and chest to open the pores, then massage briskly with Vicks for 5 minutes, spread on thickly and cover with a flannel cloth.

Vicks not only penetrates like a poultice or plaster, but the ingredients, vaporized by the body heat, are inhaled all night long. This double action usually checks the most stubborn cold overnight.

HOURIGAN BROS. 62-66 MAIN STREET

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Killingly, Plainfield and Brooklyn will participate in Old Ironsides Week. This is not just another one of those "weeks" boosting something or celebrating something. It involves a nation-wide effort on the part of the Order of Elks to interest the millions of school children of the nation in a plan to save the historic ship Constitution.

This effort is far removed from an "applesauce week." It will combine to heighten the historical interest of many hundreds of school children of this and surrounding towns, arouse their interest in a remarkable relic of the early and struggling days of the nation's history and afford them an opportunity to contribute to a fund that is being raised to rebuild Old Ironsides, now rotting in Boston Harbor.

With this plan in mind, Elks the country over, with the approval of Curtis D. Wilbur, secretary of the navy, will impress bring the matter before school children. Here in Killingly Sidney P. Marland and Louis E. Kennedy have the matter in charge, in Brooklyn Frank M. Bedard will act for the order and in Moosup Henry King will be in charge.

Schools of the town will be visited. An address telling of Old Ironsides thrilling history will be made to pupils. Old Ironsides, the famous poem written by Oliver Wendell Holmes upon another occasion when Old Ironsides seemed to be towed to sea and abandoned to the God of Storms, will be recited and patriotic songs sung.

No great gift is anticipated from any child. The tot with a few pennies may have a share in the effort to raise $500,000 for the preservation of Old Ironsides. All may give according to their means.

October 19-24 is Old Ironsides Week. In that period the hearts of many a child in this and surrounding towns will thrill at the relation of the heroic deeds of Old Ironsides and her gallant crews, of how she battled the Guerriere, pride of the British navy in the war of 1812, and conquered her captain and crew, and of many other exploits now set down among the most glowing pages of American history.

A late fall and winter series of boxing bouts is being arranged by Promoter Frank Barber of the Casino arena. This season the amateurs are to have their fling at gaining fistic prominence and entertaining the multitude. Mr. Barber believes, and many agree with him, that there will be great interest in seeing the amateurs in action.

That the idea may be properly introduced, Mr. Barber has booked a card of eight bouts for an evening the latter part of this month. All but two of the contestants will come here from different cities of the state, some from New Haven, some from Waterbury, some from Hartford. Sunny Mays and Young Major are the only local representatives on the card. The others are Ray Strong, Allie Gretta, Jake Golberg, Jakie Reniese, Danny Doran, Clarence Whiting, Iron Man Collins, Dave Wilson, Wee Wee Angelo, Kid Tiger and Young Sully. All are members of the Amateur Athletic union.

Kid Tiger and Young Sully should be a wow. Each weighs 69 pounds—they rate as pin weights—and as fast as flashing lights.

"Never advise anyone to say Woof to a bear" an indignant man proclaimed Thursday, citing this column's suggestion that this might be done if one encountered one of the bears reported seen near North Sterling. "I said 'Woof' once to a great lumbering, hairy thing I encountered in heavily wooded country and received a wallop on the jaw for my pains, because you see I had wooed at a burly lumberjack who hadn't had a shave all winter." "He was a bear of a man, all right, but not much of a man of a bear."

If and when trolley service is discontinued through Danielson, operation of the Connecticut company's power plant at the Dyer dam will not be abandoned. This plant is valuable in the development of power for other lines on the system, especially the Norwich line, and in any case could be put to use, if opportunity offered by the Eastern Connecticut Power company, whose commercial electrical business is constantly increasing in this territory.

Another new bus for use by Herbert J. Barnett, operating lines between Providence and Willimantic and with service to Hartford, has been received here and was being inspected with interest Thursday. This bus conveniently and comfortably seats 27 people in addition to the driver. The seats are of the comfort chair type and are leather upholstered. The bus has front and rear exits and many appointments to make such a vehicle a pleasure to travel in. It is to be added to the Barnett fleet of busses.

There were no developments Thursday, Coroner Arthur G. Bill said, in the matter of the mysterious death of William Willoughby of Canterbury. No report has been received on the stomach analysis being made for the state.

Recently an aeroplane swooped down from the sky and made a landing on the Bush Hill farm, property of Morton Otis, in the western part of the town of Brooklyn. Edward Moran, Jr., whose parents live on the farm, was invited to ride to Boston with the aviator, accepted and was amazed to find that the trip reuired only 45 minutes. Mr. Moran returned by train.

Mr. Varieur leaves two daughters, Mrs. Vachon and Mrs. Eugene Champigny of Pawtucket and two sons, William Varieur of Wauregan and Octave Varieur of New Bedford.

Damase Lacombe, 42, died Thursday morning at his home in the Evans block. Mr. Lacombe had been ill for some time, but his death was unexpected. His condition became critical during Thursday morning and he passed away just as a physician came to attend him. Mr. Lacombe was a native of Canada. He was proprietor of a small business place in Furnace, near the plant of the Puco Mfg. Co. He leaves his wife and six children.

Physicians who came here Thursday for the semi-annual meeting of the Windham County Medical society, at the Attawaugan hotel, and the local physicians found the meeting of interest and value.

Just before ten o'clock Thursday morning a section of new concrete was connected up with the old concrete roadway at Morin avenue. Several one sections of new cement highway are now in between Morin avenue and the bridge at Elmville, a distance of a little more than a mile. None of the new cement roadway has been used as yet, one-way traffic being the rule.

PUTNAM

The fine spirit of enthusiasm for and interest in the dedication of the Memorial bridge no Armistice Day was shown by the attendance at the meeting of the Citizens' committee at the Chamber of Commerce rooms last evening. There were 30 present and the meeting lasted until a late hour. T. H. deCoudres presided.

A roll call of the representatives of the civic societies brought out the following facts:

That the members of the Putnam Lodge of Elks would take part in the parade and that they had engaged a band, The Kilties' Band, of Boston.

That Israel Putnam Lodge of Odd Fellows would have more than 200 in line and that they had secured their own band, consisting of 25 pieces.

Cargill Council, Knights of Columbus, had secured a band and they will have a large representation of their membership in the parade.

Alex Gilman reported that the French societies of the city had decided to combine for the day and march as one body, with their own band leading. The Men in full uniform will be one of the spectacular features of the parade and they also have engaged a band.

With the band of the 192nd regiment which has been ordered here for that day, there will be six bands in line. They alone would constitute a fair sized parade as the military musical organization numbers 45 men.

Captain McGarry speaking for the Eagles, said that they intended to march, but that he could give no estimate of the number they would have in line. Ralph C. Jenkins stated that the Rotary club, numbered 30, would be found in the parade, that the only possible defection would be those who were engaged in some other duty in connection with the affair. Putnam Boy Scouts, 36 in all, will be among the marchers.

Michael L. White made an interesting statement regarding the Legion. Inspired, he said, by the movement started by the Chamber of Commerce and backed up by other business and civic organizations, Anselm Mayotte Post, which had not bee nfunctioning for the past two years had effected a reorganization Monday evening and elected a full complement of officers. (Mr. White was elected commander.) While their membership was still small, he said, they expected to grow rapidly and the Post would march in a body in the bridge dedication parade.

Dr. Perry supplemented this by saying that after the post meeting they had had a conference with other ex-service men, who had been called to meet at the same place, but an hour later, and that all the ex-service men had decided to march together, under the Legion banner. Ernest J. Durand was made marshal of the service men's division, and Rosario Beausoleil will have charge of the firing squad. Kenneth C. Sharpe and M. L. White were named as the Legion's representatives on the general committee.

Frank L. Davis, county agent, made the statement that the annual meeting of the Windham County Farmers association would be held on the morning of November 11th; that although the members were from all parts of the county he thought that they would march in the parade, as a mark of respect to the war veterans of Putnam.

Walter N. King, with a representative from the W. R. C. the D. A. R., the Order of Rebekahs and the members of the Eastern Star will have charge of the preparation and serving of luncheon to the out-of-town marching delegations.

It was decided to have the reviewing stand on School street near the corner of Providence street. It will be built to accommodate 100. Besides Governor John H. Trumbull and the many other distinguished visitors who will be here, places will be provided for the the veterans of the Civil war. Of the 13 survivors in Putnam the belief was expressed that eight would probably be able to take part to this extent in the exercises. Of these eight, two have been blind for several years, Major Jerome Tourtelotte and George Whitney. In nearby towns there are three Civil war veterans, who may be able to attend, probably none in Woodstock and none in Thompson.

The speakers' stand will be erected in the business center of the city, at the intersection of Main, Pomfret and Front streets, just in front of the Citizens' National bank. Automobile traffic will be diverted to other streets during the afternoon. The location will accommodate thousands. For the benefit of the speakers Ralph C. Jenkins was delegated to botain information as to the cost of an amplifying system for the day. In response to inquiries he learned that it would mean an outlay of from $300 to $500, so that this idea will no doubt be abandoned.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Prince, parents of Fred and Earl Prince, jewelers, are on a visit to Montreal. In a few weeks they expect to return to Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cole and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Sherman of Milbury, expects to leave Friday for Florida. Mr. Cole owns several building lots there, bought before the present boom, on which sites he purposes to erect houses. One of these he will occupy.

W. S. Johnson left Tuesday night for Tampa, Florida, where he has a winter home, his health has not been good recently and he is anxious to escape the rigors of a New England winter. He is the father-in-law of Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald.

Mrs. Morasse, formerly of Putnam, widow of Dr. L. O. Morasse, was married at Bangor, Maine Wednesday October 14, to Harry C. Kelly. Mr Kelley is manager of the Yankee Shop in the Kaminsky and Wulf block, in this city, also of the Yankee shops in Southbridge and Marlboro, Mass.

The mid-week meeting of the Baptist church was held Tuesday evening of this week instead of Thursday as usual.

Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock Rho Delta class of the Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. Clarence E. Heath on Walnut street. This (Friday) afternoon the Ladies' Aid society of the same church is to meet at the home of Mrs. William Taylor.

There was a large attendance this week at the meeting of Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter D. A. R., and the program was a very interesting one. Mrs. Mary B Bishop gave a report of the state meeting which she attended. One of the interesting points in her talk was the fact that there are in the state but six chapters larger than the local one, which gained about 60 new members in the past year.

Mrs. E. M. Warner, formerly chairman of the Wolf Den committee, called attention to the fact that since the purchase of the Wolf Den property by the State Forestry Park commission, 94 acres adjoining had also been purchased by them and that a caretaker will be installed whose entire time will be given to the state holding in that vicinity.

Miss Crosby, vice regent was made chairman of a committee to have in charge the selling of the six per cent bonds to be issued to fund the building of the new Auditorium in Washington.

The speaker of the afternoon, Miss Lucy C. Simonson, of New York, told of the founding and the work of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Miss Simonson told many pathetic incidents that are part of the lives of the children who are benefited by the work of this society. Its work of service and its wonderful achievements were clearly and concisely told. Miss Margaret Maher, with Miss Ash at the piano, played several violin selections.

Fred Green has returned to his home on School street, after a trip through the south.

The regular meeting and dinner of the Putnam Rotary club was postponed from Wednesday noon to this (Friday) evening, when it will be held at the Putnam Inn. It was put off to Friday as a number of men from Danielson who are interested in Rotary will be guests at the dinner, to learn what Rotary has done for Putnam. After the dinner there will be speaking and Rev. Simeon E. Cozard of Mansfield, Mass., former pastor of the Second Congregational church will tell the visitors what Rotary stands for.

Staff Sergt. Higdon, of Hartford, was present at the drill of the 43rd division headquatrers company and explained the nomenclature of a pistol.

Plans for the Armistice Day ball to be given by the Headquarters company are well under way. It is expected that the governor and his staff will be present and that the music for the evening will be furnished by the 169th orchestra.

Mrs. C. D. Arnold has returned from a week's trip to Detroit, where she attended the National Restaurant convention. Mrs. Arnold spoke on preparing and serving sea food.

Mrs. Mary B. Bishop was at New Britain to attend a state D. A. R. conference.

HUSTLING WORK AT PLANT OF THE BLOOM SILK CO.

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 15—Edward H. Bloom, of New York, has been in Putnam this week looking over the installation of the new machinery in the plant of The Bloom Silk company, formerly known as the Putnam Mfg. company.

It necessarily requires time to rig up new machines, putting them into operation as soon as they are in place, building new additions and other construction work. The power has also been changed, so that hereafter electricity will be the motive power. Superintendent Metcalf is a very busy man as he is supervising all operations and starting the machines as fast as they can be made ready, in order to fill rush orders.

WARM FLORIDA HOSPITALITY TOO MUCH FOR VISITORS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Oct. 15—Napoleon Cartier, of Providence, a dealer in roofing material, and a former resident of Putnam, has been visiting relatives here. He recently returned from a trip to Florida, which he said he had made at the insistence of relatives and friends. He went partly for a rest and partly to get a first-hand view of the state where fortunes were said to be made overnight. Before lunch on the first day that he was there he was approached by half a dozen agents who wanted to sell him lots "right on the beach." The second morning he was awakened at his room in the hotel and called down stairs by another persistant realtor. Telegrams had been sent to Providence and his business standing and financial worth investigated and he was not going to be allowed to escape without buying. He took the train north that evening. He is through with Florida. His vacations hereafter will be spent somewhere in the vicinity of home.

An out of town wedding that was attended by many Providence and East Providence people was that of Miss Hazel D. Bliss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram P. Bliss of East Providence, and Burton C. DEBTS AND LOANS

When the president makes it clear that this government will not give its approval to the making of loans through private sources to nations which have failed to settle their debts with this country it will probably not be lost upon those who are directly concerned.

Nations which have agreed to pay back what they borrowed during and after the war, and to pay a small rate of interest upon it have been able to get loans to aid them in meeting their financial problems. Extensive loans have been made to foreign countries in such a class within the past few years, and it is not improbable that they will continue. They have helped their credit by the manner in which they have dealt with their obligations.

It would certainly not be just to such countries if this government were to give its sanction to the extension of loans to other governments which have failed thus far to adjust their indebtedness.

It is not a pleasing situation when nations insist that they cannot pay their debts and a small rate of interest but make no bones about letting it be known that they want to borrow more money and are willing to promise to pay a rate of interest that will be twice as high for the new loan as they would be required to pay in paying off their existing indebtedness.

It is well that the president has set forth the position of this government upon that matter. Certainly nations which are paying their bills are entitled to more credit and encouragement than those who continue to stall and balk at repayments. The president hasn't undertaken to put the screw on but it is well to let it be known what the situation is and what can be expected. The situation can then be faced with a full knowledge of what lies ahead and what is the wiser course for all concerned to pursue.

THE DONAHUE GEMS

There will be a disposition to congratulate the Donahue's of New York on the recovery of their gems valued at $700,000, but there cannot be very much satisfaction in feeling that those who did the stealing are going to escape punishment, or that they have been paid for returning the loot and are going to be covered up and kept from the clutches of the law.

When the district attorney of New York denounces bargaining with thieves there will be much sympathy with his statement. The indications are those the authorities of the big city are anxious to locate and prosecute the guilty party but thus far the police have been kept completely in the dark. It was not through their efforts that the gems were located and returned. They have had no hand in it and so far as known do not know who did the job.

The deplorable fact in connection with this whole matter is that it stands just now as a big encouragement to just as many more such thefts as can be carried out. It is a case where a big haul was made and the impression is gained that those involved let it be known that the return of the valuables could be obtained by paying the price. At any rate those interested in getting the return of the pearls and diamonds had a chance in some manner to communicate with the owner or representatives and complete arrangements for the giving up of the treasures under some sort of an agreement.

This cannot be very pleasing to the police authorities. The district attorney is justified in denouncing any such deal, but it doesn't appear that the New York police have been able to make any headway either in running down the thieves or in getting any help in such a quest from the arrangements surrounding the deal. If those who are involved in such stealing can get away with clean skirts there isn't much to deter them from continuing to prey upon the public. There are however several excellent lessons to be gained from the Donahue case.

DEVELOPING AIRCRAFT

There are many things which the president's air board will be obliged to take into consideration as the result of the testimony that is given before it. It is there to hear all sides and to look at the situation from all angles.

Thus it will be bound to give attention to the statements which have been made by Chairman Madden of the house appropriations committee concerning the expenditures which are being made by the army and navy in developing aircraft from year to year and urging the importance of having airplanes for the government constructed by private capital under government contract, the maintenance of their own research laboratories falling upon the private concerns.

This is another way of calling attention to the waste and inefficiency which is too often encountered in the handling of such matters through government channels. It is known how expensive government operation of railroads has been and what it has cost the country. It is known how the country has suffered financially because of the manner in which the merchant marine has been handled and it is known that abroad flying activities are largely in the hands of concerns under private control but getting the benefit of government subsidies.

Chairman Madden may not have convinced the board that his recommendations should be adopted, but he has certainly advanced ideas which will doubtless justify the board in digging into before they are ready with their report and suggestions.

In working for the best in aircraft and in our air service the need of dealing with the facts as they exist cannot be ignored. If private concerns can produce aircraft of a much more satisfactory type at less expense and capable of providing greater national security it is time that serious consideration should be given to the matter. There is an opportunity for holding up to contrast the present and the suggested method and determining which will produce the best results.

PITTSBURGH WINS

Not much satisfaction was to be derived from the deciding game in the world's series. Many of the other contests have demonstrated much cleverer baseball but Pittsburgh piled up more runs than Washington and the championship goes to the Pirates, whose chances in the early part of the series were not bright.

Nevertheless Pittsburgh must be given credit for coming from behind and winning out by taking the last three games when the Senators had a lead of three to one, and even in the final contest to brace up and win when facing a score of four runs against them in the first inning.

It is unusual for the deciding game of such a championship series to be played in the rain. Neither team was able to do justice to itself. Baseball in the rain is never a good exhibition.

There was a widespread desire on the part of fandom to see Walter Johnson win the final game. He was sent in for that purpose and allowed to remain when others would have been recalled. While he pitched the entire game, and would have won with the right support, Pittsburgh, which has been blessed with an array of good pitchers which Washington has been handicapped, used four men in the box and the generalship in making the changes unquestionably figured in getting results.

Pittsburgh must be given credit for playing a masterly uphill game under discouraging conditions. Weather conditions made the deciding contest one which prevented the game being what such a meeting of champions should have been.

MOTOR TRUCK HIGHWAYS

It would hardly do to say what will or will not result in the next ten years in the way of highways for trucks. There have been so many and costly changes in the past, so much progress in transportation and so many developments in science that one is inclined to prophecy rather than deny. And yet when an automobile engineer declares that there will be truck lines for motor trucks between cities with banked curves and no grade crossings and tractors will be drawing long lines of trailers over these specially constructed roads within a decade it taxes the imagination.

Certainly there has been a tendency in that direction, but it takes time to build such roads and it requires funds also. To say that the money and the time for the necessary work will be provided within the next ten years is assuming a good deal. The engineer labors under the belief in the first place that the public is going to dig down into its pockets and stand the expense of such an outlay. He doesn't at least hint that there will be large corporations organized for the purpose of building such roads the same as the railroads have done in the past, and yet there is the impression that if such truck highways are to be constructed that there will be a demand on the part of the taxpayers that such a course be followed.

The use of motor trucks has greatly increased. It can be expected to continue. Railroads are using them and busses for transportation purposes over short distances. There is no question but what such vehicles will increase in number decidedly in the next ten years, but when an engineer claims that there will be such a transformation in ten years he will never be charged with being a pessimist.

IN A PERMANENT GLARE.

It's a grand thing to be unimportant, most especially because it means freedom! If nobody in the world is paying any special attention to you, you can be just yourself—than which I don't know anything nicer nor more comfortable!

There were a lot of women at that afternoon card party and some wore new spring clothes and others the same old gowns they had appeared in at parties all winter and nobody cared. A lovely time was being had by all—till the whisper went around—that woman over there at the third table by the piano, the one with the jade green hat, see, she's looking the other way now, why she's Mrs. Lamphery B. Minnow! No—really! . . .

"Oh," hissed everybody delightedly, "oh, I've always wanted to see that woman above all others! I've always wondered what she looked like and all about her!"

We have all read about Mrs. Minnow. Nobody confronted with almost any issue of a newspaper could avoid reading about the lady. Always some incident about the Lamphery B. Minnow millions or balls or European dashes, Palm Beach week-ends, country places, weddings, debuts or charities pops out at you. When a list of patronesses is made out they use a rubber stamp with her name as a matter of course, and whenever there is any important movement Mrs. Minnow leads the van. It is on the principal of rolling a snowball down hill—once it is started it has to keep on travelling. There's no help for it.

"She's got her hair bobbed," breathed somebody. "And she's no kitten! Why, I shouldn't dare wear a jade hat! It's a perfectly plain felt but it looks like $50 and I'd like to know why!"

"There are 11 colors in that dress," reported somebody else, "and yet it looks all right—it never saw the light of day anywhere but in Paris! Somehow it goes all right with her face—and I look as young as she does, but I shouldn't dream of wearing one of those explosive figured crepes! How does she do it? Her nose is too big. Did you hear that he husband—"

"Look! She's got on just one ring and it is a pear-shaped diamond little finger ring miles big. She's got homely hands. They say she—"

"She has three limousines, because she gets tired of always riding in the same one," contributed somebody else. "She must be cranky—"

"She looks as though she had a temper—"

"When she laughs it changes her whole expression but—"

"Do you suppose those earrings are real? They must—"

Maybe she is used to this excited atmosphere about her. Perhaps she really enjoys it. It may be the wine of life to her to have the populace count her every breath and there may be some great satisfaction in knowing that people are waiting to see which way she jumps before they, too, hop off—but it must be a strain.

She never in the world can enjoy the luxury of a frank yawn or say "Gracious, I forgot to give my shoes a brush, hope nobody looks at 'em!" Everybody looks at her shoes and speculates where she buys them. Everybody wonders what she is going to do about this or that, why she does it and what she means by it. If she is generous then folks say it is a grandstand play, and if she divorces her husband the spectators know all about it down to the number of buttons on his newest evening vest and the family brand of tooth paste. Mrs. Lamphrey B. Minnow has just as much privacy, personal mental and spiritual as the much overworked goldfish and somehow the older you grow the more you prize cheerful obscurity.

"Well," said the irrepressible member of the clinic after we had said everything else sayable, "no matter how much she might want to, the poor thing, never in the world would dare prowl around her own ice box looking for a stray piece of apple pie left over from the night before, or something like that! Not with a chef and sixteen servants watching her!"

There's a good deal in that!

Stories That Recall Others

Politeness Personified.

A small dirty faced and rather ragged urchin sauntered into a business office and without permission began rattling the keys of the typewriter at a great rate.

"Here, sonny, you can't monkey with that typewriter. You'll break it," said the office manager.

"Where do you get that stuff," replied the boy as he employed the "hunt and pick" system. "I've got work to do."

Nevertheless the boy was ushered out of the office only to appear shortly at another part of the office at another typewriter.

"Just why do you want to use one of our typewriters," the office manager asked the boy who was the center of attraction.

"Well, it's this way," the lad replied. "I got a letter from this store and it was typewritten. Now I wanna be polite, and I do not write a good hand yet, so I gotta use a typewriter."

The boy finished his letter.

Resourcefulness

Three travelling men were together at the hotel. One was using his typewriter in some work that had to be finished that night. A spring broke, and being 10 o'clock it was impossible to get a public stenographer. The long flat spring broke and could not be wound up.

The owner fussed around and tried to make temporary repairs. Another of the trio looked the situation over. He drew forth a match and held one end of the spring over the flame. Another suggested the candle. This was employed and the end of the spring heated until the temper was gone. Then it could be bent and anchored. This was done and within 20 minutes after the break the mill was once more grinding again.

LEE & OSGOOD CO.

From Small Beginnings

General U. S. Grant, the Great General

On an Ohio farm a sturdy, muscular, ruddy-faced boy worked day after day helping his father in the rough work of the farm. The passers-by who saw the lad saw in him only an ordinary farmer's son, tanned and healthy, a boy doomed, they perhaps thought, to a life of hard work on the soil. They may have noticed that he was quiet and had little to do with his neighbors. He would grow up, apparently, into a reserved, taciturn farmer.

There was one characteristic that people noticed. The boy could control horses. He was fearless and had the instinct of authority. He bent the creature to his will and made them do what he wished. His quiet willingness to work, his manly respect for his father, and his power over horses were worth noticing.

Army life attracted him and through the influence of friends he gained an appointment to West Point. There the farmer's boy found that his preparation was less solid than that of many of his fellow scholars. There were 20 boys in his class who surpassed him in scholarship, but not one could equal him in managing a horse. He had power and courage. Those two characteristics marked him all through his life.

The young cadet went almost directly from his studies into the battles of the Mexican war. There he commanded men so well that he was promoted both for quick thought and for personal bravery. The war over he found himself stranded in the dullness of barrack life. He left the army and became what his friends called a failure, a small farmer, a store clerk, a hauler of wood, a common laborer, but he kept doggedly at work and made no complaint.

When the Civil war came he volunteered at once, but few weeks he could find no place for his ability. Great men refused to see him. Finally, he was given command of a regiment. He handled the soldiers as he had handled horses. They gave him armies to command, and he handled them with the same grim power. His dogged, quiet, unassuming, masterful control led to victory. No honor was too great to give him then, and he became president. Perhaps he won his greatest victory when, suffering from cancer, day after day he wrote his autobiography to gain money for the support of his family. The writ of the farmer's boy endured to the last breath.

Rider 210 Pounds; Horse Wins

During a recent running race in Australia, Rioseben, a rider weighing 210 pounds and won his race, much to the astonishment of race track followers. It is the first time this animal had ever won a race carrying more than 147 pounds of rider. The race was for five furlongs and the weight was considered staggering by most horsemen.

Ignorance hurts less than the knowledge of things we don't know.

BARBED TROUT LIVE IN DROUGHT IN WET SAND, KANSAN REPORTS

State Game Warden, J. B. Doze, of Kansas, tells a very interesting fish story that is true, says The Topeka Capital.

Many fish culturists have often wondered where the barbed trout (channel cat) go to, when the Arkansas river goes dry, which it does at certain times of the year.

Ed O'Brien, a sportsman of note and a game warden was at Great Bend last week and tells the secret. A man there had a sand boat in the bed of the Arkansas river. When the water went down he was required to use a scrapper and remove a lot of sand from the side of his boat. After he had dug down a few feet in the river sand he unearthed several hundred channel cat. It was discovered that the fish dig deep into the wet sand below, thus preserving their lives.

This makes these fish more valuable in Kansas streams on account of their ability to take care of themselves in dry seasons, says the fish man.

Superstitious Fear Sneeze

Why, when a peson sneezes, do we says "Bless you?"

From time beyond record the sneeze has the world over been associated with the supernatural, says "Brief Stories."

In some countries it was regarded as an omen or warning of some coming disaster only to be averted by prayer. In others, it was thought that at the moment of the sneeze, the soul temporarily left the body. In others, again to sneeze, presaged sudden death!

In our own Christian times, it is said that there was once a plague in which the sneeze was the fatal symptom, and therefore called for a special prayer. It is more probable, however, that the "Bless you" is a Christianized form of some old superstition which itself has been forgotten.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SOLVING CROSS-WORD PUZZLES

Start out by filling in the words of which you feel reasonably sure. These will give you a clue to other words crossing them, and they in turn to still others. A letter belongs in each white space, words starting at the numbered squares and running either horizontally or vertically or both.

The Effect of Example

We scatter seeds with careless hand,
And dream we ne'er shall see them more;
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears,
In weeds that mar the land,
Or healthful shore.

The deeds we do, the words we say,—
Into still air they seem to fleet.
We count them ever past,
But they shall last,—
In the dread judgment they
And we shall meet.

I charge thee by the years gone by
For the love's sake of brethren dear,
Keep thou the one true way,
In work and play,
Lest in that world their cry
Of woe thou hear.

—John Keble.

ENGLAND'S BIGGEST LOCOMOTIVE DOES WORK OF FOUR ON GRADE

England's biggest locomotive of the Garratt type has been brought into commission on one of the heaviest stretches of track in this country—the three-mile section of the London and North-Eastern Railway between Wentworth Junction, near Barnsley, Yorks, says The London Mail.

Inspector Skinner, of the L. and N. E. R. locomotive department, Sheffield, who is superintending the locomotive's early works, stated that four engines—two at each end—were formerly needed to take a train up the gradient referred to, the journey occupying 25 minutes. The Garratt does the work on an average in seventeen minutes.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Prolific Squash Seeds

At East Hampton the seeds of a single Cromwell squash found the soil very fertile. Planted by Chauncey Nichols in the spring they have yielded enough squash to fill three ox carts. The seeds were given Mr. Nichols last year by a Cromwell friend.

Why doesn't the woman who married a poor man for love want her daughter to do likewise

THAMESVILLE IS TO PETITION FOR EARLIER POLICE PROTECTION

Stirred up by several attempted burglaries which residents of Thamesville say have been made in this neighborhood within a week, as well as by the activities of a "Peeping Tom," who has thrown a scare into several families recently, householders in that section of the city are preparing to present a petition to the common council for earlier police protection at night.

Two of the houses where burglary attempts are reported to have been made recently at the store of Patrick Brown at 234 West Thames street and at the home of A. A. Guile, 6 Kinney ave., but police authorities stated Thursday night that no report of burglary attempts had been received by the department.

At the present time the police officer covering the Thamesville beat goes on duty at 10 o'clock at night and it is claimed by Thamesville residents that there ought to be earlier police protection for that territory. It is believed that the alleged burglary attempts have been made in that part of the night and it is argued that a policeman ought to be on duty sooner than 10 o'clock so that he could keep an active watch in the neighborhood all through the evening in order to give no time when law breakers might have a free field to operate without fear of interruption.

It is understood that the petition will be prepared in time to be presented to the November meeting of the common council.

WILL LAY CORNERSTONE AT STORRS SATURDAY

The annual football game between the Connecticut and Massachusetts Agricultural colleges will be played at 2.30 o'clock.

The guests will gather for luncheon at the dining room of the college at noon. The luncheon over, exercises will start at the site of the community house, Charles L. Beach, president of the Connecticut Agricultural college, will be chairman. Protestants, Jews and Catholics will participate in the exercises. Rev. Hawthorne Jones of Mansfield Center will deliver the invocation. Rev. Dr. L. H. Dorchester of Hartford, president of the Connecticut Federation of Churches, will lay the cornerstone, with appropriate remarks. Mrs. I. G. Davis will speak for the Storrs Woman's club, Joseph Merrow of Hartford will explain the Storrs background, Professor C. A. Wheeler of the college will speak for the Connecticut State Grange, Rev. To date the contributors to the Storrs church and Community house fund number over 650. Enough money is available for the community house, which is to cost in the neighborhood of $75,000. A fund of $300,000 is being sought for the entire project. After the completion of the community house and as soon as the money is available, work will be started on the new Storrs church to replace the existing edifice, which is too old and too small to cope with the needs of the college community. The church building will require $150,000 and the additional $75,000 will form an endowment fund to provide for maintenance.

COURT OF HONOR FOR NORWICH SCOUTS

One of the most interesting and instructive courts of honor held by the Norwich Boy Scout council was held Wednesday evening at the police court room. President Henry A. Tirrell presided at the meeting which was attended by Edwin V. Ross, president of the Norwich Boy Scout council, Chairman E. A. Harris of the camp committee, C. A. Gager, Max Hanover, John B. Stanton, Frank I. Royce, Carl Hedler of Taftville and others.

The meeting opened with assembly blown by Bugler Tom Baldwin followed by the Scout salute to the court and invocation by Rev. Edwin G. Crowdis, pastor of the Taftville Congregational church. Max Hanover, vice president of the scout council, addressed the gathering as follows:

I am glad to see so many Norwich Boy Scouts here. I am delighted with your good behavior. You all have a spirit of enthusiasm depicted on your faces. I am particularly delighted because of your healthy appearance. I believe that a healthy body is essential to good scouting and I know that the Scout movement helps build healthy boys. A healthy Boy Scout grows into a healthy citizen, fully able to put into practice a full measure of patriotism.

While speaking to you boys it may be in order to tell you that our forefathers lived a noble life and made many sacrifices for our country. They, the citizens of yesterday felt the responsibility for good citizenship and owing to their effort noble America of today was made possible.

The citizen of today is proud of his heritage, but he must go a step further in living up to the calibre and requirement of present day America; because our country has made tremendous advances physically, materially and spiritually. And you boys who will supplant us in the citizenship of tomorrow will have to bear the responsibility of defending the glory of American citizenship.

I know of no other medium that builds such a firm foundation for our new citizenship as the Boy Scout institution and I am confident that as time goes on the American people will realize its value and significance and they will make scouting one of the foremost institutions in the United States. I know that you boys will be true to your oath and the citizens of Norwich are, and well proud of their Boy Scouts.

The announcement of the names of Scouts attaining the first class since the last court of honor was made by Scout Executive Benton as follows:

Troop No. 12—Billy Agnew.

Troop No. 1—Willimantic, Mitchell Haddad.

The examination of merit badge candidates then took place, being conducted by President Tirrell. Many questions were asked by the examiners and a great variety of merit badges being awarded. In this part of the programme, Scouts described the rigid tests required in swimming, pioneering, manual training, gardening, dairying and many other important lines of activity, accrediting themselves admirably and intensely interesting the members of the court. Much of the work was done last summer at the camp, where Scouts had an opportunity of doing an intensive work. It is hoped many more will continue their studies for merit badges.

The merit badges were presented as follows:

Troop No. 20, Irving C. Manning—Automobiling, carpentry, cycling, craft work, wood, first aid in animals, gardening, masonry, painting, pioneering, scholarship, star badge.

Scout Executive F. A. Benton, archery.

Camp Tippecan awards were made by Scout Executive Benton. These were an order for photographic films awarded Donald Royce, Troop No. 9, for the best photography at the camp, an official scout knife was awarded Harold Linderson, scoutmaster of Troop No. 3, Taftville, in recognition of his troop having the largest representation in camp.

The history of archery dates as far back as the history of man. Ulysses made a bow of two ibex horns joined in the middle that only he could bend, and the faithful Penelope waiting for his return from far off Troy, and besieged by suitors, promised her hand to the man who could shoot Ulysses' bow, well knowing that not one of them could do it. The story of his return after ten years of weary wandering and how he proved his identity and demonstrated his prowess is well known. The ancient Egyptians were skilled in the use of the bow and it has been depicted on their ancient monuments. The Persians, the Taracians, and the Scythians were adepts in archery. The Coretans experts also. The great armies of Cyrus and Xerxes were made up largely of bow men. The Greeks and Romans did not use the bow to any great extent, but their auxiliary forces were composed of archers and slingers. China and India knew its use.

Coming down to medieval times, the Normans and Burgundians were formidable in the battlefield and in 1066, William, the Norman conqueror of England owed his success quite as much to his archers as to the heavy battle axe, for at the battle of Hastings "arrows fell as thick as hail." Following the Norman conquest, the English perfected the long bow and won the battles of Crecy Poitiers and Agin court against the knighthood of Europe, and chivalry received a crushing blow from the yeoman archers of Britain.

The American Indian particularly the Chippewas and Sioux of the Plains and the Comanches and Apaches with their short bows hunted quail and buffalo doing great execution therewith. One method of the Indian was to lie on his back on the ground with his feet in the air, holding the string with his fingers and pressing his feet against the wood in shooting birds. He used a short bow particularly on horseback while hunting buffalo, as a long bow would be clumsy and in his way. He has been known to shoot an arrow clear through the body of a buffalo.

But to return to the English bowmen by whom the long bow received its greatest perfection. The long bow was as long as a man and the arrow half as long as his bow. The "cloth yard shaft" was pointed with metal and feathered with goose feathers, and woe betide the enemy who came within bow shot for at 200 yards only the most perfect armor of Spain could resist his shaft. In ordinary armor the arrow pierced the breast plate, passed through the man's body and out through the armor at the back.

At archery contests the range was 300 yards, the target a clout, or wand as thick as a man's thumb and five feet long. To miss the target was considered a disgrace.

"The White Company" by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle gives vivid pictures of the important part played by the long bow in European history. Maurice Thompson's "Witchery of Archery" is a classic on the subject. The Boy Scout Merit Badge pamphlet on "Archery" tells how to construct the bow and arrow. Robin-Hood and his merry men outwitted the Sheriff of Nottingham many times and the twang of his bow string made many an evil doer quail. Douglas Fairbanks has at the present time brought back to us the romanticism of those days and acquired some of the skill of the heroic outlaw. Maurice Thompson and his brother, Will, during the middle of the last century and Harry Jordan of Maine, and Scout Lagat of Rome, New York, are skillful archers of the present.

In America there are many good bow woods as Oregon yew, lemon wood, red cedar, osage orange, hickory, ash, sassafras, etc. The bow maker is called a "bowyer" and an arrow maker a "fletcher," quite as much skill being required to make a good arrow as a good bow.

Many hunters have given up the gun for the bow and arrow, because they found themselves classed as "killers." A gun in the hands of a boy can do as much execution as when used by a man, but with the bow the game has a chance, much more skill and strength being required to bring down an animal with the latter. The danger involved if the arrow misses is greater than if the bullet failed and so the hunter kills a smaller bag and gets a greater thrill.

The scouts repeated the pledge of allegiance to the flag which was followed by formal notices by Scout Executive Benton. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. Mr. Crowdis and was followed by the blowing of Taps by Bugler Tom Baldwin.

A very interesting display of bows and arrows was shown at the close of the court. Scout Executive Benton explained the uses of the various arrows, rules of archery and construction of the bow. A fine beeskin coat by Harry Jordan from Maine, which he shot with bow and arrow, was also on exhibition.

PIECARZ LOSES SUIT BROUGHT AGAINST COLCHESTER

Judgment for the defendant was rendered by Judge Allyn L. Brown in the superior court at New London Thursday in the case of Joseph Piecarz against the town of Colchester. The plaintiff sued to force the town to open a road leading to a bridge which before its destruction spanned a body of water known as Pond brook on the other side of which the plaintiff owned and dwelt on the property. A motion for non-suit by the defendant was denied Thursday morning.

Judge Brown in making decision suggested that the town however open the road and Attorney Frank L. McGuire, who with Attorney Charles H. Hull appeared for the defendant town stated that it was because of the litigation that had pended in the past that the town had been advised to do nothing about opening the road which had been posted as closed. Attorney George Curtis Morgan and Attorney Abel P. Tanner appeared for the plaintiff.

GIVES PRINTING TALK BEFORE NORWICH LIONS

The Norwich Lions club held its regular weekly luncheon-meeting Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with the usual large attendance and with President William A. Anderson in the chair. J. B. Caron was the song leader for the meeting. President Anderson, on behalf of the club, welcomed as a new member, Edward L. McAvoy, manager of the Palace theatre. The entertainment committee announced that the club is to present a musical comedy during the latter part of November under the direction of the John B. Rogers Production Co.

The attention of the club was called by Max Hanover to the banquet to be held Friday evening in Worcester, in honor of the International Lions board of directors. Several of the local Lions are planning to attend the banquet and will leave here at 4:30 in the afternoon for Worcester.

There was a general discussion relative to increasing the membership of the Lions club and it was decided to hold an attendance contest in November. Louis Fontaine, John Barry and George Madden were appointed a committee to work with similar committees from other organizations on the Go-to-Church-Week project which is to be conducted in the city soon.

Jean Kieffer, chairman of the entertainment committee, presented as the five minute speaker Herbert Corey, who gave a brief talk on Printing—Then and Now. In part he said:

Printing is one of the oldest, if not the oldest trades known to mankind. History tells us that the early people carved signs, characters or illustrations in wood or rough stone.

But in the year 1440, a German named Gutenberg, conceived the idea of using movable blocks put in a press which constituted the first great advance in this art. Printing then spread to Italy, where a monk near Rome hired two craftsmen from Germany to produce Latin classics. From there, printing spread rapidly to all parts of Europe—France, England, Switzerland and Holland principally.

The first printing press in our part of the United States was brought from England in 1638 by Stephen Daye, and set up in Cambridge, Mass., from where, a year or so later, it went to New London, and from thence right here to Norwich. At the present time it is now preserved in the state capitol at Montpelier, Vermont, where it was moved to from here. The most famous of the early American printers were Benjamin Franklin, the publisher of the Poor Richard's Almanac and founder of the Saturday Evening Post, one of the largest selling magazines in America today.

Printing in our own country today, although it represents a distinct style, has without question, received its inspiration, like our architecture, from the old European masters.

Mechanically, the art has made rapid strides also. From carving out letters in wood or stone, we have now, machines that automatically cast these letters with but a touch from the hand. In the early days, the presses in use were made of wood, and worked by hand, a very long and tiresome procedure. In these modern times, we have presses which know not the aid of human hand, with the exception of starting and stopping.

There is not the faintest doubt that printing occupies one of the most important places in the life of the world today either business or social. You business men rely on the printed word to advertise and sell your wares; you rely on newspapers to give you information concerning local happenings and the doings of the outside world. Without printing of some kind this world would retard instead of progress.

Mr. Kieffer entertained with a vocal solo. The speaker next week will be Louis Hawkins and William R. Frisbie will be the song leader. As usual the meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

LETTER CARRIER BROWNE ON RETIRED LIST

Another veteran of the Norwich postal service, William T. Browne, carrier on the route covering the central part of the business district of the city, has been withdrawn from the service through the operation of the retirement regulations of the postal department.

Mr. Browne went on the retired list last Saturday, ending approximately 30 years in the service, of which three years was as a substitute and 27 years as a regular carrier. Wherever he has served, the patrons on his routes bear testimony to the faithful, obliging and always satisfactory service which he has rendered and his record has made him one of the honor men of the local post office staff.

Mr. Browne was appointed in 1894 as a substitute when Stephen H. Hall was postmaster, becoming a regular carrier four years later. His early service was on the Greeneville route, where he was carrier for seven years, and was then shifted to the Washington street route. Here his term continued for 14 or 15 years, the route at first covering Washington street as far as Sachem street and over Jail Hill. Later it was extended to Harland corner and was always a territory for which there was plenty of mail to be carried, the regular letter mail being augmented largely by magazines and periodicals in the later years. For the last five years he had been covering the business district route where he had three deliveries and three collections daily.

When he began his service there were eight carriers from the Norwich post office. Now there are 21. Besides Mr. Hall he has served under three other postmasters, William Cruthers, John P. Murphy and the present Postmaster Casper K. Bailey.

Carrier John W. Ruseleden has been assigned to the business district route in place of Mr. Browne and James Redden, who has been a substitute, has been made a regular carrier to fill the vacancy in the force.

Suit against John Dubriel of Norwich has been brought in the superior court by The Shetucket Coal and Lumber Co., to collect a claim for $2,242.72 dated Sept. 28, 1925. The suit is returnable in November.

PITTSBURGH GAINS PEAK IN BASEBALL WORLD IN GRUELLING STRUGGLE

Buccaneers Slug Their Way to Front When All Hopes Seem Lost—Johnson Unable to Silence the Big Guns of Pirates as They Bombard Him—Max Carey and Kiki Cuyler Carve Niche in Baseball History—Game Was Played Under Most Trying Conditions and Was Dramatic Thoroughout.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Pirates rule the baseball world for the first time in sixteen years, tonight.

Through the haze of a rain-soaked, furiously dramatic struggle on Forbes field this afternoon, these ruthless buccaneers—Pittsburgh's national league titleholders—beat down the resistance of their greatest foeman, Walter Johnson, and defeated Washington by a score of 9 to 7 in the seventh and deciding game of the world's series.

Fans in Frenzy

Forty-two thousand frenzied fans fired to a high pitch of enthusiasm watched this terrific hand to hand fight under adverse weather conditions, which have few if any parallels in championship annals. They looked on, then broke loose afterward in a wild demonstration of joy.

Breaking through the wire screens to swarm on the field where the Pirate attack dominant and dashing similarly has broken through all barriers to drive the Senators from the baseball heights and complete the greatest come-back any series has ever known.

Cuyler the Hero

In the final rush over the Washington ramparts, Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, a dark-browed, dashing young freebooter, struck the blow that decided the battle—a two-base thrust down the right field foul line in the eighth inning, with the bases full, two out and the score deadlocked, bringing over Carson Bigbee and Eddie Moore with the deciding runs and frustrating the greatest goal of the old master, Johnson.

Cuyler's smash, a drive that at first seemed labelled a home run, then was held to two bases under ground rules because the ball buried itself in a pile of tarpaulin in deep right field —came at the crucial moment of the conflict. It was the climax of a succession of battering onslaughts against Johnson that had pulled the Pirates back to even terms after it seemed they had almost thrown the game away in a hectic first inning through the collapse of their pitching star, Vic Aldridge, and loopholes in their defense.

Pirates Start to Fight

Once they had survived that disastrous first, in which Washington gained a four-run lead and Aldridge had given way to Johnny Morrison, the Pirates fought ahead with every weapon at their command. Trailing but always fighting back, as a steady barrage enveloped Johnson, the buccaneers tied the score in the seventh inning, then fought their way to the front in the decisive eighth after Peckinpaugh's home run had put the Senators back into the lead.

This terrific attack, with the youthful Cuyler and the veteran Max Carey as its forefoot figures, was the chief factor in the downfall of Johnson and the Senators, but in the final analysis it was also due to the fielding weakness of Peckinpaugh, whose two errors came at critical junctures of Pirate rallies in the seventh and eighth, as well as to the relief pitching of Ray Kremer, who held the Senators to one hit in four innings after relieving Morrison and Rube Oldham, who blanked the former champions in the ninth, striking out Rice and Goslin in a flourishing finish that sent the big crowd on to the muddy field in ecstacies.

These were the high spots of a battle jammed with thrills from start to finish, the major elements of a struggle that flashed in relief against a murky, rain-drenched background while the champions of two major leagues fought it out for supremacy in the mud and drizzling shower that fell almost continuously.

It was in such a setting that the Pirates, battered out their third straight victory over the Senators, completing their startling comeback after it seemed their case was hopeless.

Pirates Outplayed Senators

Against the heaviest sort of odds and always fighting uphill the Pirates outplayed and outsteadied their more experienced rivals in a closing rush that knew no obstacles. Perhaps it was due largely the steadying influence of the veteran first sacker, Stuffy McInnis, for the tide turned when he first took his place in the lineup in the fifth game at Washington last Monday, but it was fierceness on attack that had the most to do with the victorious Pirate march.

Great Triumph for Pirates

Never before in world's series history where the decision has gone to the best four out of seven games has any team pulled out triumph as did the Pirates. Back in 1903 in the first modern championship, the Boston Red Sox won four straight from the old Pittsburgh club after losing three out of the first four but that series was a nine game basis and Boston could have lost more while still winning out.

Here, however, the Pirates won the last three games with the knowledge that defeat in any one of them would mean elimination. While no more spectacular when all elements are considered, it was an even greater comeback than Washington staged a year ago in taking the last two games from the Giants.

Fans Looked for Mound Duel

Today's battle was expected to be a duel between the two moundsmen, who had each won two games in the series, with Johnson and Aldridge seeking the victory that would give either imperishable fame and glory. But instead it turned out to be a free-slugging drama. Aldridge, wild and erratic, passed out of the picture in the first inning after issuing three passes and making two wild pitches, while Johnson was luttered for fifteen hits and nearly always in trouble. The big train had held the slugging buccaneers to one run and eleven hits in his first two games but he had nothing with which to check his opponents today. His greatest speed held no terrors for the Pirates and his curves had no baffling stuff on them.

Johnson, however, courageous and gallant even in defeat, took his bitter medicine to the finish, while the Pirates used four moundsmen in their triumphant sally. Morrison, temporarily checking the Senators after relieving Aldridge, was withdrawn for a pinch hitter after Joe Harris had combed him for a double and driven in two runs in the fourth. Kremer, back after a day's rest, and Oldham, twirling the ninth, were the final choices the most effective ones, permitting only one safe blow, Peck's homer, in a stretch of five innings and holding Washington at bay while the Pirate bats were ramsant.

Peck's Errors Disastrous

It was apparent from the start that Johnson faced trouble but he might have pulled out the same had it not been for the damaging misplays by Peckinpaugh that figured largely in the Pirate offensives of the seventh and eighth innings. Hard and timely hitting, with Max Carey's bludgeon most prominent, gave the Pirates three runs in the third and another in the fifth, but their next big spurt, in the seventh, started when Peck dropped Eddie Moore's high fly and their decisive rally came in the eighth, after a wild throw to second by the veteran shortstop with a third out in sight that would have prevented any scoring.

But for that flight toss to Harris in an attempt to force Moore on Carey's grounder, which pulled Bucky off the bag when he caught it, allowing Moore to pull up safe at second and Carey to reach first, Peckinpaugh might have been the hero instead of the "goat" of the final game, for in the "goat" of the final game, for in the first half of the eighth he had driven the ball over the barrier in front of the score board for a home run that put the Senators into a 7-6 lead.

Peck's error in the seventh was followed by Carey's second double and a triple by Traynor, who was thrown out at the plate trying to stretch his hit to a homer.

Pirates Bring Up the Reserves

Two were out in the eighth before the Pirates got in motion again on a double by Earl Smith. This was the signal for a rush of Pittsburgh reserves. Yde replacing Smith on the base and Bichee going to bat for Kremer. There was a terrific roar as Bigbee's two-base smash scored Yde with the tying run and din continued as Moore walked and was safe on Peck's high throw to second.

Cuyler Does the Trick

Thus the bases were filled as Cuyler strode to the plate. Johnson, knowing it was the crisis, used every resource at his command. He called for sawdust to cover the quagmire in the pitching box. He worked the corners with his fast ball but with the count three and two, Cuyler swung and the ball streaked to far right field.

The tumult was at its height as four Pirate runners streaked about the bases. It was only partially stilled as the umpires called Cuyler back to second and Carey to third, ruling the blow a double, although the ball was not extricated from its tarpaulin resting place and returned to the infield until after Cuyler had dashed over the plate.

This was the finale of the Pirate drive. The Senators, for their part, had nothing to match it through the latter stages of the game. As a matter of fact, the Pirate margin of triumph would have been much wider but for the weird start they made in the first inning, when Aldridge's wild pitching mixed with an error by Eddie Moore and detected piece of battlepping by Earl Smith on Peckinpaugh, helped the Senators score four times although making only two safe hits.

HEYDLER SAYS PIRATES ARE GAMEST TEAM IN BASEBALL HISTORY

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15—(By the Associated Press)—John A. Heydler, president of the National league, immediately after the game went to the Pittsburgh clubroom and congratulated the new world champions. President Heydler did not attempt to hide his delight and league pride when he said:

"You are the gamest ball team I have ever seen in my twenty years in baseball. With the series all but lost last Sunday you came back, and then, with the deciding game apparently lost, you came back again. Always you had to come from behind to win. We all knew you were a skillful club and a powerful club, and now you have earned the title to the gamest of all clubs in the games' history as well as the world championship title.

"In no series has there been displayed such skill, courage and fine sportsmanship. And it is most fitting that you, our youngest champion team of all our league history, should win for us the world championship in our golden jubilee year."

The league president and the players were much affected at the close of President Heydler's talk. Speaking further on the National league's triumph, President Heydler said:

"The victory was all the greater in that it was won over a most formidable team, an American league entry famed for its courage and gameness, as well as its playing prowess. And then, to fill our cup to the brim, the Chicago Cubs won a splendid victory over the strong White Sox team in the Chicago City series.

"About the umpiring. Of course I would be most particularly interested in that vital factor of series play. The work of all four umpires was high class. I was in attendance at Matty's funeral and missed Saturday's game and the play Rice made on Smith's drive. In the case of that disputed catch I can only say that if it was a mistake it was made by our umpire against our own club, the younger club that had the stamina and high spirit and power and skill to go ahead and overcome all obstacles, in such a close series and with so many tense situations many chances are bound to arise for mistakes. And yet I doubt if one was made in this wonderful series, even in the case of Rice's disputed catch.

"We knew we had a great ball club if it could only get started against that keen and smart Washington team. The interest in the series was greater than ever, and this adds to my pride as a man who has always had baseball close to his heart."

WORLD'S SERIES BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Roger Peckinpaugh broke all world's series records for the worst fielding in the big classic, making eight errors and breaking the marks of Hans Wagner, who made six boots in 1903, and Joey Sewell, who ran up a string of six misplays in 1926. The previous error records were made by shortstops, a position most likely to run up the largest number of misplays.

Johnson bore down hard in the first two innings today but the Pirates were after his fast ball and they broke through with a barrage of hits in the third which sent over three runs and quickly showed that the speedball king was not in his invincible form of last Sunday. Even with the help of the dark day the Pirates raked Johnson hard and in only one inning after the third frame did the Pirates fail to threaten. That was the sixth when the home folks went out in order.

Carey was a constant thorn in Johnson's side. He maced him for three doubles and one single and harried the Washington pitcher while on the base paths.

Earl Smith did not help the Pirate cause any in the first inning when he tipped Peck's bat. Peck was given his base and a run was forced over the plate.

The Pirate pitcher's curve baffled the Senators out of the world's series honors. All through the seventh game the American leaguers looked as little else but hooks and saw few fast balls of which they are particularly fond.

The feature of the series was the reaction of the Pirates from their hitting slump that gripped them in the first four games. Their last and most spectacular offensive eruption came with two men out in the eighth inning today when three doubles, a walk and an error swept three runs across and settled the issue.

Ray Kremer blazed forth as the pitching star of the last game. Going into the box in the fifth he disposed of the once world's champions in one, two, three order until the eighth when Peck lifted one over the left field barrier for a home run. Rube Oldham pitched the ninth and got the Senators in order, striking out Rice and Goslin.

Not one of the 15 hits garnered by the Pirates was tainted with flukiness. All were stinging drives that whizzed by or over the heads of the infielders and kept the outfielders racing to the barriers to hold them in check.

When the field demonstration was staged by the crowd after the game, the bleacherites made a concerted rush against the barrier, which broke down and flooding by hundreds on the field, staged a snake dance and parade which was led by the band.

Kiki Cuyler, from whom much was expected came into his own in the final battle, by bringing up a line drive while skating on his nose in short right center and then driving in the winning runs with a double to right. When Kiki emerged from the clubhouse after the game $,000 were waiting for him and they carried him on their shoulders to his home, a half mile away. Hugs and kisses galore were showered upon the youngster.

Max Carey equally a record for world series when he hit safely four time in five attempts. Three of his crashes were doubles. Lightning Max led all the hitters in the games with a mark of .468. Nick Altrock will remember when Frank Isbell of the "Hitless Wonders," the White Sox, got four doubles in 1906.

Joe Harris, the soldier from Coulter, Pa., who has been hitting them to the far corners was second to Carey among the batters, with .440.

Stanley Harris, manager of the Washington club, averaged only .087, in hitting gaining two safeties in 23 opportunities. One one occasion he took himself from the lineup.

DID HARRIS LET SENTIMENT OVERRULE GOOD JUDGMENT

It was a Washington crowd that stood in front of the Bulletin megaphone yesterday afternoon to hear the returns of the final game of the World's Series. The Pittsburgh rooters were in the minority but they were loyal and those that backed their judgment reaped a monetary harvest at the expense of those who let sentiment overrule their baseball sense. Sentimentally speaking everyone wanted to see Walter Johnson, dean of pitchers, come through and win out those who got out the old dopesheets and figured the law of averages picked Pittsburgh as the winner provided Johnson was allowed to start. Some even gave odds that Johnson would not last the game out but these lost not counting on Manager Harris' love for Johnson.

Should Harris have taken out Johnson? This is a question which will be discussed in the old stove league this winter. The majority claim that Johnson should have been removed from the box in the third inning when three successive hits were made off him. The chances are that he would not have been removed had not Washington scored two runs in the fourth inning, making the count 6 to 3. Then in the seventh when the score was tied there was a chance to put in a fresh pitcher but Harris still hated to see the Big Train sidetracked. Sentiment reigned in the Washington camp. Did Washington have another pitcher that could silence the game of the day? Johnson had accomplished the feat twice, but the others had been beaten. Harris was confronted with the problem of letting Johnson stay or pulling him out and sending in one of his relief hurlers. He had Russell, Marberry, Ruether and Ballou in the reserves, Coveleskie and Ferguson being out of it. Could anyone hold the Pirates better than Johnson? Harris evidently thought not.

It was not wholly Johnson's fault. Roger Peckinpaugh's two errors were costly and each figured in the scoring Was Peck to blame for the loss of the series is another question that local fans are turning over in their minds.

WASHINGTON FANS TAKE DEFEAT TO HEART

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—(AP) — Washington fandom took to heart the Senators' defeat by Pittsburgh today, its regret heightened by the failure of "Old Barney" Johnson to carve more deeply his niche in baseball's hall of fame by winning three games in a world's series.

Thousands standing in the streets before playerboards cheered the old warrior after each pitch in the early innings while Washington held a lead, but they gave way to expressions of sympathy and dismay as the Pirates battered down the margin.

The home-guard fans were pulling for a Washington victory with Walter Johnson in the pitching box, but as succeeding innings added to Pittsburgh's attack, even his staunchest supporters were calling for Manager Harris to relieve Barney of his burden. The eighth inning, when the Pirates took the winning lead, was hard for the cyclists crowding about the scoreboards to watch, and many of them left for home.

A mighty groan went up as "Goose" Goslin fanned the air for Washington's final out in the ninth, it meant more than the loss of the world's championship for the Senators; it signified that Walter Johnson had been baffled in his desire to join that small group of baseball's immortals who have fought and won three games in a title contest.

Disappointment was also evident at the white house, particularly on the part of Mrs. Coolidge, ardent Washington fan. Seated close to a radio set, she listened in on the game from start to finish. President Coolidge, a warm admirer of Walter Johnson, also listened to the early innings, but as the game dragged on, slowed up by rain, he was forced to return to his desk, where he learned the result soon after the contest was over.

JOHNSON, BEATEN, RECEIVES HONORS OF A CONQUEROR

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—(AP)—The "Big Train" of baseball has been wrecked, but will be back on the line within a few months.

While friends blamed slippery rails for the upset, the "Train" itself, Walter Perry Johnson of the Washington Senators, turned from his preparations long enough to remark:

"It was a fair for one as for the other."

He was sorry of course but his head was held high and at the age of 38 he looked forward to conquests on the diamond.

"I gave them all I had but it wasn't enough," He said. "My arm and my injured leg, wrapepd in bandages, felt all right all the way. They beat us, and I guess that's all there is to it."

Pittsburgh, gone wild again after sixteen years, became silent as baseball great veteran left his quarters and went through the grandstand to his waiting car. Hand after hand reached to grasp his and many times he was told:

"We're sorry, Walter, that it had to be you."

So Walter Johnson left what may prove to have been his last world's series game, a vanquished pitcher receiving the honors of a conqueror, and in a hostile city.

JAP FOOTBALL PLAYER DISLOCATE HIS ELBOW

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 15—Ernest Jesse Kapuanmalieui Kai of Hilo, Hawaii, Yale junior and member of the scrub football team, suffered a dislocated elbow in scrimmage today. The scrubs were opposing the second varsity in preparation for the Yale-Penn clash Saturday. Kai, who was taken to the New Haven hospital, will probably be lost to the scrubs for the rest of the season.

Valuable Horse is Shot

BRUNSWICK, Me., Oct. 15—Bingenwood Jr., a bay gelding by Bingenwood, with a mark of 2:03 1-4 made in the grand circuit races at Lexington, Ky., slipped and broke the pastern bone of the left hind leg in the final heat of the free for all at Topsham fair today. The horse, which was hopelessly crippled, was shot.

PIRATES ARE JOYFUL WHILE SENATORS MOURN

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15 (AP) — "Well, we had a pretty game ball club after all," said Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pirates, when it was all over. "What can I say? We're overjoyed at the victory after coming back from Washington one behind. But after we started hitting Monday, didn't I predict that we would take it? Well, we did and there's not much to say.

"Johnson didn't seem to have much stuff out there today and the boys continued their clouting. Such hits would win any ball game. The Senators showed a game battle on a terrific day and proved a hard club to beat but once this team gets to hitting there's no hope for the other team. I'm glad it's all over."

Greetings poured in upon the leader of the Corsairs and he was the busiest man in the clubhouse. He had found no time to dress when the first of the champions of 1925, pounding each other on the back and yelling like school boys, left their lockers for the last time this year.

The greatest smile of all was on the face of the old gladiator, Stuffy McInnis, who carried on through rain and fair weather, his well-schooled brain urging the youthful Pittsburghers to tremendous deeds until tonight they are the conquerors.

Most of them plan to leave tonight for their widely-scattered homes to convene several months hence when a new drive will be started.

Harris Explains It.

There were no hanging heads in the Washington quarters although there was a silence that bespoke disappointment. Manager Harris toiled in his second attempt to gain world honors, only smiled and gave all honor to McKechnie and the men of Pittsburgh.

"It's only one of those things," he said. "We have a new champion, although we do not concede that they are any better than we are, any more than we thought last year that we were better than the Giants because we won. You remember we beat the Giants by playing the deciding game on the home grounds. I am confident that had we played the Pirates in Washington we would have won again.

"The day was miserable for baseball, I guess anyone will admit that. It looked like anybody's ball game. Carey got a double on his hit in the seventh which my men tell me was two or three inches foul and they wanted the umpires to view the spot where the ball hit. But that is likely to happen, especially on such a day and it is a break in the game.

"Now that it's over we'll go about preparing for next year. We can probably find a couple of broken down pitchers some where to help us win another pennant. There's one thing about it—we showed a pitcher with a better heart than they showed."

Harris plans to sail for Europe on December 12, for a brief tour. Returning in January he will hurry South to plan for the next pennant drive. All the players living in the West left for their homes but the bulk of the squad returned to Washington.

Among those who shook hands in farewell was Everett Scott, who participated in more consecutive major league baseball games than any other player, but who failed to appear in the series.

"I should say not," was Bucky's answer.

AGGIE FROSH PLAY TUFTS YEARLINGS TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Oct. 15.—Coach Alexander's Connecticut Aggie Freshman eleven, heavily reinforced by eastern Connecticut boys, will play its first home game of the season tomorrow when Tufts yearlings are met on Gardner Dow field at 3.45 p. m. The Medford outfit comes to Storrs highly rated, and the Connecticut Frosh will be forced to extend themselves to the limit to turn back the invadors. It is only during the past two years that freshman teams have been a part of the athletic program at the state college, and in this time the Aggies yearlings have never suffered defeat on the gridiron. This record is looked upon with pride at Storrs, and the 1925 yearling team is making a strong fight to uphold it.

Opening with Kent school last Saturday, the frosh played this team a no-score contest. As might be expected of an eleven that was whipped into shape in the short space of ten days, play of the team was ragged in some respects. For all this, however, Coach Alexander feels his team put up a good game against the veteran Kent aggregation and he is optimistic over the season's prospects.

Work this week has been levoted to correcting faults in play that developed in the Kent game, and much progress has been made. Several shifts have been made in the lineup on the basis of play in the first encounter, and Alexander expects to have a smoother working team against Tufts as a result.

Light signal practice was the extent of today's workout for the squad, after which Alexander announced his starting lineup for tomorrow. Usher former, Windham high athlete of Willimantic, and Schildgren, who in the past starred for Naugatuck high, will play the wing positions. Crombie of Suffield Prep, and Wilson, who played for Springfield high, will start at the tackles. Sayers, Hartford boy, would start at tackle, but an injured shoulder will keep him on the sidelines. McNamara and Gilman, former members of Norwich Free Academy elevens, will play the guard berths where they are expected to put up a strong game. Callahan, from Revere high, Mass., starts at center.

In the back of the line will be Brown, a colored youth from Amherst, Mass., and Dixon of New Haven, in the halfback berths. Sahaglan, from Worcester, Mass., who starred in the Kent game, will play fullback. Signals will be called by Knaut, former New Haven high star.

PECK APOLOGIZES FOR CRITICISM OF UMPIRE

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 15.—(AP) — Three Washington players, Manager Stanley Harris, Catcher Harold Ruel and Shortstop Roger Peckinpaugh today were called before Commissioner Landis before the final game of the world series started in regards to statements criticising Umpire Moriarty in a story that appeared under Peckinpaugh's name.

After a lengthy discussion the commissioner is reported to have demanded an apology. In case this was not forthcoming he is said to have promised some action on the player-writer matter.

The commissioner, when interviewed at the baseball park, declined to discuss the matter, saying that it would not be in the interests of his service to the game.

"I do not like to take such an attitude," he said, "but it seems necessary in this case."

The objectionable words, in an article on Tuesday's game over which Peckinpaugh's name appeared, are as follows:

"Ordinarily I do not blame any of our losses on the umpires fearing that it will be looked upon as a cheap alibi. However, Umpire Moriarty yesterday missed one at a critical time which beat us, and for this reason I cannot help but mention it.

"It came in the third inning when the Pirates made two runs. Moore opened with a walk, and on Carey's grounder to me I beat Eddie to second by a full step, yet he was called safe. Naturally my arguments over the decision were just so much wasted words. Cuyler's sacrifice moved both runners along, one scoring on an infield out, and the other on Traynor's single, after Barnhart had grounded to Bluege.

"Had we got this decision—which we were entitled to—neither would have scored."

ACADEMY CLASHES WITH WESTERLY AT WESTERLY TODAY

This afternoon the local Academy football squad will journey to Westerly where they will meet Westerly High School in the local boys second grid contest of the season. The last time these two eleven's met Westerly undoubtedly had the better team and emerged the victor by a 17 to 0 score. It is expected however that todays game will be a different story, for in the three weeks since the Academy played last they have improved considerably. Whitney has drilled his charges long and Lord, and has rounded out an eleven that looks pretty good.

During the past week or ten days a noticeable increase of team work has been shown. The boys are all working hard to hold down their positions and rivalry amongst them is strong. Some of the old time Academy fighting spirit seems to pervade this years team. Westerly is not going to be and easy opponent to defeat. If the local eleven expects to bring home the proverbial bacon they will have to use every bit of strategy and football knowledge they have. Combine this with the weight of the Academy machine and the odds should favor the N. F. A. for a decisive victory.

Westerly High has not improved to any considerable extent. The best they were able to do last week against Windham High was to hold them to a tie and from all accounts Windham has a pretty poor team this season. Also Westerly has lost their star right tackle, Capt. Novogroski who has been obliged to leave the team for and indefinate period due to scholastic difficulties.

At a late hour yesterday evening Couch Whitney refused to give out any lineup for today's game. He stated however that if the team follows instructions it should not have much trouble in subduing Westerly. The N. F. A. eleven will probably be picked from among the following players: Sargent, McCluggage, Waters, Marks, Moosley, Kramer, Norman, Connell, Polsky, Fiddle, Guionb, Kahn, Courbois, Williams, C. Bremer, Tombari, McGlone, E. Bremer, Villano, Murphy, Schwartz.

The squad will leave Norwich from the old Y. M. C. A. at 12.30 P. M. The kickoff will not be until three P. M.

TWO CRIPPLES IN YALE LINEUP AGAINST PENN.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 15 (AP)—Yale, it was indicated tonight, will take the field against the University of Pennsylvania football machine Saturday with two of its regular players on the side line. Dan Allen, th regular fullback, was injured in the game with Georgia last Saturday and is not in the best of condition. Jerry Wadsworth was in his place in a short practice today and is expected to start the game Saturday.

Ben Cutler, the Eli left halfback, suffered an injury to his nose last Saturday and was hurt again yesterday. Larry Noble was in his place behind the line today.

Forty members of the Pennsylvania squad reached here today and went to the local for a short workout. The team then moved to its quarters in Derby and will not return to New Haven until just before the game Saturday. The men will have a short workout in Derby tomorrow.

Coach Young of the Red and Blue eleven was pessimistic tonight, declaring that Saturday's clash would probably be the hardest game in the Penn schedule. He said that Penn hoped to hold the Yale attack to one touchdown.

Yale followers are as pessimistic as the visitors, fearing the powerful and experienced offensive the Penn team is known to possess.

AGGIES HOLD LONG SIGNAL PRACTICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 15.—Working on the plays that will be used against the Massachusetts Aggies here Saturday, Coach Sumner A. Dole put his Connecticut Aggies eleven through an extra long session of signal practice here today. Each play was carefully rehearsed in dummy scrimmage that lasted until darkness, and Dole feels that his team is well prepared for the Bay Staters.

Earlier in the afternoon Dole lined his kickers up for a session. The Aggie mentor has not been satisfied with the work of his kickers to date especially the punting, which has lacked consistency. In today's drill much improvement was shown in this department of play.

In practice today Dole used Captain Brink and Stenneman, ends; Nanfeldt and Zollin, tackles; Bitgood and Johnson, guards; Daly, center; Schofield quarterback; Filmar and Moore, and halfbacks; Makofski, fullback. This is the lineup that started against Maine, and it seems likely that Dole will start it again against Massachusetts Aggies. Eddy, whose injured ankle is rapidly mending, will probably get into the game at one of the halfback berths.

DEPAOLO QUALIFIES WITH SPEED OF 128 M. PER HOUR

SALEM, N. H., Oct. 15—(AP)—Peter DePaolo broke the world's automobile racing for a mile and a quarter oval track today at the New Hampshire Park board track when he covered a lap in 32 3-5 seconds. DePaolo reached the speed of 139 2-10 miles an hour in the qualifying tests for the 250 mile championship race to be run here Saturday.

De Paolo was the first to qualify in today's tests. The next greatest speed was made by Benny Hill who covered the oval in 33 2-5 seconds, at a speed of 134 7-10 miles an hour. The rules provided that contestants must reach a speed of 120 miles an hour to be eligible for the race.

Other qualifies were:

Harry Hartz and Leon Duray, 133 9-10 miles per hour; Earl Cooper and Earl Devore, 131 6-10 miles; Frank Elliot and Ralph Hepburn, 129 3-10 miles; Jimmy Hill and Fred Comer, 127 8-10 miles; Dr. Shattuck and Phil Shaefer, 126 4-10 miles; Jimmy Wonderlich, 123 miles; Pete Kriss, 120 8-10 miles.

Bob McDonough, Tommy Milton and Norman Batten, all team mates, did not enter the qualifying trials and announced that they would drive for place tomorrow. Starter Fred Wagoner ruled, however, that they would be given the last position in the race Saturday regardless of the speed they attain tomorrow.

WAUREGAN AND MOOSUP PLAY SECOND GAME SUNDAY

Moosup and Wauregan will meet on Sunday on the carpet grounds in the second game of their three game series.

Moosup took the first game last Sunday by the score of 4 to 3 in what proved to be one of the fastest games staged on the carpet grounds this season. In spite of the chilly weather the game was fast and interesting from start to finish.

Wauregan is out to take the second game and will be strengthened by the addition of several faster men.

Manager Amidon who has a game booked with one of the fastest teams in western Massachusetts for the following Sunday is out to make it two straight from Waurecan and cleanup the series.

Several new men will also be seen in the Moosup lineup. The lineup of both teams will appear in Saturday's Bulletin.

SENTIMENT COST GAME FOR SENATORS, SAYS BAN

CHICAGO, Oct. 15. (AP)—President Ban Johnson of the American league tonight criticized Manager Bucky Harris of Washington for starting Walter Johnson three times, declaring that the series was lost to Washington "because of sentimental reasons."

"You put up a game fight," said President Johnson in his telegram to Harris. "This I admire. Lost the series for sentimental reasons. This should never occur in a world series."

The trip was made by way of Vermont and New York state, the party visiting Glens Falls and going as far as St. Johnsbury, Vt., where heavy snows caused them to turn back. Ira Friedman, convicted in the district court of unlawful possession of intoxicating liquors there fined $100 and appealed his case, came into court on the complaint of the state, George W. Robbins, trooper, and when presented by Mr. Jackovony, changed his plea to nolo. Judge Capotosto fined him $50 and costs.

Wrenn told the court that while he was in a house, the numbers were painted over without his knowledge by someone unknown to him. Remarking that he thought he would have known if his own plates had been painted over, Judge Capotosto declared that he would suspend sentence and told the young man to so conduct himself that he would not be suspected of being mixed up in matters which officers are investigating. He said, "Sentence is suspended, mark the case, Mr. Attorney General, 'Continued for sentence to Nov. 16th at Kingston.'

The automobile damage case of Totten-Maine went to the jury about noon and after dinner had been brought to them, they returned to the courtroom shortly before 2 o'clock and returned a verdict for the defendant, Lawrence Maine.

Roche, to recover wages claimed due her daughter, Edna M. Gregory, to the amount of $98, mostly in June and July, 1922, from Joseph C. Stedman as a bookkeeper and typesetter. Mr. Stedman was represented by Attorney John J. Dunn.

Edna M. Gregory, the first witness called detailed her work and the amounts she claimed were due her. Her mother, Edith Gregory, the complainant, was the second witness and testified to reuests made on Mr. Stedman for payment.

At about 3:15 o'clock developed that the bill of particulars was insufficient. Judge Capotosto directed that the case be marked passed and taken from the jury.

BIRTHDAY CAKE

Of all cakes a birthday cake ought to be made with the very best materials. And that, of course, means Snowdrift for the shortening. This creamy, white, easily worked shortening makes rich wholesome cake—cake that is as good to eat as it is to look at. Here is a simple but very good layer cake recipe you may wish to try—

4 Tablespoonfuls Snowdrift
2/3 Cupful Sugar
1 Egg
1/2 Teaspoonful Desired Flavoring
1 1/2 Cupfuls Flour
1/2 Teaspoonfuls Baking Powder
1/2 Teaspoonful Salt
1/2 Cupful Milk

Put the Snowdrift in the mixing bowl and gradually work in the sugar, flavoring and the beaten yolk of the egg. Sift together the dry ingredients and add them alternately with the milk to the first mixture, then fold in the egg-white, beaten stiff. Transfer to two medium-sized cake-pans, which have been rubbed slightly with Snowdrift, and bake from thirty-five to forty minutes in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. Put together with jelly and sift powdered sugar over the top, or any icing you prefer.

The Melting Pot

America is often called the melting pot. People from all over the world come here. On their arrival at the different ports of entry one can notice the great variety of costumes, languages, religions and national customs. They come here to stay. They make their home in America.

The great process of assimilation commences shortly after their arrival. The first thing that undergoes a change are the clothes. Then English words and terms are gradually used in their native languages. Thus the process of assimilation starts. The children of course pick up the language and customs much quicker than grown up persons.

The school is a great factor in assimilation and Americanization of our foreign born citizens. Some schools can do this work more efficiently than others. The so-called "foreign language schools" in which, besides English, another language that of the children's parents is taught are rendering this country a great service. They follow the same program of studies as the public schools. But in addition to the usual curriculum they add another language, French, Polish, Italian or whatever the case may be. Thus a child knows two languages instead of one and has just that much more advantage over other children that know but one.

The new St. Joseph school will be a great factor in the assimilation of the great Polish population of Norwich. It will not only teach hundreds of children the language and history of the United States, but it will look after the young people and the grown ups of that large foreign element. It is a melting pot in the true sense of the word. You will help to keep the pot boiling by contributin your share towards the completion and equipment of the new school and especially its social features which will be opened to all.

The drive for $25,000 dollars will start the last week of October and everybody will be given a chance to contribute towards this worthy cause.

Breed Theater

Swift action, and tense dramatic situations fill The Rainbow Trail, Tom Mix' latest William Fox picture, which opened a run at the Breed theater Thursday. Into this incomparable Zane Grey story, which is the sequel to Riders of the Purple Sage, Mr. Mix has packed an abundance of thrilling exploits. Combining the genius of these two westerners, Mix and Grey, has made this a picture of unusual distinction.

Lynn Reynolds, who directed the picture, has succeeded in carrying on the story of Riders of the Purple Sage with artistic adroitness. The action in The Rainbow Trail starts with the first foot and continues until the romantic conclusion.

Palace Theatre

The above did not appear in any of the "want ad" columns of the daily newspapers. It was a request made by Howard Higgin, Paramount director to the Lasky casting department.

"I must have an old-fashioned girl —one with a figure like an hour-glass," was what Higgin told Tom White, casting chief.

The director, who was producing "In the Name of Love," found it important for one of the sequences laid in a provincial French town, to use a girl with a figure reminiscent of the days of the Gibson girl.

According to Higgin, the girl had to be about nineteen or twenty, but the main requisite was a wasp waist. And there was the rub! For the modern girl has discarded the old-fashioned whale bone corset. The girlish figure of today is boyish in outline, slim, upright, and practically even from shoulders to hips.

However, White shared Higgin's belief that somewhere in Hollywood there was to be found the type of girl they were looking for. The search lasted for several days, while the entire casting staff combed the film capital, and at last their efforts were rewarded—a girl with an hour-glass shape was discovered.

Bradley Theater, Putnam

Coming to eastern Connecticut for the first time will be the sensational success of two continents White Cargo dramatized by Leon Gordon from Ida Vera Simonton's book Hell's Playground and produced by Earl Carroll; the play has enjoyed a run of over three years at Daly's theater, New York and duplicated its future at the Playhouse, London and at the Cort theatre, Chicago. White Cargo is a vivid play of love in the tropics, the action taking place on the West Coast of Africa, protraying the struggle for development in a country that defies encroaching civilization and where the ever shining sun breeds inevitable rot —a rot which penetrates not only vegetation, but also the minds and hearts of the white men who attempt to conquer it.

The cast of White Cargo has been especially selected with an eye not only to types they are to portray but with a view of their histronic ability; the settings and equipment all that a lavish management could procure, in fact the entire organization unlike many companies sent on tour contains an original cast of Broadway artists.

White Cargo is booked for the Bradley theater, Putnam for one night only on Monday evening, Oct. 19, at 8:15 p. m. so an early reservation of seats is desirable so as to insure against disappointment.

The play will be presented in Putnam, by the same company which played so successfully in Boston, last spring.

The seat sale opens Friday, October 16th, at 3:00 p. m.; orchestra seats reserved at $1.50 and $2.00 plus taxes. Balcony seats, reserved at $1.00 and $1.50, plus tax. Mail orders must be accompanied by check. Reservations may also be made through the box office of the Orpheum theater, Danielson.

WARNER'S FIRST BIG TEST WITH SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

PALO ALTO, Oct. 15.—Glen "Pop" Warner, football coach at Stanford University, has eight veterans missing from the team that last season tied California for the Pacific Coast Conference championship. Yet the 1925 eleven promises to be superior.

Last fall Stanford won every game of the regular season except the big game with California, which resulted in a 20-to-20 tie. Stanford lost a post-season game to Notre Dame at Pasadena. The three regulars from 1924 are Captain Ernie Nevers, 205-pound fullback, twice mentioned on All-American selections; Ted Shipkey end and Fred Swan, guard. Several others back on the squad made varsity letters last season, but did not play regularly.

Ill luck camped on Nevers' trail last season. He was hurt in a scrimmage before the first game and spent most of the season on the sidelines. He recovered in time to play against Notre Dame, and in that game he advanced the ball sensationally.

Warner will have plenty of weight, both in the line and the backfield. The line which he selected tentatively, averaged 193, the backfield 190 pounds. Warner also has plent of reserve material to back up the reconstructed varsity.

Stanford's first big test will be the game against Southern California at Los Angeles, Oct. 17.

That the Japanese are as enthusiastic about moving pictures and movie stars as are the film fans in America was recently evidenced by a prize contest for the most popular Japanese cinema player. The contest was conducted by the Miyako Shimbun of Tokio, one of the leading amusement newspapers of the capital, and the winner, Miss Nobuko Satsuki, received 1,313,553 votes. Both male and female players were eligible. Miss Satsuki is noted for her "vamp" roles.

Chatterer Teases Peter

People who delight in teasing
Seldom are to others pleasing.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit, having started out to find out as much as possible about how his friends and neighbors of the Green Forest were making ready for the coming of winter, didn't hesitate to ask questions. Peter says that people too bashful to ask questions will never learn much. So having said goodby to Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, Peter hurried over to where he saw Chatterer the Red Squirrel hard at work.

"Chatterer!" cried Peter, "I know where Striped Chipmunk keeps his winter supplies and where Happy Jack keeps his, and now I want to know where you keep yours."

This was such a surprising statement and such a surprising question combined, that Chatterer actually dropped the fat hickory nut he had just picked up. "My!" he exclaimed, "what a lot you know! I would like myself to know where Striped Chipmunk keeps his supplies and where Happy Jack keeps his. You tell me and I'll tell you where I keep mine."

"All right," cried Peter happily. "Striped Chipmunk keeps his in several little storehouses under ground, and Happy Jack keeps part of his in a storehouse in a hollow tree, and the rest in little hiding places on the ground."

"That's nice," said Chatterer. "I suppose you can take me right straight to those storehouses and hiding places."

"No-o," said Peter slowly. "No, I can't do that."

"Why not?" demanded Chatterer. His eyes were twinkling.

"Why you see, I don't know just where they are," replied Peter.

Excuse me," said Chatterer I understood you to say in the beginning that you knew where the storehouses of Striped Chipmunk and my cousin Happy Jack are. Now it appears that you don't know at all."

Peter looked foolish. "I didn't mean just what I said, or perhaps I didn't say just what I mean," he explained "What I mean is, I know the kinds of places they store their supplies in. I know what they do with the nuts and the acorns and the seeds that they put away for the winter. Now I want to know what you do with your supplies."

"Save them," replied Chatterer promptly.

"I've love to see them, declared Peter brightening up

"Yes, I know you save them," said Peter, 'but how do you save them?"

'By putting them away," replied Chatterer, his eyes twinkling more than ever and his flat red tail jerking with every word. He was enjoying himself. It was fun to tease Peter.

"I know! I know! You put them away," replied Peter. "But where do you put them? I mean what kind of places do you put them in?"

"Oh, all sorts of places," said Chatterer. "You'd be surprised to see the places I store food in."

"I'd love to see them," declared Peter brightening up.

"So would a lot of other people," chuckled Chatterer. "I can think of several people who would like ever so much to see those storehouses. Now I've talked to you just about as long as I can. I've got too much to do to sit around gossipping. Just follow me and I'll lead you straight to the first storehouse."

"Oh, thank you," cried Peter joyfully. "That is wonderfully good of you. I've never seen one of your storehouses and I'd just love to see it."

"All right" cied Chatterer. "Come on!" He picked up the fat hickory nut, raced up a tree, out along a branch, jumped over to the branch of another tree, and in this way off he went through the treetops, leaving Peter staring after him with such a funny, foolish look on his face. And that is as near as Peter came to seeing Chatterer's storehouse.

FUTURE OF GAS INDUSTRY IN PUBLIC SERVICE—MR. COOLIDGE

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 15—(A. P.)—A message from President Coolidge read today before the American Gas association by its president, H. C. Abell, says that the future of the gas industry "depended entirely on the extent to which it devoted itself to public service, as well as public gain."

"Remembering as I do with much pleasure my previous visit to your convention, I am doubly glad to extend my greetings," President Coolidge wrote. "Your industry seemingly has entered upon a new period of growth, and this will be steady and permanent in proportion as your association keeps constantly in mind that it is an opportunity for public service as well as personal gain. I am sure that this object will always be before you, and that you will meet adequately your problems and your responsibilities to the people whom you serve."

The convention opened today with representatives of more than 500 manufactured gas companies in attendance.

BOBBED HAIR BEGAN WITH FRENCH REIGN OF TERROR

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 15—(A. P.)—The fashion of bobbed hair was in vogue during the French revolution, at least by women who faced decapitation by the guillotine. Testimony to this was disclosed in a grim little satire, writte by a French woman at the time of the Commune, which was found in a mass of French books and manuscripts obtained by a large motion picture studio here for research work.

"It is the custom before women are executed to cut off their hair, that it may not interfere with the executioner's blade. So, all Royalist women go to the guillotine with their hair off at the neck. Incidentally, the head soon follows this example.

"Grisettes, as a bit of humor, began cutting their hair the same way—aping the aristocrats in their last fashion. They are finding that it is comfortable, and the custom is growing. No one knows where it will stop."

FAMILY REUNION IN FINLAND ATTENDED BY 1,000 RELATIVES

HELSINGFORS, Oct. 15—(A. P.)—At a recent family reunion in Central Finland there assembled 1,000 descendants of the family, whose records date back to 1412. A number of those present came from distant countries, including the United States and Canada. A remarkable feature of the large gathering was that approximately 70 per cent. were peasants as were their progenitors.

The event aroused so much interest in Finland that the government sent Premier Tulenheimo and Archbishop Gummerus as its representatives.

Red Hair From Remote Norse

While the average person of today is a mixture of many types, including Saxon, French and mid-European stocks, the red-haired man or woman is a "throw-back" to remote Nordic ancestry, according to a number of British scientists. As the Norsemen had unusually fair skins, these scientists explain that this is particularly true of red-haired persons, and the base their conclusions on the result of crossing thousands of flowers, the being about one in every thousand that reverts to a type closely resembling the one from which the experimen started.

GEN. ISAAC R. SHERWOOD DIED IN TOLEDO

TOLEDO, Ohio, Oct. 15—(A. P.)—General Isaac R. Sherwood, 90 year old veteran of the Civil war and former congressman from the Ninth Ohio district, died this afternoon from pernicious anaemia against which he had fought a losing battle since last summer. He had been unconscious since last Wednesday.

Lenore Sherwood, his daughter and other close relatives were present when he died.

General Sherwood began failing early in the summer but his illness did not become serious until two months ago. Funeral services will be held here Monday afternoon. Burial will be in Woodlawn cemetery. United States Senator Frank B. Willis, a close friend of Sherwood's, is expected to deliver the funeral oration.

On the field of battle throughout the Civil War, in several state positions in Ohio and as a Representative in Congress, Isaac R. Sherwood, devoted the greater part of his life to his country and his adopted state. He was one of those tireless humans upon whom age apparently had no effect. In the Civil War he never looked back and he refused to learn the meaning of the word retreat, the result being that his gallant conduct won for him promotions all along the line from an infantry private to brigadier general of volunteers.

In his public life General Sherwood showed the same characteristics and although halted occasionally, he constantly kept looking forward and going ahead. When, in his 85th year he was elected to the lower house of Congress for his ninth term, his mental faculties were as active and his interest in public affairs as keen as when he was elected for his first term 50 years previously.

It was in January, 1924, that he made in the house a vigorous denunciation of the Volstead law and the Anti-Saloon League, although he had sleaned when 12 years old a pledge never to vote for a law that permitted the sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage. The Anti-Saloon League, he said, was not Christian in its methods, "but is vindictive, vengeful and mercenary, and by its drastic methods of trying to enforce the Volstead law has hatched the biggest crop of lawbreakers ever inflicted upon a community."

General Sherwood began making his brilliant Civil War record when a private in the Fourteenth Ohio Infantry. He was an intrepid soldier and won one promotion after another until in February, 1865, he was made brigadier general of volunteers. This was the result of a petition signed by his comrades who asked that the honor be conferred upon him for "gallant and meritorious services at the battle at Resaca, June 14, 1864, at Franklin, Tenn., November 30, 1864, and at Nashville, December 15, 1864." He fought in 48 battles, was under fire 133 days and had been complimented in orders six times for gallant conduct in battle. He was mustered out of the army June 27, 1865.

After the war General Sherwood returned to newspaper work, of which he had a taste before enlisting. He was editor of the Toledo Daily Commercial for a year and editorial writer for the Cleveland Dealer for two years. After serving two terms as secretary of state in Ohio he was elected in 1872 as representative in Congress from the Sixth Ohio District. Up to that time he had been a Republican. Denied a renomination at the conclusion of his term he again turned to newspaper work, purchasing the Toledo Journal of which he was editor nine years.

In the meantime Lucas County, Ohio elected General Sherwood as Probate Judge in 1873, serving six years. Temporarily out of politics again he became editor of the Canton News-Democrat, remaining with that newspaper ten years.

General Sherwood began his long continuous service in the House of Representatives in 1906, when he was elected from the Ninth Ohio district. He was re-elected to each Congress until 1920, when he was defeated, but came back two years later. He was the author of the Sherwood dollar-a-day pension law, passed in May 1912, which provided for a sliding scale of pensions from $13 to $30 a month, according to period of service and the age of the pensioner.

New York claimed General Sherwood as a native son, he having been born at Stanford, Dutchess County, August 13, 1835, the son of Aaron Sherwood who fought in the war of 1812. After receiving his preliminary education at the Hudson River Institute at Claverack, N. Y., the son went to Ohio and studied for two years at Antioch College, when Horace Mann was president of that institution. He then went to Ohio Law College at Poland, from which he was graduated in 1859 with the degree of LL.B.

During his law course General Sherwood embarked in the newspaper business, purchasing the Williams County Gazette at Bryan when he was only 22 years old. Two years after his graduation from the law college he was elected probate judge of Williams County, but resigned after a few months to enlist for Civil War service.

General Sherwood in September, 1859 married Katherine Margaret Brownlee, daughter of Judge James Brownlee of Poland. His wife, who was a writer and journalist, was the second president of the Woman's Relief Corps. They had three children.

The circumstances of the fire point to a fire bug, as the rooms upstairs were sprinkled with kerosene and in the cellarway where the fire started was found burlap and paper, also soaked with kerosene. The firemen confined the fire to a very small space, but had to cut into the walls and roof to extinguish it and leave it safe.

Story of the Lifeboat

A Frenchman named M. Gernieres devised the world's first lifeboat in 1765. It was built with air boxes at bow and stern, and proved its ability to keep afloat when filled with water to the gunwales. Twenty years later Lionel Lukin, an English coach builder, invented his famous lifeboat. This was modeled on the Norway yawl, which is a descendant of the fine old Viking boats, and has their seaworthy build. To this type Lukin added air-tight boxes, making her still more buoyant by a belt of cork along the gunwales.

But the British government showed indifference toward Lukin's patent. It was the wreck of the Adventure, in 1789, that shocked the British into action. Not that it was any worse than many other wrecks that were occurring all the time, but it took place so close to the shore that crowds of people could look on.

The result was a prize offered for a practical lifeboat. This was won by William Wouldhave, a poor man and a painter by trade. His boat was not very different from Lukin's. Many boats of this kind were built and put to use, but they were so heavy and unwieldy that it was impossible to transport them far to the location of a wreck, or to launch them from a flat beach in a storm.

And it took another spectacular disaster to bring matters to a head. This was in 1849. Again a money prize was offered for a better lifeboat, and this time the competition awakened world-wide interest and effort. The boat selected by an expert jury as designed by James Beeching of Great Yarmouth, and is, to all intents, the self-righting boat of today.

Our American self-righters are modeled on this type, and even our surfboats have its general build.—From the Mentor Magazine.

Human Body Filled With Gas

The chief ingredients of the human body are five gases—oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen, chlorine and fluorine, and there is enough gas in a man to fill a gasometer of 3,649 cubic feet, says Brief Stories. The most important element is oxygen, and the bulk of that gas compressed within us, if set free, would be equal to a beam of wool one foot square and 1,191 feet (nearly a quarter of a mile) long.

Every man's body contains 2,400 cubic feet of hydrogen, sufficient to inflate a balloon that would lift himself, balloon and tackle.

A regular pilot balloon service for investigation of the upper air will be maintained by the network of weather observatories now being organized in Mongolia.

SUGGESTION REGARDING SPECIALIZING.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.)

I've been at work for a few days, as strength and opportunity offered, husking out my small patch of corn. One thing has been quite noticeable, from which the foretellers of a hard, cold winter can draw another "sign" if they see fit—the husks are unusually thick and adherent. It takes extra work to get inside them and then strip them from the ear. In the old days this would have been taken as prophecy of a severe winter. It is, still, in many quarters. But that isn't the condition which has impressed me most.

You see, my corn was planted early and cultivated scrumptiously. As a result, it did very well, rather better than usual, though by no means a record-breaking crop. The ears are well filled and plentiful. There is an unusual number of two-eared stalks. It is from them that I've noted one curious and suggestive fact, i. e., that twin-ears on the same stalk are apt to resemble each other as closely as twin-babies born of the same mother.

If one ear is short, stubby and big-butted, the other will be, too. If one is long, slim and easily broken off, the other will be like unto it. If one has ten or twelve rows of kernels, the other will generally have the same number. If one is a little soft and immature, so will be its mate. If one has mildewed or "smutted," the other will be apt to have similar blemishes. Also, if one is of good size and shape, well filled out at the tip and slenderly butted to the stalk, with eight full rows of plump kernels, running in perfect rows, the other will closely resemble it.

I've only husked about 20 bushels, thus far. Yet from them I've saved 20 ears, quite justifiably classed as good seed ears, each pair of which was saved from the same stalk. I'm hoping and expecting to find more—perhaps enough to plant whatever small area I may feel like attempting to care for, next season.

It is to be assumed that other corn-huskers have found a similar state of things in their corn-patches. And no doubt many have wondered if any advantage could be taken of the tendency thus disclosed. There is nothing at all unnatural or freakish about the thing. It is quite in accord with the rule throughout nature. Twin cubs or babies are usually marked much alike and have manifestly similar tendencies of growth and development. Why shouldn't the same rule govern in the plant kingdom? Theoretically it is probable; practically it seems to be the fact.

Of course I had noticed the twinning tendency in past years. Once, 30 years ago or so, I started out to develop a double-eared cornstalk from some ordinary Longfellow field corn. By continuous selection of double-eared seed I succeeded, in only five years, in getting a strain of this corn which averaged one-half double-eared stalks, over a field of four or five acres. That is, fully one-half of all the stalks bearing ears at all bore two ears, big enough and mature enough to be cribbed, and to grow strongly if planted, next spring.

Some stalks, indeed, developed three and four ears. The last year of my experiment one stalk had on it as many as seven ears, three of them admittedly small and soft, but four good enough to make meal or seed, according as one preferred. For some time I kept these seven ears, all husked without breaking from the stalk, hanging in my corn-crib to give their testimony to the truth of my assertion that I had raised them.

Unfortunately, circumstances forbade my carrying on this experiment farther. I had to turn in other directions. And the neighbor to whom I intrusted some of my two-eared seed, in the hope that he would be able to go on with the development, for some reason forgotten now failed to do so. The five years' work went for nothing. Except as it had taught me what can be done for one of our stand-by crops, through wise selection of seed, adequate fertilization and cultivation of crop, and a trusting reliance on Nature's almost infinite capacity to rise from good to better, if given a helping hand in the process.

I think I've once before told you how we are still growing in our gardens the same potato which we first planted in them over 50 years ago. It was a seedling of the once famous "Early Rose," which seemed to show certain improvements over that standard variety. It was early and, at the same time, an extraordinarily good keeper. My father, who was fond of potatoes and would have eaten them three times a day and seven days a week, if they had been on the table, asserted that it was "mealy" when dug in July, only half-grown, and just as mealy and sweet the following June, after 11 months in the bin. He liked it so well that he re-planted it, year after year. I have done the same. For something over 50 years we have continued to get good crops of this strain, reproduced from our own home-saved seed. Neither my father nor I ever tried to see what, if any, improvements we could bring about in it by careful seed selection and extra care in tillage and manuring. The very fact that we have kept the strain germinative and decently productive for half a century, without any need for "changing seed," is, in itself, ample proof of what can be done by simply planting good, average tubers, neither extra big nor unsalably small. To have done that much is, as I think most potato growers will admit, something of an accomplishment. But I wish now that I had begun 30 years ago to see what I could have done by careful selection for seed of only the best potatoes in the best and earliest hills, showing the healthiest tops and the largest yields.

And that leads me up to a suggestion which may or may not find an echo in the mind of some younger farmer.

Some of us have a favorite among our crops, one in which we take special interest and which we rather like to work at. Why isn't there a chance for such to do something worth while in making a sort of hobby of that particular crop, and seeing what can be done with it under the most favoring conditions, with the shrewdest care, and the most judicious selection of seed?

Take corn, for instance. If the persistent planting of two-eared seed for only five years resulted with me in the development of a strain half of whose stalks bore two ears each, every year, might not ten or a dozen years of such selective work have resulted in a crop practically all of whose stalks would have borne two ears each? This would have meant a doubling of the acre-yield. That is, as much grain would have been produced from the plowing, fencing, fertilization, seeding and cultivation of one acre as, otherwise, would have been taken off two acres. The saving of time and work and fertilizer outgo by reducing the tilled acreage one-half every working farmer will appreciate.

Wouldn't the seed saved from such corn be in demand from other farmers who knew their business?

Isn't there a chance in this for the farmer who grows such two-eared corn and can certify his seed to pick up a few sorely needed extra dollars?

To say nothing about gratifying his own pride of workmanship and adding to his glory of accomplishment?

Same with potatoes. I used to find, when I was raising garden truck, that good, smooth, mealy, shallow-eyed early potatoes were always in demand. The earlier the better. If some working farmer, with years enough ahead of him to give him elbow-room, should take the best early potato he can find and deliberately set himself to a ten or fifteen years' course of training it, what might he not have at the end of that time? He would want to select his seed from only the earliest hills, with the largest production of the best tubers. He would want to plant them in warm, early soil. He would need to give them pernickety care and the cleanest of clean cultivation. They would want generous fertilization. And then only the very best would be found worthy of selection for the next year's seeding. It is not to be doubted that such a course would result in the final development of a strain at once earlier, smoother and mealier than that produced by the ordinary hit-or-miss planting of anything that happened to be left in the bin at seeding time.

And, again, wouldn't such stock be in demand from other farmers?

Now, this idea isn't for everybody. It is only for such as may find it interesting and suggestive. It is, really, only for such as have an innate fondness for some particular crop, and a natural liking for "puttering" with it.

The average farmer will, doubtless, continue to grow average crops in the average way. He will keep right on in the ruts his wheels have made in past years. The question is whether you who happen to read this are an "average" farmer, or whether you'd like to get out of the ruts?

Some wise old guy of the ancient world enunciated the truth that he was a benefactor of the race who made two spears of grass grow where only one grew before.

Wouldn't he be a greater benefactor who made two ears of corn grow where only one would have grown but for his solicitude and labor? Wouldn't he be a greater benefactor who made two bushels of earlier and better potatoes grow where but one was diggable before?

There's no use in any one trying to develop a specialty in farming or anything else, unless he has the makings of a specialist in him, naturally. You know whether you've ever been bitten by that bug or not; I don't. If you haven't, you've wasted ten minutes of perfectly good time reading this. If you have, maybe you'll find in it a "steer" towards something really worth while.

It's up to you.

THE FARMER.

Corn Makes Snowflakes

There are in the United States regular mills where corn is shaved up into snowflakes to be used in theatrical and motion picture productions that portray snowstorm scenes. The making of snowflakes from corn has become a big business with many milling plants. One of the characteristics of the corn snow is that it shows up with just the proper degree of whiteness and is also easily brushed off.

MOTORIST RUNS INTO THE RIVER OPPOSITE NEW LONDON, IN GROTON

NEW LONDON, Oct. 15—An automobile owned and operated by Leon Murray, 39, of 75 Howard street, came close to plunging into the Thames river this forenoon when the car dropped off a 25-foot embankment on the Groton shore to the edge of the river, the car partially entering the water. Murray sustained slight cuts and abrasions.

Murray was operating the car down the steep grade of Broad street and intended to guide the car northerly on Thames street when the intersection of the two streets was reached. As the car was nearing the corner Murray lost control of the machine, it is believed, by the disabling of the steering gear, and plunging across Thames street, the car continued through a yard, crashing against an out-house and toppling it over, then following to the edge of the bank where it dropped to the shore and followed into the water to a depth that reached the body of the car. Murray managed to extricate himself and wade ashore. A steam lighter was passing at the time and the derrick was attached to the machine which was placed aboard the lighter and then transferred to a nearby wharf.

Alexander Heller has lodged complaint with the police because of annoyance and expense he has been subjected to of late by youths smashing windows of his store, 184 main street.

An automobile owned and driven by William A. Wehner, 862 Winchester avenue, New Haven, and a car owned and operated by Salvatore Damico, 57 Shaw street, were in collision last night at the corner of Chrystal avenue and Main streets. Both cars were damaged.

The automobile owned and driven by Samuel Lubchansky, 217 Main St., and a car owned and driven by Joseph Haze, 537 Bank street, collided this morning at the corner of Bank and Howard streets. Neither car was damaged of consequence.

When Jerry Murphy, a young man, went along Main street Wednesday night he noted at doors and a disturbance that attracted Policeman Patrick Sheehan. That meant the arrest of Murphy and he was presented in the police court this morning charged with offensive conduct and breach. "Guilty," said Murphy when first to plead. It was at the door of a man and Conway that Murphy's temper soiled. Murphy had no excuse to offer, Judge Prince fined him $10 and he was fined a year ago for breach of peace and reprimanded before that he was allowed his ty on a suspended judgment. Murphy remarked as he left the court that he'd "not get a fair deal here." t he considered a fair deal he did as.

William Whewell of Pawcatuck ave- in Westerly, was fined $5 for oping a Ford touring car with the markers of a commercial car attached to it. He bought the car in Westerly and assumed that he could operate it as he was owner of it. His method of running the car was such that he attracted attention of Officer Courtney and was held up. Then it was disclosed that he was trying to put one over on the motor vehicle department. He has before been convicted of violation of the auto laws of the state.

Mike O'Neill, a stranger in this city, or at least not a resident here, was in the freight yard of the New Haven railroad yesterday, and was doing stunts on a freight car. That night save been a safe thing for a man who was not loaded with liquor to do, but in O'Neill's case it was foolhardy. He fell from the car and though he was not hurt that was due wholly to good luck. Railroad Officers Kane and McGrath took O'Neill into custody and last night he was out of danger and in a cell in the police station. O'Neill could not explain, so he did not attempt to do so. Judge Prince ordered him to jail for ten days. Three months ago he served a similar term. When he was released he went to the haven of booze hunters, Fisher's Island and remained there till yesterday when he ventured away.

Frank Cone, a man well along in years, who gave his address Ashaway, R. I., was found drunk and down in the street during the rain last night. He was given shelter and this morning he told the court that he had made a mistake and drank more than he realized he was taking. He declared that his father was living alone at Ashaway and that his one desire was to go to him. He was in a repentent mood and promised that he would send back an amount to pay his fine and the costs of his trial, if he was allowed to do that. His request was granted.

Repair work that is going on along the trolley tracks on Bank street, near Golden, necessitates the closing of the east side of the highway for a short distance. This morning a gang of men was at work tracing the track connection and they were using an acetylene torch. This blocked traffic. At the time Salvatore Di Marco was hurrying along in a commercial car. He had to stop. As he did so, he did not put out his arm, so an automobile operated by Warrant Officer McGirr smashed into the rear of the DiMarco machine. The headlights, the mudguards and the hood over the engine of the McGirr car went into smash. The cost of the repair of the car will be considerable, but it can be repaired. McGirr is in command of a 75-foot steamer from the base and he was hurrying to get aboard that craft when the collision occurred. The crash attracted a crowd, but McGirr said, "I'll shove off and come back for a settlement."

Mrs. John Gandy and infant son, of 319 Bank street; Miss Beatrice Phillips, 291 Huntington street; Miss Lillie Hayman, 23 Shapley street and Mrs. Harry Brogan, Groton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were patients dismissed today.

An automobile, owned and driven by John L. Atchison, 19 Brooks street, struck a child on Shaw street, near Moore avenue, this forenoon. The youngster escaped injury, other than sustaining bruises.

The victory of the Pittsburgh Pirates over Washington in the world series was a big surprise to the baseball fans in this city, who backed the Senators to the extent of their means. The enthusiastic supporters of the American League team formed their opinion from what they read in the big city papers and in doing so paid for the lack of discretion and for failure to study the playing of the Pirates during the league season. It was a costly experience for many of the supporters of the Senators.

Charles Vose, employed as clerk at the Hotel Mohican, has returned to his home, Pearl street, after spending a fortnight with relatives at his former home, Boston.

Mrs. Sugrue, 11 Jefferson avenue, lodged complaint with the police this afternoon because of the alleged attack upon her daughter by John Piscitella, 9, who resides next door to the Sugrue family. Fire Chief Charles Rose late this afternoon requested the police to put a stop to the use of sirens on bicycles by youths. There are a number of cycles that carry the sirens and because of the sirens being very similar to those used by the fire apparatus and ambulances, the use of the sirens by the youths has caused members of the fire department much annoyance. It is cited that when a fire apparatus or ambulance approaches and the siren is sounded that drivers of all kinds of vehicles are supposed to operate their machines to the side of the curb and come to a stop until the fire apparatus or ambulance passes, but with youths using the siren drivers are apt to disregard the siren when it is sounded by the emergency vehicles and to continue the operation of the vehicles to the hindrance of the fire apparatus or ambulance and besides delaying them, may bring about an accident.

THIEF BAFFLED AT HOME OF MR. AND MRS. C. H. HULL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 15—Daylight thieves continue to operate in spite of the efforts of the police. Following upon the robberies at the residence of Stephen Sheehan, 67 Faire Harbour Place Monday, the burglarizing of the home of Sturos F. Peterson Nathan Hale street) Tuesday, the police were notified last night that entrance had been gained earlier in the day to the residence of Attorney C. Hadlai Hull, 73 Vauxhall street. No plunder was obtained. Mr. and Mrs. Hull and their family were absent from home from 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 6. Some time following their return home, Mrs. Hull discovered that a section of the wire screen of the rear door had been cut away and that the thief had managed to gain entrance to the rear hall, but because of the door leading to the apartments being securely locked the crook had to leave without being rewarded with obtaining plunder for his efforts.

GEORGE S. PALMER FOR EXECUTIVE COMMITTE HEAD

NEW LONDON, Oct. 15—George S. Palmer, New London manufacturer and philanthropist, today was named chairman of the executive committee of the $550,000 endowment effort to be made next month by Connecticut College for Women.

His appointment was announced today by Governor John H. Trumbull, chairman of the citizens' committee of one hundred.

As executive chairman Mr. Palmer will name sixteen associates from various parts of the state who will have direct control of the endowment work. Mr. Palmer has long been a trustee of Connecticut College for Women and is now president of the board of trustees. Mr. and Mrs. Palmer gave the institution its present library, considered one of the best equipped of its kind in any institution. It has ample provisions for 600 students.

One of the other gifts of which the college is extremely proud is the Seventeenth Century room, also donated by Mr. Palmer. The room is filled with antiques of the Seventeenth Century period and is considered one of the most authentic in the country. Many art museums have offered thousands of dollars for various pieces of furniture included in this collection.

In fact, college records show that 90 per cent. of the college's assets of $2,500,000 were the gifts of persons residing within five miles of the college. It is desired to make more widespread the college's support.

SUCCEEDS OZIAS DODGE AS FORESTRY DIRECTOR

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Connecticut Forestry association, Samuel P. Senior of Bridgeport was elected as a director of the association, to replace Ozias Dodge of Norwich, who died recently.

Mr. Senior is president of the Bridgeport Hydraulic company and has been for many years interested in forestry. Under his leadership this company has planted a large acreage of land surrounding its reservoirs to young pines, which are already proving a profitable investment. In addition he is president of the Fairfield County Forest Protective association, an association of woodland owners who employ a special fire patrolman to keep forest fires off their lands.

Mr. Senior is also the president of the Fairfield County Planning association, an organization interested in planning for public parks, improved highways and general civic improvements for the county.

T. L. T. SEWING CLUB HAS ENJOYABLE MEETING

The T. L. T. Sewing club, a new social association composed of local business girls, had its initial meeting on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Burton Jopson, 307 Washington street.

The evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all the members, the time being devoted to sewing and making plans for the future, while a pleasing musical programme was followed by refreshments. This meeting is the first of many which the club will hold at the homes of members during the fall and winter.

Protecting Shore Property

In an effort to prevent tramps and others from breaking into unoccupied summer homes during the winter months the Rhode Island state police have decided to establish day and night patrols from East Greenwich to Westerly. Similar protection will be given in Newport county, particularly the Little Compton section.

The following notice has been posted in various parts of southern Rhode Island:

"The department of state police patrols day and night to prevent breaks into houses located in this section.

"If you see suspicious persons on the road in the vicinity of these houses.

"If you see lights in houses which have been vacated.

"If you see unauthorized trucks or automobiles going to such houses.

"If any other suspicious occurrence comes to your attention, please go at once to the nearest telephone.

"Call 'Emergency, State Police,' and report the circumstances."

Amston Road Open

The Amston road from Colchester was opened to traffic Wednesday morning. Buses were operated over it between Willimantic and Colchester, commencing Thursday.

Connecticut Oysters O. K.

The state department of health announces that all oyster beds in the state have been examined and it has been found that all shucking houses and beds are in accordance with the sanitary code of the state. All shucking houses examined have been licensed to operate. Health Commissioner Stanley H. Osborn says "there is no doubt about the good value of oysters and the citizens of the state are assured of the safety of all oysters grown and shucked in Connecticut."

VAUDEVILLE ENTERTAINERS APPLAUDED BY ELKS

An excellent entertainment for the Elks social session, which followed the business meeting at the Elks home on Thursday evening, was provided by vaudeville artists from the Broadway theatre through the courtesy of Abe Davidson, manager. Every act was a winner and the generous applause left no doubt in the minds of the entertainers that they scored a hit with the Norwich Elks.

Arthur Humby, Julia Clifford and James Pinto took the crowd by storm with their singing and dancing number, which they called "Nothing Serious," and which was full of melody, fun and frolic. The Tulsa Sisters, Lola and Belle, were favorites for their sweet voiced solos and charming violin numbers, while the accompanists, Benson and Pelle.in, rendered good support.

Sauerkraut, frankfurters and coffee were served by the entertainment committee.

BOSTON FIRM SUES TO COLLECT FOR COAL

Staples & Bell, Inc., a Boston firm, has brought suit against Abraham Jacobson of this city to collect for two carloads of coal sold to the Norwich man and not paid for, according to the claims in the case. The first car load was on Oct. 10 1923, of the value of $629.77 and the second on Oct. 19, 1923 of the value of $508.78. The suit is returnable before the superior court for this county in November.

UNION MAN INJURED— STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

UNION, Oct. 15—While Nelson E. Horton was walking on the state road between the home of Louis Roberts and the Chernushek farm, Wednesday evening, a car coming from Union and a car from Stafford met. The light of the car from Union way blinded him, and the car from Stafford struck and dragged him quite a distance. The driver of the latter car picked Mr. Horton up and carried him home. He had severe cuts and bruises on his back, legs and arm. He is feeling more comfortable today and it is hoped that the injuries are not serious.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR
Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, O. N. Johnson, 642 N. Broad St., Philadelphia, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

Bobbed Hair
How to Keep it Thick Healthy, Vigorous

The constant curling and waving demanded by modern style in hair dress, slowly burns the color, lustre and very life from the hair, leaving it dry, faded, brittle, streaked with gray; then the hair roots shrink and the hair falls out fast.

A 35-cent bottle of refreshing, fragrant "Danderine" will do wonders for any girl's hair. This vitalizing beauty tonic acts on the hair like fresh showers of rain and sunshine on vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

Try this for one week! While combing and dressing your hair, moisten your hair brush with a little "Danderine" and brush it through your hair—the effect is startling! Your hair immediately takes on new life and that healthy, youthful lustre, becomes incomparably soft, wavy and appears twice as thick and abundant.

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 15—(AP)—Speculation for the rise continued to run riot in today's stock market, upwards of fifty issues breaking through to new high levels for the year on total sales in excess of two and one half million shares.

With the exception of one day last fall it was the largest single day's volume of business since December 31, 1916, when total transactions exceeded 3,000,000 shares following the "lead" on President Wilson's peace note to Germany. Net gains in the active business issues ranged from 1 to 14 points.

Brokers were generally inclined to attribute the advance to speculative expectations of lower taxes following the announcement that Secretary Mellon proposed to suggest a 20 per cent. maximum surtax at the hearings on the new tax bill which begins in Washington next Monday.

Bullish enthusiasm also was stirred by reports of hardening steel prices and increasing mill operations and favorable divided and recapitalization rumors affecting several of the large industrial companies.

Continuation of high call money rates, which caused much of the recent selling, and cautionary advices of some of the conservative commission houses were apparently disregarded although the market did sell somewhat toward the close on profit taking.

Commission houses reported a marked expansion in public participation, buying orders pouring into the market from all sections of the country. The sudden revival of activity and strength in United States Steel common, which touched a new high on the current movement at 128 1-2, did much to stimulate the demand for other standard industrial issues. One block for 12,000 shares of steel changed hands at 12, representing a single transaction of $1,500,000.

Motors took a new lease of life under the leadership of General Motors, which soared seven points to a new high record at 128 in apparent anticipation of large cash dividend at the next meeting of the board of directors. It was followed into new high ground by Studebaker, Dodge Brothers, A and preferred, Chrysler preferred, Yellow Truck preferred, Gabriel Snubber and Fisher Body. United Cigar Stores, which is expected in some quarters to do some melon cutting, led another advance in tobaccos by touching a new top at 99 1-2. General Cigar and American Sumatra Tobacco preferred also reached new high ground.

Armour B, which was admitted to trading today after having been dealt in on the curb market, changed hands in large volume, touching a new top at 20 in anticipation of an early inauguration of dividends on a $3 annual basis.

Mercantile shares continued to soar. Kinney soaring an extreme advance of over 12 points at 100 and then slipping back to 97, and being followed into to new high territory by Gimbel Brothers, R. C. Macy, National Cloak and Suit, Arnold Constable and Weber and Heinlbroner.

Non-Ferrous metal stocks also gave another good demonstration of group strength, new peak prices being recorded by Cerro De Pasco, Federal Mining and Smelting preferred, International Nickel and Howe Sound. Public Utilities moved forward under the leadership of Columbia Gas, Standard Gas and Electricity and North American.

Call money renewed at 5 1-4 per cent. and then advanced to 5 1-2. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges fluctuated at $4.83 3-4, despite the announcement of additional gold shipments, but French francs eased to around 4.46 1-2 cents. Italian lire rallied about 7 points to above 3.58 cents. Danish krone jumped over 10 points to 24.82 cents but Norwegian krone ruled about six points lower around 20.25 cents.

STATE WILL BUILD TWO NEW BRIDGES OVER THE NIANTIC RIVER

Two new bridges over the Niantic river to be built by the state highway department are included in five contracts that have just been awarded by the department to the lowest bidder.

Three new bridges, which will cost $43,197 and two sections of roadway, which will cost $40,600, are in the five contracts awarded as follows:

Towns of East Lyme and Waterford—88 foot span concrete bridge over Niantic river to the Holbrook Company, Westbrook for $8,800.

Town of East Lyme — 26 foot span concrete bridge over Niantic river to the Holbrook company, Westbrook, for $17,197.

Shelton, 1,745 square rods of 3-inch asphalt over 6-inch concrete base on the intersection of Howe avenue and Bridge street, to Silliman and Godfrey, Bridgeport, for $9,000.

PRECAUTIONS FOR TRAFFIC TO YALE-PENN GAME

Every precaution is being taken by the state motor vehicle, highway and police departments, in cooperation with the New Haven Automobile club and police, to prevent automobile accidents during the procession of motor vehicles through Connecticut to and from the Yale-Pennsylvania football game Saturday.

Through the courtesy of the athletic authorities of both universities, applicants for tickets of admission to this game, the first to be played by Yale and Pennsylvania since 1903, are receiving in the envelope with their tickets a card issued by the three state departments mentioned giving a list of the four principal routes to the Yale Bowl which will be found most convenient in approaching the Bowl from different directions, and bespeaking the cooperation of all drivers with the efforts of the state police to keep traffic orderly and avoid accidents. The purpose of announcing these routes well in advance is to secure an even distribution of the enormous traffic which is expected to pour into New Haven and out of it again during the day of the game, not to mention Friday night arrivals and Sunday departures. It is believed that hopeless confusion would result if efforts were not made in advance to divide the traffic conveniently, as estimates place the number of cars which may be expected on account of the game as high as 35,000, which is considerably more than all the cars owned in New Haven.

In previous years, the direction cards have been distributed by state policemen who handed them to automobilists as they came along on the highways leading into New Haven, but it was found that this practice had a tendency to slow up traffic at a time when regularity in the movement of vehicles at a reasonable speed was desired to obviate congestion at any point along the various routes. It has been found that most accidents occur on occasions like this when crowding begins.

Every available state policeman will be on the main highways directing traffic Saturday and in the towns and cities along the principal traffic lanes, arrangements have been made to have extra policemen and constables on duty for the same purpose. Reckless driving will result in immediate arrest.

One side of the card which has been received by every original ticket holder, carries the following message:

"It is the function of the state policemen whom you will meet patrolling the main highways during the football season

a. to enforce the motor vehicle laws.

b. to so regulate traffic as to prevent accidents, and

c. to expedite the movement of traffic within the limits of safety.

Please observe there are no "don'ts" on this card. We assume that you know the laws.

We merely ask you to make it possible for each officer on patrol to make the following report to headquarters:

"Traffic orderly, no arrests and no accidents."

On the other side of the card is given a list of different routes into the city, as follows:

"No. 1. Hartford route (in good condition)—Enters New Haven by the way of North Haven, where traffic is split, one route continuing into city by way of Middletown avenue and the other by turning to the right at North Haven center into State street and thence to the right into Dixwell avenue.

"No. 2. New London route (in good condition)—Enters New Haven by the way of Branford and East Haven and will be directed by traffic officers from the city line to the Bowl.

"No. 3. Waterbury route (in good condition)—Enters by the way of Cheshire, Mt. Carmel and Centerville, Whitney avenue, Putnam street and Dixwell avenue.

"No. 4. New York route—Enters by the way of Washington Bridge at Devon to Milford, and over Milford turnpike to Forest street.

JUDGE RESERVES DECISION IN CONTESTED DIVORCE

The contested divorce case of Ethel Palmer Biesecker of New London against Milton D. Biesecker employed as janitor at the Y. M. C. A., in that city was heard before Judge Allyn L. Brown in superior court there Thursday after which the judge took the papers.

The trouble between the couple as brought out in court was of a petty and domestic nature, financial discussions being the chief cause. It was brought out that the home purchased by Biesecker was placed in his wife's name and is still so listed. There are two children by the marriage and they are still with their mother, who makes her home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Palmer of West Pleasant street.

Some of the testimony was conflicting, but none was of a serious character, Mrs. Biesecker claiming that at times her husband had ignored her and that he was rather frugal with the money. She said that he turned practically all of it over to her when they lived together but had also mapped out a budget routine for her to follow.

Biesecker, it was brought out, had paid his wife money for a considerable period after the separation but she claimed that it was only used for the children.

Biesecker when asked by Judge Brown if he wanted his wife and wished yet to establish his home stoutly remarked that he did and would always want her. Mrs. Biesecker stated that she did not care to go back with him. Attorney George Curtis Morgan represented the plaintiff while Attorney Clayton Smith appeared for the defendant.

Mrs. Biesecker said that she married Biesecker June 30, 1916, and she claimed he left her on Sept. 19, 1921. The defendant denied that he had deserted her saying that her mother in company of her father came to the house and told him that she would take her daughter home for a while until "she cooled off." Biesecker said that he believed his wife's character to be the highest.

Mrs. Biesecker stated that many quarrels had taken place and that she would not care to go over it again and believed that such a home would not be the place for her children.

BUYING SHANTOK PARK SITE FOR $14,000

The state farm and forest commission has voted to purchase a tract of 110 acres belonging to John O'Brien near the city of Norwich for $14,000. The O'Brien farm occupies historic ground, having been used as an Indian cemetery and it is planned by the commission to make an attractive addition to the state system of parks and public forests. This is the Fort Shantok park site in the town of Montville.

The commission also voted to continue condemnation proceedings to obtain 20 acres of land adjoining the O'Brien tract and belonging to Frank J. Foote, Mr. Foote has asked $4,000 for his land and the commission has offered $1,000. When the sale of the O'Brien land was first proposed Mr. O'Brien asked $15,000 but has agreed to take $14,000.

The commission elected the following officers: President Lucius F. Robinson of Hartford; secretary, Edward H. Wilkins of Hartford, deputy state comptroller; treasurer, Walter G. Filley of New Haven.

The commission appropriated $1,200 for anti-mosquito work at Hammonasset Beach with the provision that if there is any portion of the fund remaining after the work has been done there it shall be used in similar work elsewhere.

MODELS WORE GOWNS IN LATEST COTTON FABRICS

A number of local textile men have been in attendance at the annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, at the Copley-Plaza hotel, Boston, on Wednesday and Thursday.

The feature, which was probably one of the most notable exhibits of modern cotton fabrics yet put on in the United States, was under the auspices of the ladies of the association and was held in connection with a dinner dance at the hotel Wednesday evening.

From 50 to 60 living models appeared, gowned in material all made in the exhibiting mills, all of which are located in the north, and many of them are in Eastern Connecticut. The development of cotton fabrics, including rayon, or artificial silk, was shown in a most striking manner and prizes were awarded by Conde Naste, editor of Vogue.

Grosvernor Ely of Norwich, treasurer of the Ashland Cotton Co., of Jewett City was a member of the entertainment committee.

BACKUS HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

Although a few outlying districts have been unable to complete the canvas for members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, the membership committee reports a decided gain over last year. At present there are 1,378 annual memberships, and 53 life memberships. The latter, amounting to $585, and lying at interest, forms the nucleus of a proposed nurse's scholarship fund. The annual memberships, together with money raised by the finance committee during the year, constitute the treasury from which the Auxiliary draws, in order to supply improvements to the hospital as their need is brought to the notice of the women's executive board. From this fund has come the beautiful and suitable silver for the trays for private rooms. Mention has already been made of the 12 trays so supplied, and on Labor Day the remaining 16 trays were completed and used for th first time. The equipment of these 28 trays, with silver teapots, cream pitchers, sugar bowls, butter chips, soup bowls, and plate covers, has cost $981.60, aside from the ice cream containers and flat silver bought some months ago. To this is soon to be added four dozen silver soup spoons. Now all the private rooms are provided with excellent tray service, and every member of the auxiliary will realize with pleasure that her dollar has helped bring this department of the hospital as near perfection as possible.

Mrs. William H. Dawley and her finance committee, needs more money than that supplied by the membership dues. To help secure it, she announces a bridge party to be held at the home of Mrs. William Austin Tables may be reserved by calling either Mrs. Austin, Tel. 30, or Mrs. Dawley, Tel. 224. Prizes are to be given for each table and candy will be for sale.

Gifts from the following persons have been received in the past two months, either directly or through department chairman:

Mrs. Oliver L. Johnson, Miss Lillian Hawes, Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughan, Mrs. Moon, Mrs. Shephard B. Palmer, Mrs. Alexander H. Abbott, Mrs. Walter F. Lester, Mrs. Frederick Sayles, Mrs. Charles Hadson, Mrs. Oscar Dahl Mrs. George Benson, Mrs. Victor Tongren, Mrs. Earl Johnson, Mrs. Charles Pearson, Mrs. Henry Vise, Mrs. Alice Hayden, Mrs. George Howard, Mrs. William Lund, Mrs. Herbert Peckham, Mrs. James Spicer, Mrs. Henry Sebastian, Miss Jennie Sebastian, Mrs. Bassett, Miss Isabel Mitchell, Mr. Pettis, W. C. Harrison of Hanover, Mrs. Louis Richards, Mrs Benjamin Kennedy, Mrs. James Hubbard, Mrs. F. W. Lester, Mrs. Paul Gadle, Mrs. William Brown, Miss Kate Riordan, Mrs. Frank Sterry, Miss McConnell, Mrs. Walter Gilbert, Mrs. Charles A. Saxton, Mrs. Frank Smith, Henry Arnold, Mrs. James Crawford Mrs. Arthur Latham, Frank L. Woodard, Mrs. Stockdale, Mrs. Rollinson. These gifts include books and magazines, clothes, a man's overcoat, jars, old cotton and linen, flowers, six combination nightgowns and food. Twice in the past few weeks the Connecticut council of Catholic Women have sent ice cream and cake to the ward patients. On labor Day the Lion's club provided ice cream, and cake was given by ladies of the Swedish Lutheran and Third Baptist churches The Elks remembered Columbus day by giving ice cream and cake. The holiday committee gave special napkins. Large boxes of flowers have been sent by the New London County fair and by the Social Workers council of the New London county. Seven pairs of slippers have gone to the men's ward from the woman's auxiliary.

While gratefully acknowledging these gifts there is a great need for relics, preserves, pickles, canned fruit and vegetables. A systematic canvass has been made to bring in a big supply of these foods, and if anyone has not been solicited, she is asked to communicate with the chairman of the committee, Mrs. H. H. Allyn, telephone 1703, who will gladly call for them.

There is a great constant need for old cotton and linen. Mrs. J. Edward Driscoll, telephone 51, begs that this matter be kept on mind. She gratefully thanks the following for their contributions:

Miss Eliza W. Avery, Mrs. Herbert Gallup, Mrs. James Spicer, the Misses Trumbull, Mrs. R. S. Gernon, Mrs. Lewis R. Church, Mrs. Thomas Lahey, Miss Hattie Harris, Mrs. John Burke, Mrs. Gardner, Miss Mary Porteous, Mrs. Margaret Spelman, Miss Lillian Hawes, Mrs. Amy F. Burlingame, Mrs. James Craford, Mrs. Walter Lester, Mrs. Charles Bard, Mrs. Daniel McCormick, Mrs. William Somers, Mrs. Arthur Blackledge, Mrs. Harry Stebbins, Mrs. J. H. Maloney, Mrs Henry D. Buckley, Miss Mary Buckley, Eldridge Hardward Store, Mrs. Corcoran, Mrs. Edward Briggs, Mrs. Hiram Beckwith, Miss Maria Briggs, Mrs. Herbert Willey, Mrs. George Hall, Mrs. William Crowe, Jr., Mrs. J. Frank Clard, Miss Mary Crowe, Mrs. Frederick Fontaine, Mrs. Walter Lang, Mrs. Lincoln Crawford, Mrs. Fred Crowell, Jr., and from Jewett City the following: Mrs. Deantry, Mrs. Hiscox, Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Briggs, Miss Hunnon, Mrs. F. E. Rainville, and Mrs. J. H. McLaughlyn.

An important aid in helping the sick back to health is light reading matter. The magazine committee is asking very urgently that any one who has light novels which they are willing to give away will communicate with the chairman, Mrs. Charles L. Stewart, 123 Broad street, and she will call for them. The committee is anxious to obtain a great many novels before the opening of the Nurses' home the early part of November. They also ask for recent magazines, which Mrs. Stewart will collect if notified.

The production committee resumed its weekly work in making surgical dressings on Sept. 21, completing 782 dressings since that time. Those working on different days have Miss Hannah Crowell, chairman, Mrs. Frederick Sayles, Miss Margaret Sayles, Miss Helen Williams, Miss Annie Williams, Miss Jane Bill, Mrs. Walter Camp, Mrs. Harrison Gray, with Mrs. Henry D. Johnson acting as substitute on one of the days. This work has constant need of old sheets for packaging.

The auxiliary is glad to inform the public of the splendid work of the Neuro-Psychiatric clinic, as outlined in the following facts:

Since the clinic opened in October, 1923, there have been 315 individuals referred for treatment, ranging in age from a few months to 73 years. The 14 new cases registered last month were referred from the following sources:

Probation officer, 6; friends, 3; physician, 1; W. W. Backus hospital, 1; parent, 1; Bureau of Child Welfare, 1; public health nurse, 1. Of the 132 cases now under active treatment 60 per cent. are children.

Broadly speaking but two conditions are necessary to prevent a considerable amount of mental disorder. 1. That early, warning symptoms of approaching mental disease, no matter what the variety, be early recognized. 2. That once recognized, prompt and efficient treatment be given. The early, warning symptoms generally show themselves in childhood in the form of fears, temper tantrums, habitual whining or crying, excessive shyness, obstinacy, day dreaming, cruelty, running away, etc.

Just as the tuberculosis movement required the active co-operation of a large majority of the public for success, so does the mental hygiene movement require widespread interest and help on the part of the community at large to achieve its goal The fight against "Man's Last Spectre" (mental disease) is everyone's. The burden of mental disease falls on every last person in the community. There is no home unmenaced.

Recent additions to the clinic lending library includes phamphlet "Studies in Child Training," covering obedience, punishment, truth and falsehood, curiosity, use of money, habits, imagination, health training of the pre-school child and sex education And an article by Dr. Douglas Thom on "Training the Child for Health and Happiness."

NEW NORWICH SCHOOL AND FUTURE NEEDS

In the annual printed report of the Norwich public schools, which was distributed at the town meeting Tuesday night, the following statement on the new Bishop school on Main street, East side, is given:

The Bishop school building located on East Main street is a two-story building with basement. It is constructed of handsome faced brick with stone trim; fireproof construction throughout, with reinforced concrete floors covered with maple flooring each of the classrooms. The corridors are covered with linoleum. On the main floor immediately at the right of the main entrance is located a large kindergarten room, equipped with all the modern appliances for that department. At the left of the main entrance is the office and supply room. There is a main corridor running the whole length of the building. In addition to the kindergarten room, there are two classrooms and the auditorium, with a seating capacity of approximately, 250 persons. The auditorium is so designed that in the future should occasion require, by the introduction of one partition, the auditorium can be made into two standard-sized class-rooms. The second floor has a main central corridor with three standard-sized classrooms on either side. This makes in the building eight full-sized classrooms, one large-sized kindergarten room and the auditorium. The auditorium can be entered from the main entrance to the building or from a separate entrance at the side of the building. There are three exits for the pupils and two separate stairways from the upper floor to the basement.

In the basement is located a commodious community room, reached from the street without having to pass through the school building proper. This room will be used as a voting room for the city and town elections. On either side of this community room are two playrooms, well lighted and ventilated, and could easily be used for classroom purposes. Part way between the basement and first floor, in either end of the building, will be located the two main toilet rooms.

The heating and ventilation of the building has been planned along the very best possible lines, and each pupil is provided with 30 cubic feet of air per minute with a guaranteed removal of the vitiated air equal to 75 per cent of the supply. The glass area of the classrooms is equal to 25 per cent of the floor area or five per cent more than the state requires.

The building has a cubical content of almost 250,000 feet and cost, complete, with equipment, $100,000.

In all there are twelve classroom units. Figuring on the classroom unit basis, it brings the classroom unit cost down to $8,500 per room, including equipment. The cubical cost being less than 40 cents per foot, thereby giving it the distinction of being one of the lowest in cost per cubic foot of any building having been erected in the New England states during the past ten years.

Exceptional workmanship and materials have been used and the result is one of the very best school buildings in the eastern states.

The future needs are mentioned as follows:

1. A new sixteen room building constructed between the Town street and West Town Street School buildings.

2. A new twelve-room building at Greeneville.

3. Additional accommodations at Broadway.

To relieve the overcrowded conditions in each of these three sections of the town, the building program of the Town school committee should be carried forward.

The weekly session of the Men's Bible study was held Wednesday evening at the local Y. M. C. A. with a good group of men present.

The topic was "The Sad Failure of a Life," the scripture used was 2nd. Samuel 18:1-17, the sad story of David and Absalom at war over the kingdom.

Absalom, it was brought out, had a lust for power, and it carried him to the limit of meanness; lust for power was not only characteristic in that day, but in our time it is all too prevalent. When a man secures something wrongly he does not stop, but he seeks other things in the same way. A man's conscience is not always a safe guide, because one's conscience may become callous, or, as it were, dead. David's attitude toward his traitor son was still kindly and as he prepared finally to war against Absalom he demanded that his warriors "deal gently with Absalom."

When David learned that Absalom was slain, his grief knew no bounds and he wished he had died instead.

Methodist Boy Scouts' Social Evening

The Trinity Methodist Episcopal

No man can bring evil upon himself without causing sorrow to others. The average fellow who does wrong thinks little of the effects upon others; his parents or his friends. A wrong does generally suffer alone. Many fail to distinguish between liberty and license; that is one of the troubles with our country. There is a great need for loyalty; loyalty to one's business; to one's home; to one's friends; to one's community; to one's self and to one's God. There is no wreck comparable to the wreck of a life; to see a life intended for high and holy things absolutely given over to the low and mean, is a terrible thing.

Boy Scouts, Troop No. 6, met at the home of Kenneth R. Browning of Great Plain Wednesday evening. They numbered about 16. The meeting opened with the regular business meeting after which a social hour was spent. Refreshments were served by Miss Phillyss and Mrs. Browning. Mr. Graham and his two sons Robert and James, were present. Forest Lewis, Arthur Blake and Irwin Parsons are the principal leaders of this troupe. This is the first of such events to be held this season.

SURVIVORS OF THE SUB. S-51 TELL STORIES OF DISASTER

Three Submarine Men Told the Naval Inquiry Board Similiar Details of Events Which Followed the Crash—All Agreed That the Submarine's Lights Were in Working Order Until She Sank—None Had Any Charge to Make Against Any Officer or Man With Regard to the Loss of the S-51.

BOSTON, Oct. 16—(A. P.)—The three survivors of the Submarine S-51, told their stories today to the naval inquiry board which is in session here investigating the disaster which occurred off Block Island on September 25, when the vessel was rammed and sunk by the steamer City of Rome with the loss of 33 lives.

One of them, Michael Lira, repeated to the court a conversation which he had with Captain John H. Diehl, master of the City of Rome, during which the latter told him:

"I don't give a damn about the boat, itself, but I feel sorry for the boys."

This statement was made, Lira said, a few minutes after he had been picked up by the steamer's life boat which, he charged, was poorly handled as it searched the vicinity of the disaster for bodies.

"I recall," Lira said, "that when the lifeboat put back to the steamer, it was almost swamped as it passed under her stern."

The three submarine men told similar stories of the events which followed the crash which caused their vessel to sink in less than two minutes. A of them was asleep in the batcompartment when the ship was rammed.

Dewey G. Kile, testified that he was awakened when a piece of cork, a part of a bulkhead lining, struck him in the face. He said he leaped from his bunk into water up to his knee and ran forward to close the water tight door which led to the torpedo compartment. This was secured open by "dogs" and he was unable to close it before the water rushed in.

He then tried to close the door leading into the central control compartment and when he failed, climbed the conning tower ladder to the bridge. He was swept over the port side as the submarine sank, he said, and was the last man to leave, said he saw no one on the submarine bridge and only one man in the water, that was Weissman, the lookout, who was drowned before the City of Rome's lifeboat reached him.

Alfred Geier, the third survivor, testified that he saw Lieutenant Commander Dobson, commander of the S-51, on the bridge when he reached the top side. He said he heard his captain call out to the steamer, then but thirty yards away from the submarine, to throw him a line. This was not done, he said. Geier agreed with his two shipmates that there was no searchlight playing from the steamer after the crash. He did see one lighted life ring which he reached a few minutes before he was picked up by the life boat.

Each of the survivors testified that the submarine's lights were in working order until she sank. Two of them said that they noticed the stern light burning when they were on deck smoking, about two hours before the crash.

As each finished his testimony, Judge Advocate Lockwood asked:

"Have you any charge to make against any officer or man with regard to the loss of the S-51?" They had none.

The course of the submarine, James W. Frazer, a navy diver, testified, was hard right when she was rammed. He said that he made two dives to the S-51 and found the main rudder in a hard right position when he inspected it.

When Frazer was released from the stand, he was instructed to return to duty at the scene of the disaster, where preparations for salvage work are being made, and requested that the vicinity be thoroughly searched for the S-51's rought log.

This document was in use on the bridge when the submarine was rammed and contains important information of her movements on the fatal day.

CLOSING SESSION OF THE A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 16—The 45th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor ended today and was characterized by President William Green, in a farewell address to the delegation as "the most constructive convention of the federation ever held—one that will make history."

Twenty-three resolutions were adopted during the final session. Two congressional investigations were urged—one of the Ward Baking company and the proposed $400,000,000 baking combine and the other of the Bell Telephone system.

Resolutions adopted charged the Ward company with combatting union labor and keeping up the prices of bread, even during the war. It was charged that the company and the other companies in the proposed merger sought to control the bread making industry of the country.

The Bell system, which has been under fire at previous conventions of the federation, was charged with having a monopolistic grip on a vital public necessity, detrimental to the welfare of the country.

A resolution which would put the federation on record as opposing the affiliation of the United States with the world court was referred back to the executive council for a discussion. The council was ordered to investigate the subject carefully from all angles before committing itself.

There was a lengthy discussion on China, in which the federation finally decided to urge the withdrawal of extra-territorial privileges from all nations.

The educational program of the federation was the subject of a number of resolutions. No definite stand was taken by the federation, however, the executive council being empowered to make a further study.

In states which have no workmen's compensation act it was urged that efforts be made to obtain passage of a general act, even if it did not fully meet all the wishes of the trade unionists. It was argued that any kind of a compensation act was better than none and the proposal to draft a model act for the guidance of the several states was not pushed.

The executive council had a session after the convention adjourned, at which matters of policy were discussed.

WOMEN ARE DISCARDING ALL SURPLUS GARMENTS

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Men are now taking up corsets and waist line reducers, says Robert C. Stirton, president of a leading corset firm, who returned on the Cunarder Aquitania today, after making a fashion tour of Europe. From Constantinople to London, everywhere he has gone he has found women of fashion discarding surplus garments. To wear only two articles of apparel is the vogue today, he said.

"Women are returning," he said, "to garments that give a fuller expression to the natural body lines."

Mr. Stirton made a fortune in corsets but refused to be dismayed by the disappearance of that article from milady's boudoir. Men have "stepped in" he asserts, and now use corsets and waist line reducers to keep themselves in shape to make an impression upon the fair ones.

The machinery and equipment was damaged to the extent of several thousand dollars.

The demonstration resulted from the refusal of the washery owner, F. Carlucci, to halt operations. No arrests have been made.

RECORDS OF DAY'S CHECK COLLECTIONS BROKEN

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—(By the A. P.)—All records for a single day's check collections by the federal reserve system were broken this week when more than 3,500,000 checks with a total value of almost $1,000,000,000 passed through the twelve reserve banks at the peak of the post-holiday collection rush on Wednesday.

Indications of expanded fall business were reflected in the heavy check movement, which shows a bulge at this time every year because settlement day for many merchants on their autumn goods fall on Oct. 10. With the Columbus day holiday following closely, the tendency has been for checks to accumulate for several days thereafter, but the number handled this year was unprecedented. The movement today was reported nearly back to normal, which federal reserve authorities estimate at 2,000,000 checks daily with an average value of $60,000,000 for the entire system.

Striking evidence of the growth of the country's wealth is provided by the fact that last Wednesday's check collections of a billion dollars equalled the entire year's collections in 1853, when the first clearing house was introduced in New York for the settlement of checks.

Joy For Small Fry Income Tax Payers

Measure Discussed to Relieve 3,000,000 Persons of All Federal Income Taxes.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—A tax revision plan under which 3,000,000 persons would be relieved of all federal income taxes was discussed informally today with Secretary Mellon by Representative Garner of Texas, the ranking democrat on the house committee which drafts tax legislation.

After the conference, Representative Garner said the treasury secretary's plan provided only for the reduction of surtaxes and inheritance taxes. He made no statement as to how his counter-proposal was received at the treasury.

The Garner plan, which he said had been drafted without consultation with his democratic colleagues, contemplates a tax reduction of from $450,000,000 to $500,000,000, or approximately twice the total which the treasury is expected to recommend Monday when the tax hearings get under way before the ways and means committee.

The whole Garner programme is predicated upon retirement of the national debt in 62 years instead of 25, as proposed by Secretary Mellon. Mr. Garner said he favored the longer period because debtor nations would be given that length of time in which to pay off their obligations to the United States, which represents more than half of the total of this nation's indebtedness. The relieving of 3,000,000 taxpayers from all taxes would be brought about under the Garner proposal by increasing the exemption to $5,000 in the case of married persons and $3,500 in the case of single persons. The cut would not stop there, however, Mr. Garner advocating a reduction of the maximus surtax rate to 25 per cent. instead of 20 per cent. as the treasury is expected to propose.

Repeal of all the nuisance taxes also is favored by Mr. Garner if this is possible. These taxes, including those on sales of automobiles and accessories, cameras, films and amusements, are declared by the representative to be consumption or sale taxes, to the principle of which he is unalterably opposed.

He declared himself to be in entire accord with Chairman Green of the ways and means committee, on the inheritance tax proposal—a programme which contemplates the payment to the federal government only in the event that no state inheritance tax is paid, or if one is paid, then the difference between the amount paid to the state and the total provided for by the federal law, Chairman Green's programme calls for exemption in the case of estates of $100,000 or less.

Discussing his proposal to relieve 3,000,000 taxpayers of all income taxes, Mr. Garner said persons with small incomes should be given relief, particularly when it could be done at a cost of less than $100,000,000 to the federal treasury.

"By reducing the surtax from the present maximum of 20 per cent.," he added, "the treasury will lose more than $100,000,000 and comparatively few people will benefit. Then, too, by removing the taxes from the small taxpayers the cost of collection will be reduced materially.

"How far we can go in repealing the nuisance or consumption taxes depends, of course, on how far we go in reducing the income and estate taxes. If you greatly reduce the surtaxes and repeal the estate taxes, then the consumption levies will have to remain."

GUILTY OF DISPOSING OF GERALD CHAPMAN LOOT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16—Two Philadelphia business men, A. W. Perestrous and Stephen Robinson, Jr., were found guilty by a jury in United States court today of having aided in disposing of $300,000 worth of the $1,300,000 securities stolen by Gerald Chapman and his gang in a sensational mail truck robbery in New York four years ago.

Seven other men also were indicted for conspiracy in placing the bonds with a Philadelphia bank as security for a loan of $271,000. Their trial is scheduled for December.

Counsel for the men convicted today announced they would file motions for a new trial. In the meantime Perestrous and Robinson were released on $5,000 bail each.

Perestrous and Robinson, the government charged, together with Emmons J. Gardner, also of Philadelphia, pledged the stolen bonds with the Corn Exchange bank of this city in August, 1922. The bank, it was said, did not know the collateral was part of the Chapman loot until it was about to sell them after the pledges failed to pay interest on the loan.

The defendants claimed they obtained the bonds from a Colonel M. K. Bobruff, a Russian, in payment for the sale of oil stock. On one, it appeared, was able to tell where the Russian is living at present and government attorneys asserted he was a mythical personage mentioned only as a reason for Perestrous and Robinson being in possession of the bonds.

The Pontiff displayed much interest in the National Catholic Welfare Conference, of which Archbishop Hanna recently was elected president, and referred to various events which had taken place in California in the last few months.

Learning that the archbishop had a pilgrimage of about 10[illegible] Californians whom he wished to present the pope immediately fixed an audience for tomorrow.

LOCARNO CONFERENCE HAS SUCCEEDED IN ITS MISSION

Multitude Greets With Acclaim the Announcement That the Rhine Pact and Other Treaties Had Been Formally Approved—Briand, Chamberlain and Stresemann Were Cheered—Final Protocol Bears the Signatures of All the Delegations.

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 16 (AP)—Europe's great security conference ended tonight in a victory for peace. At exactly 7.20 the European statesmen who made this victory possible threw open a window on the second floor of the palace of justice, and, rejecting decorum, announced to the waiting multitude that the Rhine pact and other treaties had been formally approved. One of their number held aloft the final protocol bearing the signatures of all the delegations as proof tha the conference had succeeded in its mission.

Instantly the crowd gave vent to enthusiasm. Rockets were sent into the air, their balls of fire narrowly escaping entering the windows and falling on the shoulders of the delegates. The appearance at the window of M. Briand, the French foreign minister, was greeted with prolonged cheering. When the British foreign secretary, Austen Chamberlain, came and waved his hand, the crowd clamored for a speech. Chancellor Luther and the German foreign minister, Dr. Stresemann, were acclaimed with no less fervor than their colleagues.

M. Briand's speech at the closing session of the conference, which adjourned with the understanding that the treaties will be signed in London December 1, was qualified by his colleagues afterward as the most brilliant effort of his long career.

Dr. Stresemann had spoken first, summarizing the work of the conference and emphasizing that its success spelled a new era in European relationships, he declared solemnly that Germany would loyally live up to the peace pact. He made a discreet allusion to foreign occupation of the Rhineland.

In response M. Briand said that Locarno was not the end, but the beginning, of a new epoch of co-operation and friendship. He gave unstinted praise to the noble ideals and generosity of the German statesman who had originated the idea of fashioning security pacts for the maintenance of peace, and declared, that the world would duly render homage to this happy initiative. He frankly took up Dr. Stresemann's allusion to the occupation, and made it clear that the occupation would be so reduced as to give Germany no cause for complaint or uneasiness.

Turning toward Chancellor Luther and Dr. Stresemann, he said: "The people of France will soon recognize your loyal statement by an expression of good will toward the German people."

Austen Chamberlain, habitually cold and always master of himself, appeared to be at the verge of breaking down under the weight of joy and emotion which checked his words and made them almost unintelligible. He dwelt upon what Locarno meant to world harmony and to the hopes of all peoples, and paid moving tribute to the spirit of accommodation of all the delegates.

M. Vandervewde, Belgium's Socialist foreign minister, pledged that the Socialists would ever, with heart and soul, back up the results achieved at Locarno, saying that the Socialists who suffered during the war knew the real meaning of peace.

At the closing session the Rhine pact and the collateral arbitration treaties with which the pact is interlocked were all initialled, and the final act or protocol, was signed. The Rhine pact is signed by France, Germany and Belgium, with Great Britain and Italy as guarantors, and by its provisions the signatories undertake to refrain from attacking or invading the territory of the others. Great Britain and Italy pledge their resources for use against a signer who violates the terms of the pact.

Locarno is given over to rejoicing tonight. Bands played in crowded streets, and new electrical displays, in a place that was already ablaze with special illuminations, made it a fairyland of light and gaiety.

ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION TO CHAMBERLAIN AND BRIAND

LOCARNO, Switzerland, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Crowds massed in the streets gave an enthusiastic reception to Austen Chamberlain and M. Briand, the British and French foreign ministers, and later to Premier Mussolini of Italy, when they emerged from the afternoon session of the security conference, which was devoted to approval of the eastern arbitration treaties.

Mrs. Chamberlain, with the wives of some of the other delegates, sat modestly on chairs near the sidewalk awaiting the end of the session, after which they were escorted within the building for an informal chat with the leaders.

When they left, Mr. Chamberlain refused to enter an automobile, but walked down the thoroughfare with Mrs. Chamberlain through thick lines of people who applauded and cheered. The foreign secretary removed his hat frequently in acknowledgement and Mrs. Chamberlain smiled radiantly.

Meanwhile the Fascist guards which never leave Premier Mussolini had taken places around his waiting automobile, standing close to each other with heads uncovered. As the Fascist leader walked slowly down the stone steps they raised their right arms in the ancient Roman salute, keeping the position until Mussolini had become seated and the car started. Then they ran swiftly to other waiting automobiles, which followed the premier's car. Throughout the day these guards had kept close watch over the villa where Mussolini was a guest, patrolling the garden and leaving no spot of the house unprotected. Iron gates at the entrance were kept closed and locked, and Swiss Fascisti who came bearing gifts of flowers were forced to undergo close scrutiny and a lengthy examination of their credentials before they were allowed to enter.

As the Swiss Fascisti were honoring Mussolini another demonstration was taking place farther down the street at the hotel of Emile Vandervelde, the Belgian foreign minister and socialist leader. In the same hall where earlier in the day Mussolini had received a frigid reception from a considerable number of European journalists, a group of socialists presented M. Vandervelde with a bouquet of carnations and red chrysanthemums, saying they wished to honor the man who was a friend of Matteoti.

(The Italian socialist deputy Matteotti disappeared in 1924. After several months his body was found, and has death has been generally laid to the Fascisti.)

FRANK A. DALEY SENTENCED TO DIE IN THE ELECTRIC CHAIR

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—(A. P.)—Frank A. Daley today was convicted for first degree murder and sentenced to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing during the week of November 22 for the slaying of Jacob Schumacher and Raglan I. Nicoll in a Mount Vernon trolley holdup last summer.

The jury deliberated only an hour and a half in reaching its verdict.

Marion Mooney, Daley's sweetheart who testified in his defense at the trial, became hysterical when the death verdict was returned. "Oh Frankie," she shrieked, when the foreman of the jury pronounced the finding.

Daley, who, in giving his record, said he was first convicted when he was 15 years old, showed no sign of emotion when he heard the death sentence. His sweetheart's cries also failed to break his composure.

After Supreme Court Justice Tompkins had denied the customary motion to set aside the verdict, Daley's attorneys waived the two days' notice allowed before the imposition of sentence.

Daley gave his age as 21 years and said he had received a public school education. He probably will be taken to the deathhouse tomorrow.

David De Malo and John Marino, alleged accomplices of Daley in the trolley murders, are yet to be tried. The three robbers got loot of about $1,900 in the holdup after killing Schumacher and Nicoll. The money was hidden when their car broke down. The finding of the automobile led to their arrests.

FOREIGN RESIDENTS OF SHANTUNG TAKE REFUGE

TSINGTAO, China, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—With Chinese sailors threatening to bombard Tsingtao and with Chinese soldiers bringing up artillery to oppose this threat, American and British residents of this Shangtung port last night took refuge in their consulates mission compounds and other places far from the water front.

Today, with three Chinese warships on their way here from the northern port of Chinwantao, possibly to join the mutinous sailors, the outcome of the situation was awaited with great misgivings.

The situation became threatening when the crews of two Chinese gunboats anchored off the Tsingtao bund and threatened to bombard the city if their pay, in arrears for several months, were not forthcoming. Six regiments of Chinese infantry and artillery then were brought in, landed field guns from their trains and placed them in strategic positions, ready to return the gunboats' fire.

AFFIDAVITS FILED FOR MOTOR BUS OPERATORS

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—(A. P.)—Motor bus operators of Connecticut and Massachusetts today, through their attorney, Patrick Healey, of Waterbury, Conn., filed affidavits with Federal Judge A. Winslow protesting against any modification of the decree of 1914 which prohibited the New York, New Haven and Hartford railway from engaging in the operation of trolley cars in districts now served by motor busses.

The railroad in hearings recently concluded, sought modification of the decree. In the affidavits filed today, Mr. Healey, who is president of the Connecticut Motor Stage Association, Inc., asserted that the modification sought by the railroad would endanger a bus investment of $2,500,000.

According to Mr. Healy the motor busses contribute more than $125,000 a year to the state of Connecticut through the two cent per gallon gasoline tax alone, exceeding the taxes paid by any railroad, Healy said.

The opposition to modification was said to represent 90 per cent. of the independent motor bus operators in Connecticut.

Lowell of the local Elks' committee addressed the student body of Windham high school at a special meeting and outlined the project. Principal Egbert A. The collections at the high school will be made through representatives of the student council in the various rooms. Principal Case also called for volunteers to go about the grade schools in Windham, Mansfield, Columbia, Coventry and Chaplin and deliver the plea for Old Ironsides. He met with success from the first and shortly after he moved to a store in the Arnold Block, now occupied by the furniture firm of the Hurteau-Bosse Corp. Mr. Comtois also took up the undertaking business. Twelve years ago he sold his business to Ovila Blanchette and Wilfred St. Martin, who in turn disposed of it to the present corporation. Mr. Comtois then returned to Canada where he made his home. Surviving him is his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Skipton Comtois, two sons, Norman and Davis, a daughter, Miss Beatrice Comtois and four sisters.

Fitzpatrick of Raymond place, Norwich, was slightly damaged about 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, when it skidded on newly-spread road oil near the Fraser home on Windham road and turned over. The damage was unusually slight considering the nature of the accident. The driver was unhurt. The car was hauled to Leonard Bros. garage in this city and after brief repairs was run off under its own power.

WORK ON THE NEW HOTEL IS TO START NOVEMBER 1ST

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 16.—William P. Jordan, chairman of the building committee of the Willimantic Comemunity Hotel Corp., made an announcement Friday that work on the new building would be started on or about November 1. It is hoped to have the new structure completed by June 1st, next. Day & Zimmerman of New York city, have been awarded the contract, at $200,000. The campaign for funds for the new hotel was closed March 5th, last, with remarkable success. $225,160 was pledged by the citizens and the building committee was immediately named. The property occupied by the Johnson House and other buildings was purchased, the buildings torn down and the land prepared for a new building. The original bids on the building, however, were too high. None of them came within the estimate of the architects, nor within the funds available. Finally through the influence of the American Hotels Corporation which will operate the new hotel here, the New York firm named above was secured to consider the matter and after several conferences contracted for the work. It is their building policy to ask competitive bids from local contractors on the various branches of the work and in all cases they favor local bids. They also give the local contractors the benefit of their own influential purchasing power. The money thus saved reverts to the Hotel corporation.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Today (Saturday) is tag day in Danielson in the interest of the American legion $5,000,000 endowment fund. Leo J. L'Homme post is doing its utmost to raise the apportionment assigned to it. This is proving considerable of a task, for one reason and another.

However, one public-spirited citizen gave the drive a boost Friday by subscribing $100. "My boy went to France and came back in good health. That is worth more to me and his mother than ever can be expressed in terms of money," he said Friday, "and my only regret is that I cannot make my contribution $500 or any other larger sum." That is the spirit that prevailed toward the boys in wartime but seems stagnant now.

In another instance a woman who had no son in the war, or a relative, in fact, has pledged $60 to the fund being raised here. This is a purely altruistic gift—an appreciation, too, of the fact that the legion boys stand today for just what they stood during the war, the protection—the safeguards of the nation.

One who has subscribed to the fund submitted Friday the following statement for publication in connection with the tag day effort being made today:

Today is tag day for the American legion endowment fund. The quota for the towns of Killingly and Brooklyn is $2,600. Thus far only $1,200 has been raised. Most of this has been gotten by a few workers, several of whom are not members of the legion. Numerous inquiries have been made: "Why have I not been asked to give?" We know that several members of the local post are working hard, one member alone has raised over $250. With a membership last year of nearly 200, it would seem but a light task for each member to approach a few people.

Let today be your day. Let every member go to his commander or one of the committee chairmen and get a bunch of cards. Make it your duty to see that a call is made in every home in town. You did your duty in the world war and we were proud of you. You did not hesitate to go over the top. For your buddies and their dependents who have met with misfortune, again go over the top and let us still feel proud of you.

At Friday's session of the town court Judge W. Fenner Woodward heard eleven cases in which violations of the dog laws were charged. In ten of the cases owners of dogs were in court because the dogs they owned were found going about without the required tags. In these cases a fine of $1 and actual costs, a total of $4.84, in each case, was imposed. In the other case, where a dog was not registered, a fine of $1 and costs, a total of $10.94, was the penalty.

The presentation of the dog owners marked the fall round-up for Killingly. The past spring about 25 owners of dogs were before the court. A representative of the commissioner of domestic animals operating with Dog Warden Charles E. Ayer developed the cases.

Such a very small amount of water is coming over the dam across the Assawaga river, just above where a new concrete bridge is to be installed, that there is practically no interference from the flow for workmen who have been engaged the past week in putting in such supports for forms as will be required in building the new structure.

This support construction is now well advanced and will have been advanced within a short time to the point where, it is now indicated, actual placing of concrete can begin. The bridge will be completed, it is anticipated, some time during November.

Prosecutions on Friday for violations of the dog laws set dog owners of the town to looking to see that their dogs' tags were attached. It is a fact that a dog often loses a tag and the owner does not become aware of it. This is no defense in court, however. It is up to the dog owner to see that his dog is properly tagged. As an insurance against dogs losing their tags, some owners rivet the little pieces of metal to the dog's collar.

Members of District No. 8, of which Killingly is a part, made a splendid showing in the Union St. John Baptist parade at Holyoke this week, the parade held incident to the general convention of the organization, which has membership in many states and is especially strong in New England. A band, uniformed guards and a cast were features of the division in which District No. 8 was included.

People from this section who have been at Stafford attending the fair this week have been impressed with the possibility of developing Brooklyn fair into such an important exhibition as the one held at Stafford. Those people believe it could be done. Brooklyn is properly located to get the attendance, has all the possibilities of development that make the Stafford fair such an attraction and the reputation, dating back more than three-quarters of a century, that would assure it great growth and surprising patronage. Probably this development will come with the future. It would be a great satisfaction to many if it did, and without doubt of very great value to Windham county and its agricultural interests.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich, will come to Danielson Tuesday to hold his monthly chest clinic at the health station in the town hall building.

Mrs. Hiram W. Burton and Miss Dorothy Burton have been visitors in Boston.

Mrs. Adelbert Perkins was reported Friday as seriously ill at her home on Mechanic street.

CONGREGATIONAL PARSONAGE TO BE SOLD TO THE MASONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 16. — It was stated Friday that, with the exception of the actual passing of the necessary papers an agreement had been reached for the sale by the Westfield Congregational church of the parsonage and grounds on Broad street, at Davispark. The purchasers are the Masonic bodies of Danielson. Negotiations for the transfer of the property have been under way for some time. The church has approved the sale.

The decision of the church to sell is largely due to the fact that the parsonce is a larger structure than is required, and, incidentally, has entailed a larger upkeep cost than would a smaller parsonage.

For the Masonic bodies it presents an opportunity for the development of a very fine Masonic home, housing Morian lodge, Warren chapter and Montgomery council. It is understood that the Masonic bodies will erect a large addition to the present structure, this addition to include a hall or armory on the lower floor and a lodge room in the second floor.

The parsonage will readily lend itself to such alterations as will be necessary to provide Masonic bodies with parlors, offices, banquet room, kitchen and various other features that it is intended to incorporate.

It was stated Friday that the church has not yet decided on a new parsonage. Several houses, however, have been proffered to the church, so that a new parsonage will be readily available once a decision is reached as to what is to be done.

OVER $100,000 INSURANCE WRITTEN WITHIN A WEEK

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Oct. 16.—The newly available non-medical examination life insurance policies now being offered in this field have started a boom for the life insurance agencies. The representatives of one of the great companies dealing in life insurance said Friday that 70 applications for life insurance have been obtained in this territory within a week, the amount written being in excess of $100,000. It is a fact that may be accounted for in many ways that there are people who could pass a physical examination for life insurance if they would submit to one will not do so, hence go without insurance. Yet many of these people take out such insurance when there is no physical examination involved in so doing.

PUTNAM

A public meeting, which every member of the Chamber of Commerce has been invited to attend, is to be held Monday evening next, at Elks' hall. There will be an unusually attractive program with music and lunch.

There will be three speakers, two of them from Boston and both well known as delightful and exceptionally fine speakers. The object of their addresses will be to entertain and if a few words of instruction does creep it will be done in an interesting manner.

Charles Gilman of Boston is a district insurance representative of one of the big insurance companies, whose ability as a popular speaker has brought him invitations and renown from all parts of the country. He is a cousin of Alex Gilman and comes to Putnam through the influence of the latter. James Higgins is one of the executive officers of the Ide Collar Company at Boston, a successful business man whose talks are essentially worth while and enjoyable.

To make a good program better, Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Second Congregational church, whose personality has won him many warm friends during his short stay in Putnam, will speak also.

The Putnam Hi-Y met at the Congregational chapel and elected the following officers for the year: President, W. Perry Barber; vice president, George H. Gilpatric; secretary, Frank Cushman; treasurer, William Aldrich. The two delegates elected to go to the Older Boys' conference at Hartford October 23-25 are Henry Bugbee and William Aldrich each present told "How I Spent My Vacation."

In honor of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Willis were given a surprise party, Thursday evening, at their home on Woodstock avenue. Cards were played. Mrs. Lester Johnson and Harold Morrarty won the first prizes. The consolation awards went to Mrs. Emil Benoit and Arthur Tourtellotte.

Mrs. Abbie Elizabeth Maynard, wife of Henry Maynard of Woodstock avenue, Putnam, died at St. Vincent's hospital, Worcester, Wednesday night. She had been in failing health for some time and was taken to the hospital ten days prior to her death where an operation was performed in the hope that this might cure or check the disease, from which she was suffering. Mrs. Maynard was born in Thompson in 1860, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Perrin. She married Mr. Maynard in 1886 and he and six children survive. She also leaves three brothers and a sister.

Right Reverend Frederick Burgess, Episcopal Bishop of Long Island, who died Thursday night, was a former rector of Christ church, Pomfret.

Cargill council, Knights of Columbus, gave the annual Ladies' Night Thursday. The attendance numbered nearly 200 and the affair was very enjoyable. There was a concert by the Rainbow Orchestra of Providence which also furnished music for the dance. Supper was served and several acts of vaudeville added to the entertainment. The committee in charge was Willis D. Carroll, James Rice, P. Edgar Lucier, Ulric Baker and James J. Charron.

The 43rd Division basket ball team has been organized and are now ready to meet all comers. The manager, Arthur Davison would like to book some games in this vicinity.

John O. Fox who has been at St. Vincent's hospital, in Worcester, for a week has returned to his home. It was not necessary to perform an operation, as was at first thought might be the case.

Rev. and Mrs. Frederick B. Richards of Boston who were in Putnam Thursday, to attend the installation of Rev. James F. English as pastor of the Second Congregational church, while in Putnam were guests of Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Pease at their home on Fremont streets. Mr. English was supply pastor at this church for a year before Mr. English took charge.

Geraldine Mosher of Tatem street, celebrated her fifth birthday with a party to a few little friends. She received many gifts and entertained her friends with games and refreshments.

One of the social event- of the season will be a card party to be given by the local chapter of the D. A. R.

Mrs. Arthur Renshaw has returned from a visit to Worcester.

FRANK J. MINER, 89, WAS IN FAMOUS N. Y."RED ZOUAVES"

PUTNAM, Oct. 16—Pomfret like Putnam has the last survivor of one of the famous organizations of the Civil War. Here in Putnam, Thomas Taylor, colored, was a powder monkey on the Monitor which defeated the Merrimac in the most famous bottle of that struggle. At Pomfret, Frank J. Miner is the last survivor of New York's world known 62nd Regiment the famous Red Zouaves or Red Devils as they were called by their comrades and the Confederates.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Miner of Pomfret are living far beyond the allotted time for humans at the home of their son, Walter, at his associate home in the town of Pomfret. Their declining years cannot really be described as quiet, for Mr. and Mrs. Walter Miner have nine children, all are at home and the house is small. Mr. Miner is eighty nine and his wife is ninety-one. She has been the mother of eight children, of whom only two are living. Mr. and Mrs. Miner have fourteen living grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Frank J. Miner was born at 80 Pitt street, New York City, February 2, 1836. His parents were both born in Holland. He volunteered service in the the very beginning of the Civil War, and enlisted May 3, 1864 with the 62nd New York Volunteer. He reenlisted in 1864, and was honorably discharged after four years and four months of continuous service. Mr. Miner realizes that his memory is at fault regarding details, dates and places. For example, he states that he was one of the best runners in his outfit, and on one occasion he was leading a retreat seven miles from the battle field, when Sheridan and a few members of his staff came galloping from the opposite direction. He states that he heard no profanity, but that he remembers the words of the general as he stopped them. "Boys, we're not going this way, we're going the other way!" He is uncertain just where this event occurred, but thinks it was at Gettysburg.

One thing is certain, however. He was at Gettysburg. He was also at Malvern Hill, Chantilly, Fredericksburg, Fair Oaks, Chancellorsville and in ten other engagements, all fought during his first enlistment, and fully certified over the signatures of his commanding officers. He shows scars on chest and forearm of wounds received at Petersburg, Va., but he remained on the field long enough to locate in a tree the sharpshooter who hit him, and had the satisfaction of seeing him fall from his high perch a few moments later, and it was Mr. Miner's best friend who dislodged him.

Two days without food at Fredericksburg and the repeated charges up the heights, stationed on the ridge at Gettysburg, while Pickett's men charged across the field and up the hill to their very bayonets. These two events stand out most prominently in his memory. He states that in all he participated in twenty-five engagements. He missed two while in the hospital at Petersburg, where he was recovering from wounds.

Following his discharge, Mr. Miner worked for years as a derrick man in New York City for $2.75 per day, and was employed in the erection of many brown stone front houses. On one occasion a fellow workman let go of a rope and Mr. Miner fell from the seventh story to the street, but he caught a rope as he fell and was back on the job the next day.

His strenuous days are over now, and for the last ten years he has been living on his pension. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miner are bent by the years but their vision and hearing are but slightly impaired and neither shows any disposition to shirk work.

"Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the only thing that relieved me of constipation"

Constipation is dreaded, not only for its insidious self, but for the serious diseases which may be traced to it. Mr. Palludon tells us the helpful story of his relief:

Doing hard work while constipated brought on piles, from which I suffered for two years. I tried almost every remedy without success. Finally I tried Kellogg's ALL-BRAN and it has made me fit again. It is the only thing that helped me and I want everybody to know about it.

(Signed) JOHN PALLUDEN,
Clementon, N. Y.

You can get sure, prompt, permanent relief from constipation. Simply eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly. Two tablespoonfuls daily, or in chronic cases, with every meal. Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN. It is nature's own way of cleaning the intestine. It is a bulk food which sweeps the system of constipation's poisons and stimulates normal, healthy action.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to be permanently effective, if eaten regularly, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Eat it with milk, cream, fruits, or try the recipes printed on the package. Made in Battle Creek, Michigan. Served in leading hotels and restaurants. Your grocer sells it.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

IF YOU SPEND ALL YOU EARN

You are making no progress. You are actually going backwards, as each day brings you nearer the time when your earning power will be less.

HUNTING AND THE RESTICTIONS

These are the days when many are going into the woods and fields to hunt. It is well to remember before reaching the hunting grounds that it is necessary for those who hunt to take out a license, that hunting is not permitted on a fishing or a dog license and that even with a hunting license in one's possession the privilege is not possessed of trespassing upon posted property.

The complaint may well be made that there isn't much of any place to hunt these days except upon the highways, and yet it is to be realized that there are too many instances where the conduct of the hunters themselves has been responsible for that situation. Owners of property have a right to exclude others whether they are hunting, fishing or just trespassing, but in many cases farmers have been driven to such action because they have suffered losses until they undertook this method of protection.

When those who go into the woods or the fields drop the bars and leave them down, open gates and fail to shut them and cattle get out and wander away it cannot be expected to make the farmer feel happy. When the dropping of lighted matches, the starting of fires or the discarding of rubbish of any character cause the destruction of valuable woodland and bits trees which stand as an investment, it is not what most people would regard as a grateful expression for privileges extended.

Farmers have thus been driven to prohibit hunting, fishing, trespassing on their property, quite the same as anyone would exclude those who proceeded to make a disturbance in their homes. It is well to realize the part played by the hunters themselves in causing about the complained of restrictions.

There is always the Golden Rule to be kept in mind, but it is also well to remember that there are rights of others and established laws which must be respected. A proper regard for such things would have prevented many of the restrictions that prevail, and it would be borne in mind that obedience to them now means less trouble ahead.

MACNIDER'S SELECTION

When President Coolidge picked the former assistant secretary of the navy he went to the middle west. He has done the same thing in the choice of the new assistant for that department, taking a young man and one who has had experience in actual warfare. Hanford MacNider is named to that office with the approval of his immediate superior Secretary Davis, who has nothing but good words for him, and who is aware of his ability and the fact that they are to be thrown together in the administration of a most important department of the government.

MacNider is from Iowa, where some years ago he became identified with the state militia and was ready to go out as first lieutenant when there was a call for such troops for the Mexican border. It was following that service that he went to France, where he served with distinction, being wounded at St. Mihiel and holds several war decorations. His advance in the infantry branch of the service was rapid and it was as lieutenant colonel that he returned from France.

He was instrumental in organizing the American Legion and was honored by being elected its commander, and so highly were his qualifications regarded that he was even recommended for the post of secretary of the war department.

His appointment comes after a careful consideration of his qualifications and a canvas of the possibilities for that post. His record indicates that he can be relied upon to give that cooperation which is expected from one in that office, that he will give due consideration to the policies of the administration and that he will prove to be the man for the place quite the same as Secretary Davis did before and after he was vested with much greater responsibilities that had been expected when he was named. There is no telling when an assistant will be called upon to shoulder the duties of his chief. The new appointee has been chosen with the belief that any such a contingency has been carefully safeguarded.

PEACE IN EUROPE

An important forward step was taken some months ago when Germany adopted the Dawes plan of meeting its obligations, changing its currency and getting down to the resumption of industrial activity. It was a plan that was offered following a close study of the German situation by experts. It is working well to date and gives much promise for the future.

Another move that gives promise of good results is that which has been made in behalf of the security pact, by which the boundary between Germany and France is established, the old quest for possession of Alsace-Lorraine being given up and Great Britain, Belgium and Italy giving support to it. This gives France assurance of security and something to depend upon in the way of support if trouble should develop contrary to the terms of the agreement.

This marks a decided change for western Europe. It is a move for future peace that holds our great possibilities. It is setting an example which may well be employed in safeguarding other countries and for that reason it is going to be watched with special interest to see how it is respected.

In the adjustment of disputes in Europe there has been the disposition to rush into war. It has been practiced for so long that it has been almost impossible to get away from it. War is the first thing thought of when a dispute arises, regardless of the bloodshed, the expense involved or the havoc wrought. If there can be a substitute provided, if reason and adjustment of differences through arbitration or on the basis of facts can be resorted to the joy of living is going to be increased and civilization will take a big bound forward.

It is a move in the right direction that has been made at the conference at Locarno and it is to be sincerely hoped that it will prove to be all that has been expected of it. This seems to be at least one of the fruits of the recent war, frightful though the price paid for it.

SAMUEL M. RALSTON

Had he been willing to take it Samuel M. Ralston might have been the nominee of the democratic national convention for the presidency in 1924. He was sought as the compromise candidate when the New York convention developed such animosities, but there were no attractions for him in such an honor and he did not desire to shoulder the responsibilities of making the fight that would have been required following the nomination. His selection would have been a highly creditable one for his party, nevertheless.

Senator Ralston was a democrat of the old school, a man of the type and appearance of Grover Cleveland. He was a sound citizen and a staunch democrat, whose abilities were recognized in his choice as governor and United States senator, both of which elections being cases of the office seeking the man. They were expressive of the esteem in which he was held by the people of Indiana and indicate the loss which is felt in that state at his passing. He has always been a loyal and efficient public servant whose merits were recognized beyond party lines.

The death of the senator from Indiana brings another change in the United States senate. Elected until 1929, it will be necessary for the vacancy to be filled by appointment to be followed by a special election to fill the unexpired term, and this opens up possibilities of strengthening republican control in the upper house of congress. Whether that develops will depend upon the manner in which the factions operate. There is a magnificent chance for cooperation, but politics always has its uncertainties.

STRENGTH AND RESISTANCE

What is said to have been the results of an automobile accident several years ago caused the death this week of Eugene Sandow, regarded as the world's strongest man. His end came not as an old man since he had only reached his 55th milestone but while he was still in the prime of life.

In this connection it is impossible to overlook the death of Sigmund Breitbart, also this week, whose career was ended at the age of 42 as the result of a scratch from a rusty nail.

Here were two men who had entertained thousands of people by their feats of strength. Bending bars of iron twisting horseshoes and lifting great weights were daily stunts with them. They had brought themselves to the pink of perfection in their particular lines and caused the world to marvel at what they could do.

From such physical accomplishments it is natural to look upon them as supermen, and they were in a limited way, but when it came to combatting conditions the same as others they were not as successful as many have been. They were of course human like the rest and like many highly trained athletes their careers were unexpectedly short. Thus it does not hold that being strong men insures longevity. There are those who have gone beyond the century mark who have made no such claims. The very fact that they seemed to be in condition to resist anything that bothers ordinary mortals did not prove true when they were put to the test. They had an overabundance of strength but others exceeded them in resistance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: It doesn't take much to cause some people to shout, "Hot enough for you?"

The bathing suits have now been put away in moth balls until next June.

The fact that Sandow was the strongest man in the world mattered little when death called. Many a weakling has lived longer.

"Lewis Predicts a Fuel Famine." Of course he would like to see one so he could brag about his power while watching the public suffer.

How the final game of the series should have been played will be the subject for the winter's discussion among the facts.

It is to be expected that the debt funding experiences of France will not be overlooked by the Italian commission which is ready to sail for this country to wrestle with its problem.

When the appeal goes to Washington to relieve the threatened coal shortage there through federal control of the fuel supply, there seems to be overlooked the quicker means of relief through the use of substitutes.

Every time you read of a fire started by discarded smoking material, frisking up a fire with kerosene or throwing a lighted match into rubbish do you recall that the lessons of Fire Prevention week have been grossly disregarded?

THE MAN WHO TALKS

One of the most serious questions that confronts the people of this country at present is not how much France can pay or ought to pay yearly to square up her indebtedness to us, but the rapid spread of banditry from one end of the nation to the other. One reason why this species of crime can be perpetrated and gotten away with is the liberal use of firearms. Without firearms the robber would have little chance of success. Now peaceable citizens do not carry firearms, simply because there is a law against it. Is there no way in which it is impossible or may be made impossible for desperadoes to get them? If they must be made, why not have the sale controlled by government? How would it work to give a tough jail sentence to those who carry dangerous weapons without a permit? If the people of America would speak out in the matter, it would be stopped.

Jack Frost seems to be a mild, quiet fellow. But my! What havoc he makes with those white, beautiful, glistening spangles! You never hear the old fellow coming, because it is not a part of his policy to employ a trumpeter as an advance agent. He never gives a tip to a sorority or a barber's shop. His name does not appear among the society items. He does not come on the breezy night, nor when the sky is thickly overcast with clouds. He is not in earthquake, whirlwind or fire. He does not even possess the "still small voice." Jack Frost is the quietest old assassin that ever went about killing things. But how perfectly he accomplishes his purposes in his own way. Neither hurricane, flood nor thunder bolt could do a cleaner job. Doesn't this teach us that the silent forces of God are the most potent. The shallow brook makes a noise but not the planets in revolution.

I would not be too hard on Jack Frost, for the old executioner has some very good faults. If the old fellow smites the dahlia, and the geranium, thank God he also pays his respects to pestilential diseases. If he is the means of sending the birds from us for a while which we love, he also sends injurious insects which we detest to their long home. If he gives us pain by nipping our beautiful ears, he also gives us pleasure by putting vitality into jaded muscles and impoverished blood. But just now he offers a fine apology for making blossoms dingy by making foliage gorgeous. We must pronounce him a very versatile chap if measured by the great variety of hues he gives to meadow and mountain side at this season of the year. When we look at the flaming maple and yellow birch we will postpone Jack Frost's death sentence.

Through the daily press we have recently learned that soon workmen will be sent to develop the new reservoir to increase our much-needed water supply; that a pipe line nine miles long will be laid from the town of Colchester to the city of Norwich. That means, of course, that a rich natural deposit in Colchester will be made available to the people of this city. Now this suggests to my mind other pipe lines that connect our city with the important things of life. When the boys and girls leave our homes for Yale, Harvard, Columbia, Amherst, Wellesley and Smith, they do not sever their home connections. There is a pipe line, so to speak, that connects college with home. From the college end of this pipe line there is constantly flowing to the home the life of the college, and the home is made to feel the atmosphere that is becoming the home and sinew of their children's life. And from the home there is constantly being sent back through this pipe line the home influence as manifested in love, tenderness and prayer.

There is another reflection that is suggested to my mind by this new pipe line. It will conserve for needed purposes what is now apparently wasted. According to the law of the conservation of energy, while forces may change the channels of their operation, they are not wasted. But from the practical viewpoint the water that is to supply this reservoir makes its way to a larger stream without having much industrial value. It is transferring a latent into an active force, better still it is transforming poverty into riches. Such constructive work marks the difference between pioneer and civilized life. These things "make the wilderness to bud and blossom as the rose."

In an address recently given in New London, one who was engaged in missionary work in Arizona and New Mexico gave some very interesting facts concerning the natural resources of these two expansive states. Some people get the idea that this section of our country with its high table lands and dry air is a good place for consumptives to spend their last days—and it is compared with the harsh climate of New England. We may not be so well acquainted with the fact that great conservation is being made of important natural resources. Nowhere in the United States is scientific forestry carried out on a larger scale. Intelligence has taken the place of recklessness in the treatment of timber. One million acres of the finest quality of pine are now under careful cultivation. Foresters each year mark the trees that can be cut and all others must remain untouched. Along this line the age of criminal wastage is past and that of conservation has come. With such care the nation will never want for timber.

There is always something interesting in the migration of birds, and one who follows closely their habits in this direction can hardly escape the question, "who told the birds" This thought is suggested by the report recently given by the state ornithologist that birds in unusual numbers and unusually early are taking their autumnal passage into the southlands. While it is true that they sometimes make a mistake and go too early and then come back, and in the spring reverse the process come north too soon and then return, still these errors of intuition are slight, and generally they know about when to make these migrations. Is there not here a lesson for us? If we are made in the image of God; if God is our Father; if we are better than sheep and sparrows, then we ought to have a larger faith in his keepership.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Mme. Melba, who has announced her intention to retire from the operatic and concert stage, has changed people all over the world with her singing, her fame being comparable only to that of the great Patti. Born in Melbourne sixty years ago, Nellie Mitchell (afterward Mrs. Charles Armstrong) attracted attention when quite young by her beautiful voice. She went to Paris with her father to study under Mme. Marchesi, the teacher of so many world-famous prima donnas, and took the stage name of Melba in compliment to the city of her birth. Her first operatic appearance was at Brussels. In 1888 she made her London debut and at once won the favor of the most critical audience in the world. Similar triumphs followed in Paris, Berlin, St. Petersburg and finally in New York. During the war Mme. Melba was actively engaged in work which was recognized by King George in the bestowal upon the singer of the Order of the British Empire.

THE SOUTH'S ADVANTAGES FOR COTTON BUSINESS.

When I was travelling in New England last winter trying to find out what New England cotton mill men think of the southward trek of their industry, I was told without exception that the three chief factors responsible for this southward movement are lower wages, longer working hours, and lower taxes in the south, writes Richard Woods Edmonds in the Boston News Bureau. There was no difference of opinion that lower wages was the greatest factor of them all, while longer-working hours came second. When it is realized that the final cost of the finished goods in New England is something more than 25 per cent kages, it is evident that if the mills could cut their wages 25 per cent and at the same time add seven hours per week to the working time of their machines, they would be enabled to meet a competition that has been proving ruinous to many of them.

Eighty-five per cent of the southern spindles are in four states—Alabama, Georgia, North and South Carolina. The average wage paid for the year 1923 to workers in the cotton mills of those states, according to figures given me by the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers and compiled from United States department of commerce reports, was only $644. The same table shows that the average year's wage paid to cotton mill workers during the same year in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the two chief cotton mill states of New England, was $1025. The southern yearly wage was therefore about 37 per cent below that of the New England wage. In some of the minor southern textile states, the year's wage was even lower, that for Mississippi, with 178,508 spindles, being the lowest, $533.

The question as to why southern mills are able to keep their help working for much lower wages, and on longer hours, is not simply answered. There are at least five important factors concerned.

The Contrast in Wages

First, the wage is not the chief factor concerned in keeping southern mill help satisfied, as I will show presently. But these people are little inclined to draw contrasts between their wages and New England wages. To them, New England is almost like a foreign country. The contrast that is ever present with them is between their earnings and their general lot in the mills, as against their circumstances on the farm whence they came and whither they must go if they leave the mills. There is in the south now a large class of people who have been born and reared in mill villages and know nothing else; but they are being constantly recruited from the farms, while some of their numbers go back to the farms every year and try it over again with the little savings they have accumulated.

Most of these recruits are the failures among the tenant farmer class, a desperately poor, abysmally-ignorant, people. The mill is the only place where they can find employment. It takes them all in, men, women and children over 14, or, in the case of some mills, children over 16. The individual wage is small, but a father and mother with six children, can earn from $250 to $300 per month, and live in a better house than ever before, with water and electric lights covered by the rental of $5 or $6 per month, all repairs taken care of promptly by the mill, and with coal and firewood delivered at their doors at wholesale rates.

They cannot afford to own homes; taxes and upkeep would amount to more than their rent. If they get sick and have money in the bank, they have to spend it, but, if they have already spent their money for pleasures, they are cared for by the mill, so, from their point of view, they might as well spend it as they get it. Again, they are unaccustomed to handling much money, and their wages offer opportunities for luxuries long desired in vain. The large number of garages provided by many of the mills for cars owned by their employes, indicates the direction in which much of their money goes. One mill president told me of a couple in his mill, both weavers, who had recently paid $4,200 cash for a new Lincoln. "I'm not proud of it," he said, "and I don't like to have them identified with my mill, but that's the way it goes." Why should they strike for more?

Costs Less to Live In the South

Moreover, the living cost in the southern mill country is considerably lower than it is in New England. In the south a large majority of all mill help—possibly 75 per cent or 80 per cent—lives in villages owned by the mills. Rent will average close to 25 cents per room per week, and this generally covers electricity and water. Coal, a smaller item in the southern than in the New England budget, is sold to most mill help at cost to the mill, or about $3.50 a ton, in large mills near the mines, and possibly twice that in the smallest ones far from mines. Winter clothes are cheaper in southern mills, and in most of the villages the people save on grocery bills by growing vegetables. A few years ago the American Cotton Manufacturers' association made a comprehensive study of southern mill villages and the equivalent of $4.36 to the weekly wage of each worker. Where there are three or four workers in a family, as is often the case, this mounts up. It is certain that the real income of the southern worker is very much nearer that of the New England worker than is indicated by a comparison of cash wages for an hour's work or a year's work.

A third important factor is what a mill man calls "good runnin' work." Thoughout the south men locally famous for their understanding of the mill help's point of view, and for their success in keeping their people satisfied and their labor turnover small, told me the three chief factors in keeping help satisfied in the order of their importance, are "good runnin' work," good living conditions, and, third in importance, wages; for it seems that the farming class that has made up the mill population has not yet adopted the modern commercial point of view as to the supreme importance of cast value. They want, above all else, satisfaction in their work; next, satisfactory home conditions.

Southern Mills More Modern

When I was in New England last winter, mill architects, textile machinery manufacturers and the editor of an authoritative textile journal all told me that the mills of the south as a whole are more modern in construction and much more modern in equipment, and in the matter of maintenance, much better managed.

This may seem a digression from a discussion of labor conditions, but it has a vital bearing on the spirit and the satisfaction of the men and women who operate the machinery. In a mill that is up to date, with the best of machinery properly maintained, the help has what it calls "good runnin' work." In other words, the work flows smoothly along, with a minimum of vexatious delays over faulty machinery, breakdowns, delays between departments, etc.

The American Idea

A fourth factor, and one that I am inclined to attach considerable weight to, though I found a difference of opinion on this score, is the prevalence among the mill help, and the diligent cultivation thereof by the executives, of what I call the American idea of getting ahead, instead of the European idea which the mills of New England unavoidably imported along with their foreign workers. Drifted into the minds of the lower classes of Europe, and imparted by them to their growing children, is a deep conviction of the insurmountability of the barrier that separates them from the upper classes. The European class idea is a heavy handicap to individual progress.

The southern mill help is almost wholly native American; almost 100 per cent American born, of American parents. They come originally almost from the farms, and whether they be tenant farmers, as most of them were, or owners, as a good many of those in North Carolina were, they have the American idea of progress by individual effort. Ambition is rare, and the will to rise is rare. But where it exists, the natural thought seems to be to rise by individual effort rather than by organization and class effort.

Industrial Development and Labor Demand

The fifth factor is one of the strongest in the situation. It may be the strongest. It is the great difference in the relative density of industrial development of the two sections. In Massachusetts and Rhode Island the capital investment in industrial plants is $371,480 for every square mile of area, and the number of their wage earners per square mile is 90. In the four principal cotton textile states of the south, Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas, the capital investment in industry is $10,000 per square mile, and the number of wage earners is 2.4. In other words, in terms of dollars invested and wage earners employed per square mile of area, the industrial development of Massachusetts and Rhode Island is 35 times as great as it is in the chief cotton mill states of the south. While the other New England states are not so highly developed as these two, neither are the other southern states so highly developed as the four mentioned.

In the south there are no other great industries bidding for the mill help, and if the people leave the mills they have nowhere else to go. When the mill help of New England go on strike they simply walk around the corner or get on a trolley and ride a mile or two, and get jobs in other industries.

Sunday Morning Talk

TELL JESUS

"They went and told Jesus." Our first effect of consciousness every morning should be to tell Jesus definitely something about the day. Even before we interest ourselves in what is the first business of the day, a deliberate approach to God, a solemn and sweet interview with our Lord in prayer.

Before that, and even as we awake, ere our thoughts wander to this and that difficulty which may lie before us, let our thoughts turn to Him, and let us tell Him all.

Whatever be our lot and station in life, there are difficulties, temptations, and trials to encounter. Let us tell not ourselves, but the Lord, all these, all we look forward to, that interview, that business, these anxieties, these burdens of the day, these things which try our temper, and in which we cannot possibly do right unless by the special presence of the Saviour's power.

In all such things, and about all such things, let us "turn to Jesus—tell Him all!" Tell Him in His loving presence, tell them to our infinitely sympathetic Friend, to act on the information as He will.

He knows them all, but loves to have us bring them to Him thus may we begin the day with God and look for His keeping power and feel that His great love is ever around about us, keeping us as in "the hollow of His hand."

Irish Bank Deposits Decrease

A feature of all the Irish bank reports for the half year recently ended is a considerable fall in deposits and an increase in advance to customers. Net profits are maintained as well as the usual high dividend. The National bank pays a dividend of 14 per cent, the Munster and Leinster bank pays 18 per cent free of income tax and the Provincial bank 14 1-2 per cent.

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

From Small Beginnings

Richard Mansfield, The Great Actor

A 17-year-old boy, with just enough money to admit him to the United States, went about Boston looking for a job. Finally he found work with a merchant and settled down to long hours at labor that he disliked. Richard Mansfield had no wish to enter business. He had shown great skill in drawing and painting, had studied art and wished to become a painter But he needed money and so he had to work as a clerk.

In his spare time he got out his pencil and brushes and made pictures. He was resolved not to remain a clerk. Night after night he drew and painted and accumulated a number of pictures of which he felt proud. When he tried to sell his pictures he found an unappreciative world. No one would buy. He had saved up some money and so he took his work over to England, where his father's home had been, hoping to find buyers there—but all to no use. Utterly discouraged, he remembered what success he had as a boy at school when he had played the part of Shylock in The Merchant of Venice. Perhaps he would be a better actor than he was a painter. He found an opening in a little traveling company and went all about England, at first singing in comic opera.

As yet he had not found his real work in life, for he was destined to become one of the greatest of actors. He studied his parts more and more carefully and tried to live the lives of the characters. He played serious parts in both comedy and tragedy. Then little by little people began to realize his real ability. He played Shylock so that he aroused deep emotions. His Richard III was a villain indeed, but a man as well. His Henry V was a great hero. He gave life to Cyrano de Bergerac, Mons. Beaucaire and Beau Brummel. His Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde was a masterpiece of acting. The public acclaimed him as one of the greatest of all actors. Through constant effort and the refusal to be downed he had achieved lasting success in a great field of art. He made himself a permanent figure in the history of the English-speaking stage.

Stories That Recall Others

Good Meals Scarce.

"My husband hasn't any of the faults men usually have; he stays at home every single night because he doesn't belong to any lodge or clubs," said one.

"Doesn't he even smoke?" inquired the other.

"Very seldom," replied the first. "Only after he's had a good meal he smokes a cigar. But I don't believe he ever smokes more than two cigars a month."

Dignity Lacking

Two deaf and dumb boys are great friends and consider themselves fortunate that they live near each other. They give the neighbors the least trouble of all the youngsters.

One evening the boys found two packages of firecrackers—left overs from the Fourth and started out to have some belated fun. They had little idea of the noise of the crackers made and didn't realize that they would disturb the grouch next door. Sticking his head out of the window he demanded that they cease firing. Little realizing that his words fell on deaf ears he was the low comedian in a comedy fit for the movies.

In his rage he forgot everybody did not go to bed as early as he and that trousers were the usual dress when appearing, even in a neighbor's back yard. Down he stormed intent on quelling the disturbance, with pajamas flopping, grabbed the hose and in a minute had drowned out the boys' firecrackers and sent them scurrying for shelter. A gigle behind him made Mr. Grouch turn, quickly, drop the hose and march back to the house in front of a group of convulsed spectators with as much dignity as bare feet and pajamas would permit.

ISLAND OF BARKLESS DOGS FOUND IN MEDITERRANEAN

The Island Juan de Nova which lies east of Crete in the Mediterranean, is called the Island of Dogs by Ruby Denton in Our Dumb Animals. He says:

"There are no humans there, only dogs. They are of many degrees of mixture of breeds. But all of them have a remarkable peculiarity. The dogs of Juan da Nova have lost one of the most distinctive features of their race. They have forgotten how to bark. They are all dumb dogs. Some that have been caught kept their wild looks and habits until they died, had no liking for the company of fellow dogs and did not find a bark possible.

"Juan denova is an island of coral formation, horse-shoe in shape, about 21 miles long, and form a half to three-quarters around it abound with turtle, and two wells of fresh water are said to be on the island. In the eighteenth century and previous, before steam altered the routes of shipping, East Indiamen and other vessels occasionally stopped there for water and turtles. Dogs of different kinds were left by them from time to time, and, finding plenty of food in the turtle eggs, young turtle and sea fowls the animals have increased prodigiously. Today there are thousands of them.

"These dogs drink salt water freely. They keep together in packs and catch seabirds with as much crafty smartness as foxes catch hens. They dig up the turtle eggs, spotting the places in the sand with extraordinary cleverness, and often quarrel over their booty. The greater part of them droop their tails like wolves, but many carry them curled over their backs. They appear to have descended from spaniel, terrier, Newfoundland and hound and are all colors except pure white. Juan de Nova is the real island of dogs and nothing but dogs."

Storehouses Peter Didn't See

To work hard, play hard, is the way
To make the most of every day.
—Chatterer the Red Squirrel.

Peter Rabbit didn't wait for Chatterer to return. He knew now that Chatterer had just been making fun of him and teasing him. He knew that it would be quite useless to try to find any of those storehouses by watching Chatterer, so he wasted no more time there. As for Chatterer, he chuckled all the rest of the day whenever he thought of Peter Rabbit. "The idea of that little scamp thinking that any one will tell him where such a secret thing as a storehouse is! If he can find mine he is welcome. He certainly is," said Chatterer.

Could Peter have followed Chatterer all that day he would have been both interested and surprised. Chatterer the Red Squirrel is one of the smartest little people in the Green Forest. He is altogether too smart to put all his treasure in one hiding place. Like his little cousin, Striped Chipmunk, Chatterer has underground storehouses, and like his big cousin, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, he has storehouses in hollow trees and hollow logs. So he puts part of his winter supply in one place and part in another place, and has several storehouses. And then, as you already know, he stores mushrooms in the forks of branches of a tree. He doesn't put them away in hollows because they would not keep there. But left out in the open they dry, and they are a splendid change in winter when he is tired of nuts and seeds from the pine cones.

Happy Jack cares nothing about the cones from the evergreen trees, but these furnish Chatterer with a large part of his food. As I have already said, he is smart. He is smart to cut off those cones from the trees before they are ripe and open. He knows that if he waits until they are open the seeds will drop out and sail away. So he cuts the cones before they are quite ripe, and then at his leisure he can open them and take out the seeds. Sometimes he has a great pile of cones.

In his storehouses he puts away acorns, chestnuts, hickory nuts, beechnuts and even butternuts. When he can easily get corn you will find a plentiful supply in one of his storehouses. Like his big cousin, Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, he sometimes hides things under the leaves. But he does not do this as generally as Happy Jack. There is little danger that Chatterer will go hungry in the winter. Moreover, with several storehouses he is sure to come through nicely even though one of those storehouses may be destroyed. Long ago he learned not to put all his treasures in one place.

But though Chatterer has at all times an ample supply, he doesn't believe in drawing on that supply when he can find food elsewhere. So he hunts for his daily food much as other little people do. But, of course, he doesn't go hungry as others do when they cannot find enough. It is then that he draws on his storehouses.

Chatterer had one particular storehouse which would have surprised Peter Rabbit could he have peeked into it. This had been a splendid year for hickory nuts, and in that storehouse Chatterer had such a supply of nuts as Peter wouldn't have believed it possible for so small a person to have gathered. You know, Chatterer is one of those busy people who always has time for something else. You'll find it that way through life. The busiest people are always the people it is easiest to get to do something else. When Chatterer works, he works. When he plays, he plays. He doesn't put off till the next day the work which should be done today. The time to make hay is when the sun shines. The time to gather nuts is when they are ripe. All the Sufrel family know this. That is why you seldom if ever find their storehouses empty.

CONTINUING INVESTIGATION OF CAPT. ROSTAD'S DEATH

The death of Captain S. M. Rostad, Noank yacht master, whose body was found floating in Fishers Island Sound two weeks ago, is still the subject of investigation by Coroner J. J. Desmond of this city and County Detective William E. Lewis. The body of Rostad had been in the water nearly two weeks before it was found, but his absence was not reported to the authorities during that time nor were the circumstances under which he died known until County Detective Lewis took over the case and learned that Rostad drowned when he fell from a motor boat in which he, with Captain John Dix of Fishers Island, and William Corey and Joseph Main of Groton were enroute to New London from Noank.

With the series over, and with the world's pennant safely stowed away, numerous members of the Pirate crew have announced their plans for the off season. Some already have left the city, while others will depart from time to time during the next few days.

Hazen Cuyler, whose double in the eighth inning of the deciding game spelled victory for the Pirates, will go to Harrisville, Mich., for a two weeks' visit with relatives during which time he will hunt and fish. He then will journey to Flint, Mich., where he will be employed as a physical director in an industrial Y. M. C. A.

Max Carey, whose three doubles and single helped to tumble Walter Johnson, will remain here instead of returning to the Pacific coast. His business for the winter had not been selected but he is likely to work for a coal company.

Eddie Moore will remain here, too, working in the advertising department of a large department store. His home is in Louisiana. Eddie knocked in the first Pirate run on Thursday, starting the uphill fight to the title.

"Pie" Traynor, whose triple tied the score in the seventh inning, will do clerical work at Somerville, Mass.

The veteran moundsman, Babe Adams, the hero of the Pirate victory in 1909, will work on his farm in Bethany, Mo.

Carson Bigbee, who entered the big game in the eighth inning as a pinch hitter and tied the score, will go to Eugene, Oregon, to resume his real estate business and the selling of automobiles.

Victor Aldridge, who won two games of the series but failed to show form in the last contest, will winter in Indiana Springs, Ind., but has not decided whether or not to teach school again. "Vic" is known as the "Hoosier Schoolmaster."

Ray Kremer, who stopped the Senators' attack and allowed only one hit in four innings, will go to California, his home state, t owork as an oil and gas well driller.

Earl Smith, the catcher, will move back to Hot Springs, Ark., but has no particular occupation in mind.

Glen Wright, the youngster who has been a powerful cog in the Pittsburgh machine, will return to the home of his parents at Kansas City, Mo. He has nothing definite in mind concerning a job.

Stuffy McInnis, the old master whose two hits swelled the Pirate barrage and whose influence kept the infield steady, will go to Gloucester, Mass ready to begin work on any job that turns up.

Johnny Morrison, famous for his "jughandle curve," and one of the hurlers who took part in the last game of the series, returns to Owensboro, Ky., but has no job in sight.

Lee Meadows, with Lee, Jr., and Mrs. Meadows, will again spend the winter in Florida. Lee, a radio enthusiast, will put in his time tinkering with tubes, etc.

Mrs. Miles Was Miserable a Long Time—Owes Final Recovery to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Dover, Ohio.—"After my last baby was born I was up and around again, but I was sickly all the time and did not know how to get my work done. I had washed a heavy carpet and I think that was the cause of my troubles. I went to several doctors, but their medicines did not do me any good. I asked what the trouble was, for I could hardly walk and always had such pains in my left side and then in my right side. He told me I had inflammation that caused it. I had one of your text-books and was reading it, and I thought I would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After four days of taking it I began to feel better, so I took three bottles without missing a dose. That helped me more than any other medicine I had yet taken and I always have it handy now. It surely did put me on my feet again."—Mrs. JAMES MILES, 419 Cherry Street, Dover, Ohio.

ACADEMY BOWS IN DEFEAT BEFORE WESTERLY HIGH FOR SECOND TIME

The Academy football eleven bowed down in defeat for the second time this season before Westerly High school Friday afternoon at Westerly. The local boys fought hard and fast through out the entire game but were defeated by a smoother working machine. Westerly had the breaks all through the game and used them to good advantage, winning 11 to 0.

In the second half of the game the N. F. A. uncovered a forward pass attack that took their opponents entirely by surprise, the Academy gaining a total of over a hundred yards on these passes. Tombari and Marks did some spectacular playing. Marks catching some long passes that netted substantial gains.

The local team's best chances to score came in the second and third quarters when several times they had the ball inside Westerly's ten yard line.

Westerly's chief ground gainer was Meikle, with Salamano and Turco also making some substantial gains. Salamano got away for what looked like a sure touchdown in the last quarter and would have scored if one of his teammates had not tried to slug, for which Westerly was penalized twenty yards.

The following is the game by quarters:

First Quarter

Norwich kicked off to Westerly on Westerly's five yard line. On the first play Westerly failed to gain and on their second attempt made about four yards. Meikle went around left end for six yards and first down Westerly again sent Meikle around end. This time on the right side for about one yard. On the next two plays Westerly failed to gain and on their fourth down Meikle kicked to Courbois of the Academy, who was downed in his tracks. Williams made a nice gain through left guard for four yards. E. Brewer also went off left guard, this time only three yards being gained. Tombari, on the next play was held for no gain. The Academy was penalized five yards for being off-side. On their fourth down Academy kicked to Ray Meikle on Westerly's five yard line as the quarter ended. Score: Westerly-0, Norwich-0.

Second Quarter

Meikle went around right end for twelve yards before being downed by E. Brewer. Turco was held for no gain; Salamano gained a scant two yards off right guard. After three unsuccessful line thrusts Tombari threw a beautiful thirty-five yard forward to Marks as the quarter ended. Score—Westerly 11, Norwich 0.

Fourth Quarter

Tombari was thrown for a two yard loss on the first play. Tombari threw a pass to C. Brewer for eight yards. Courbois made first down on an end run. Vitliano lost on the next play and with the ball on Westerly's eight yard line Tombari threw a pass to E. Brewer who after seemingly having a touchdown, fumbled when tackled and Fiddes of Westerly fell on the ball. Meikle kicked on first down to Courbois in mid-field who ran it back twenty yards. Kramer substituted for Stefano. At this stage the Academy opened up a spectacular forward pass attack that had Westerly bewildered. Tombari threw one to C. Brewer for twelve yards. Another to Marks at the side of the field netted thirty-two yards. Tombari's next forward was intercepted, however. Westerly in four trys failed to make first down. Academy ball, first down. Tombari gained twelve at end, but lost six at tackle. On the next play, a forward, Tombari to Marks gained fifteen yards, but on the next three downs Norwich failed to gain and Tombari kicked to Meikle on Westerly's one yard line. Meikle kicked to Tombari who ran it back ten yards. Tombari then threw a long forward to Marks for twenty yards, while on the next play C. Brewer made two at guard. NUTMEGS VS. SPEEDBOYS AT SACHEM FIELD SUNDAY

Everything is in readiness for the big game Sunday at Sachem field, Falls, when the Norwich Nutmegs and the Jewett City Speedboys engage in what should be one of the best contests ever seen in this vicinity. The Speedboys were claimants of last year's Eastern Connecticut grid title and should furnish considerable opposition for the Nutmegs, who have made a very auspicious start this season, winning their first three games by decisive scores and having a season total of seventy-two points to their opponents' nothing.

As Sachem field is but three minutes' walk from the car line or about a fifteen minute pleasant walk from the center of the city, it being at the head of Sachem street in the Falls, there is no reason why local football fans should not attend as the playing field has been put in A-1 condition and new goal posts have been erected. It is hoped by the Nutmeg's management to put on some fast games and with proper patronage there is no reason that their wish should be gratified.

The Nutmeg team will be picked from the following:

Ends, Capt. F. McGrath, Kelly, ex-Hardig man, Harris, Chase, Jab Burnes, former Warrior player, and Couture; tackles, Hyatt of the Judeans, Paliochis, former N. F. A. man, E. Fidell, Dekoski, Steinman of the Academy, and Finnegan; guards, Hagberg an N. F. A. man, Grover, Bolrighine, Butts an ex-Hardig man and Adams; center will be divided between Sullivan and Sadinsky, another ex-Judean.

In the backfield will be seen MacLaren at quarter with Al Williams and Ludlow, two former Crescent players; C. McGrath and Connefry at halfbacks and Herberts or Dave Blinderman of the Judeans at fullback. A new man has been signed up for tackle who will probably appear in Sunday's game, namely Jones, formerly of the Tallahasee, Fla., High football team, where he starred at right tackle. The lineup for Jewett City had not been announced but it is certain that they will come down strong. Two Greeneville Tiger players have been signed by the Speedboys, namely Swanton, a halfback, and MacGowan, a lineman.

WINDHAM TO PLAY MIDDLETOWN HIGH TODAY

Today (Saturday) Windham High School eleven will meet the fast Middletown High outfit at Recreation Park in the afternoon. Coach Thomas A. Callaghan has brushed up his team and looks upon the coming encounter with confidence of victory for the Crimson and Blue. It is the first time this year that the local lads will be seen playing here. They have played three games this season, all resulting in ties and the fans are looking forward to something more than a tie in local favor this afternoon. When the whistle blows the lineup will be: Buck, center; Navin and Cohen, guards; Garrigus and Tomasco, tackles; Rood and Wojick, ends; Laviviere, Rychling, Sullivan and Captain Nichols, backfield. Tommy Meikle, Windham's ace ground-gainer, will remain on the resting line, unless the game becomes adverse to the locals, in which event he will be injected into the fray.

THREE REGULARS WILL BE OUT OF YALE LINEUP TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—On the eve of the football classic between Pennsylvania and Yale at the Bowl here tomorrow afternoon, indications were tonight that three regulars of the Yale backfield will be out of the game when the teams line up.

Dan Allen, fullback, and Ben Cutler, half half back, are still nursing injuries and today Bill Kline, the right halfback, appeared at the field leaning on a cane. In the absence of Allen, Wadsworth will start at fullback and Larry Noble will hold down the left halfback position. If Kline is unable to start Eddie Cottle will take his place. The Yale line was strengthened today by the return of Dick Wortham, regular guard.

Both the Penn and Yale teams had light workouts today, Penn using the American Legion field at Derby. More than 70,000 persons are expected to attend the game, probably setting a new early season record.

YOUNG COULON OF TAFTVILLE DEFENDS HIS TITLE TONIGHT

Tonight at Ansonia Young Coulon of Taftville, recently crowned flyweight king of Connecticut will defend his title against Pinkus Silverberg in the ten round main bout. Happy Rollison from whom Coulon rudely snatched the flyweight crown some weeks ago will be on the same card in another ten round bout.

Miss Fordyce vs. Miss Quier in Finals

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Miss Louise Fordyce, Youngstown, O., and Miss Edith Quier, Reading, Pa., will meet tomorrow in the final round of the golf tournament for the Berthellyn cup. Both won brilliant victories today in the semi-finals, Miss Quier defeating Mrs Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former national champion, 1 up in 19 holes and Miss Fordyce beating Miss Ronald H. AGGIE FRESHMEN UNABLE TO SCORE AGAINST TUFTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 16.—For the first time since 1922, when freshmen teams were first organized at Storrs, a Connecticut Aggie yearling eleven went down to defeat today. Tufts College freshmen pulled the trick when they turned the Aggie yearlings back with a 14-0 coupt in a game that was hard fought and closely contested throughout.

Tufts had the more powerful outfit, and after the first quarter outrushed the Aggies, though not until the third quarter, when they recovered a Connecticut fumble, were they able to push across a score. It was not until after the Connecticut fumble had been recovered in midfield shortly after the second half got under way that Tufts really showed to any great advantage over Coach Alexander's eleven.

At this point the jumbo offense gained steadily through the Connecticut line and off the tackles. Four successive first downs were made in the march that carried the ball deep into Connecticut territory, and then quarterback Ellis of Tufts took the ball on a reverse play that caught the Aggie end off guard, and raced fifteen yards for a touchdown. Fitzgerald kicked the goal for the extra point as the quarter closed.

Tufts scored again in the final quarter, when after an exchange of punts that gave his team in midfield, Ellis penetrated deep into Connecticut territory with a thirty-five yard run from punt formation. A couple of bucks through the Storrs line for a first down, and another end run by Ellis accounted for the second tally. Again Ellis kicked the goal.

Uncorking a forward passing attack as time was growing short, the Aggies made several substantial gains via this route that carried them well into Tufts territory. Allard, who was substituted at fullback made some pretty heavens to Hewitt and Brown. Tufts defense stiffened as the Aggies approached the goal line, and the ball was taken on downs.

For Connecticut, the defensive work of Brown was a feature, while Sabagian and Dixon made good gains through the line.

REGULARS WII BE MISSING FROM HARVARD TEAM TODAY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 16.—(AP)—On the eve of the Holy Coss game, the first severe test of the Harvard season, it was announced tonight that several regulars would probably be missing from the Crimson lineup. It was said to be doubtful whether Alfred Miller 205 pound halfback would get into the game, coaches believing him somewhat overtrained. Nathaniel Howe may start in his place.

Edward Nash, left tackle, is out for ten days with injuries and will be replaced by Charles Pratt. Leo Daly, right guard, revived an old knee injury in the Rensselaer game two weeks ago, and probably will be out of the lineup until the Dartmouth game. His substitute is Charles Bradford.

BUCKY HARRIS IS BEING SEVERELY CRITICIZED FOR HIS STRATEGY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Having tasted the nectar of victory, the Washington American league baseball team tonight is finding the green persimmon juice of defeat unusually bitter.

As the players who had been hailed twenty-four hours ago as world's champions, strolled about the town today there were no admiring throngs to cheer them; as a year ago. There were no hurrahs, and few pats on the backs; no oral showers from a hysterical populace; no triumphant processions.

Rather a few friends gave them sorrowful words of sympathy, while the rest of the national capital turned to other pursuits, the least of which were thoughts of baseball, the uncertainties of life on a throne, and the bumps encountered in a fall downstairs.

Whereas a year ago Bucky Harris was hailed as a king of master-minders, today found many putting him into the class of Johnson Anderson, the first man to steal second with the bases full. This was because he allowed Walter Johnson to stay in the box at Pittsburgh yesterday until the bitter end.

Roger Peckinpaugh, wearing the fresh garlands betokening the most valuable player in the American league, was running Harris a close second among the more disgruntled, because he set up a world's record for making world's series errors.

As is the way with all champions, when the Washington team fell it fell very hard. The baseball fan as an institution does not like losing was made clear in the post mortem discussions going about town oday.

Before meeting today to divide the loser's end of the world series booty, the players were handed stacks of mail, written in most part while the club was on the crest and figured an easy winner. These were mainly congratulatory, but Nick Altrock, the Washington coach-comedian, exhibited a telegram from a friend.

"I took your advice," the telegram read, "and bet $50 on Washington. Please lend me $50 on my 7-jewel watch."

Manager Harris was reported not only hurt, but downright peeved because President Ban Johnson of the American league took him to task for letting Johnson remain in the box.

Not all of the uncomplimentary remarks from the Washington public were directed at the loss of the series. There were thousands who, unable to get tickets except from scalpers at unreasonable prices, carried over from the baseball year unkind feeling for world's championship baseball games in general, and for the methods of distributing seat coupons in particular.

Most of the players were leaving town tonight carrying with them checks for $2,736, their share of the gate receipts. They took various trails, some leading to business offices, the haunts of big game and to the alti.

"Goose" Goslin, Earl McNeely and Oswald Bluege are suspected of matrimonial intentions. McNeely has gone to Sacramento, California, his home, and Bluego will spend a few days in Chicago before returning there. Goslin will spend the winter at his home in Salem, N. J.

Walter Johnson and Joe Judge may take a flier in Florida real estate, with a little exhibition baseball on the side. Roger Peckinpaugh may join them after a Canadian trip.

Muddy Ruel and Curly Ogden will stalk big game, the former in Canada and the latter in Nevada, while Fred Marberry and Tex Jeanes will carry their heavy guns over the Texas plains.

Hank Severeid will watch the snow fly in Story City, Iowa, and Alec Ferguson will winter at his home in Bloomfield, N. J.

Bucky Harris and Sam Rice, residents of Washington plan to stay here until baseball calls again, and Dutch Ruether, Win Ballou and Buddy Myer will go to their homes in San Francisco, the mountains of Kentucky and Ellisville, Miss., respectively.

Spencer Adams and Tom Zachary will go a little farming, the former near Layton, Utah, and the big pitcher at Graham, N. C., Everett Scott plans to go into business at Fort Wayne, Ind., and he may quit baseball if the venture is successful. Nemo Leibold plans a business trial in Detroit. Bob Veach also will go to Detroit.

Pensylvania homes will draw two members of the club, Stanley Coveleskie going to Shamokin and Joe Harris to Franklin.

Benny Tate is hurrying to West Frankfort, Ills., to see his baby son, and Allan Russell, another who may quit the diamond this year, will spend a few days at his Baltimore home before resuming business connections in Boston.

CONN. AGGIES TACKLE MASS. AGGIES IN GRIDIRON BATTLE TODAY AT STORRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Oct. 16—Two teams of the New England College Conference will meet here tomorrow, when the Connecticut Aggies and Massachusetts Aggies stage their annual clash on Gardner Dow Field. Both elevens have been pointing for this contract, which shapes up as one of the most attractive scheduled for tomorrow among New Englands smaller colleges.

It will be the Annual Alumni Homecoming Day at the State College tomorrow, and an attractive program has been planned for the day. In addition to the football game, the corner stone of the new Storrs Community House will be laid prior to the game, and in the evening a dance will be held in Hawley Armory.

If the weather is favorable tomorrow, the largest crowd of the season is expected at storrs. As previously announced, athletic authorities at the State College have increased seating facilities so that 1000 more people can be accommodated on the south side of Dow Field. These seats will be reserved for alumni and others, while the students will be seated on the north side of the field.

On the basis of records to date, the Massachusetts team must be conceded a margin in "doping the contest." Both Bates and Norwich have been defeated by the Bay Staters, and the score in each contest was 19-0. Thus the M. A. C. team comes to Storrs without a defeat to mar its record to date, and further its goal line has not been crossed and not a point has been made against it.

Connecticut Aggies on the other hand have played three contests and lost two. Wesleyan was defeated at Middletown in the opening encounter, after which successive contests were dropped to New York University and Maine.

Coach Dole and his men refuse to be worried by game records, or statistics, however. According to the Aggie Mentor, his eleven has made steady progress and development from week to week, and he is satisfied that the team will be in top form and condition for the Bay State Farmers tomorrow. Against Maine last week Connecticut flashed a running attack that was by far the most powerful seen since Dole has been coaching for Storrs. Connecticut followers are looking for a repitition of this same attack tomorrow, which they believe will more than enable the team to hold its own.

Of added interest in connection with this contest is the fact that the rival coaches, Dole of Connecticut, and Gore of Massachusetts were team mates in football at Mass. Aggies in 1912. Dole played center and Gore played quarterback.

It might be assured that inasmuch as the rival coaches received their football scheduling under the same coach, the type of play followed by their respective elevens would be more or less the same. Just the contrary is true, however, provided both teams live up to the past performances and tomorrows contest may furnish an excellent illustration of two extreme types of play.

Coach Dole of Connecticut is a strong advocate of the forward passing game while coach Gore of Massachusetts is equally strong for the rushing game. In fact it is Gore who at the close of the 1924 season raised the cry against the forward pass, claiming that its use should be curtailed else football would degenerate into a game of "outdoor basketball." His team last year, rated as one of the best of New England's small college elevens, rarely used the overhead game; instead of sweeping to victory with an exceptional strong running attack.

The Bay Stater's running attack is just as strong this year, according to all reports, and it will give Connecticut's defense a stiff test tomorrow. Connecticut's overhead game is functioning as in the past, however, and it should give the Massachusetts team no end of trouble.

Last year Connecticut defeated Massachusetts at Amherst 12-10 the first time that the Nutmeg Aggies were able to defeat M. A. C. on the gridiron. That both teams starting tomorrow will be composed largely of veterans is assured, as Connecticut will have ten men who played in last year's contest, and Massachusetts has nine. This fact alone should insure a first-class brand of play tomorrow.

Connecticut's veterans of that game include Captain Brink and Flenneman, ends; Nanfeldt, tackle; Bitgood, McAllister and Baker, guards; Daly, center; Schofield, quarterback; Moreland, halfback; and Makofski, fullback. Balancing this, Massachusetts has Couhig, Thurlow, Gvin and Captain Jones in the line, and a complete backfield in Gustafson, Sullivan, Hilyard and Moberg.

The Aggies wound up their preparation for the game with an indoor practice session of signals in Hawley Armory tonight. The freshman contest with the Tufts yearlings here this afternoon prevented the varsity from using the field, so their last session was held indoors unde electric lights. Coach Dole stated tonight that every man in the squad is in top condition and ready for the game.

Lineups:

Massachusetts Aggies—Cook, c; Marx, lt; Black, lg; Couhig, c; Thurlow, rg; Gavin, rt; Jones (Capt.) re; Gustafson, qb; Sullivan, lhb; Moberg, rhb; Hilyard, fb.

Game called at 2:30 p. m., Gardner Dow field, Storrs.

PITTSBURGH STILL CELEBRATES ITS RECENT VICTORY

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—It has rained in Pittsburgh almost continuously since the Pirates won the world's championship from the Washington Senators, but the spirit of thousands of hometown supporters has not been dampned. Reluctantly, though, the ebb of enthusiasm shows signs of subsiding following last night's frenzied demonstration in honor of the new baseball masters, but the spirit is not dead—Pirate fans have only talked and shouted until they can talk and shout no more, and being human they must rest.

Today the subject of conversation among the greater portion of Pittsburgh's population was, "the Pirates," the downtown section of the city and business districts of the many suburbs were bedecked with the National Emblem and Pirate pennants, and in nearly every window might be found a picture of the titleholding Buccaneers.

This morning, after the monster celebration, the street cleaning department, augmented by an additonal force of men, worked hard for several hours cleaning up the tons of paper with which the streets were littered. Today souvenier hunters were telling of their successes in having secured mementos of the great victory, and that enthusiasts who wanted something substantial as a remembrance did not stop at mere bats and balls was attested by attendants at Forbes field. Home plate, the rubber in the pitchers' box and all the other bases are missing, as well as over fifty box chairs from the temporary boxes built to accommodate the overflow series crowd.

SIX EVENTS RUN ON CLOSING DAY OF CIRCUIT

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—The 1925 Grand Circuit racing season closed today with the running of six events at the southeastern fair here.

Owing to heavy rains which prevented racing during the preceding days, the five scheduled stake races of the week, together with a special race for southern owned horses, only were run. All purse events were cancelled for lack of time, an automobile race programme having been arranged for tomorrow, the final fair day.

The day's feature, a two year old sweepstakes, with $5,750 in stakes, was won by Hazelton, driven by Sep Palin. Trailing Double Cross in the first heat, Hazelton came from behind twice to win the second and third heats.

Second in interest, a 2:09 pacing event was captured in straight heat by Crawford, driven by the veteran Thomas W. Murphy.

The final event, a special race for southern owned horses, drew four entries, being won by Dixie M., running third in the first heat the gelding led the field in the two successive heats.

ASHLAND CLOSES SEASON AGAINST HERRUPS SUNDAY

The Ashland A. A. will play their last game of the season at Ashland park Sunday when they lineup against the fast Herrups of Hartford. The locals defeated the Capitol city outfit here two weeks ago 4-1, but Sunday is another day and the borough nine will have to shake it up if they expect to win, by all reports.

Manager "Ken" Barnard of the Herrups is bringing with him Sunday the pick of the city with three of the leading semi-pro pitchers in Hartford, "Ginger" Cleary, "Porkey" Flynn and "Rusty" Fisher. "Buster" Alexander, formerly with the Hartford eastern league will be seen in left field with "Frankie" Farrell of Holy Cross in center.

The Ashland A. A. lineup: Robertson.: Stanley, "Spike" Liberty" p; "Bill" Liberty, 1b; "Joe" Faber, ss; Raney, 2b; "Nap" Liberty, 3b; Gilbert, lf; Ralli, cf; Benjamin, rf.

The Herrups will go to the plate in the following order: Charrow, rf; J. Farrell, 1b; if, Farrell, cf; Kelly, ss; Alexander, lf; Maier, 3b; Webb, 2b; Jardine, c. Cleary, Flynn, Fisher, p; Beaurie and Tibbits, utility.

The game will be called at 2:30 sharp with "Tommy" Corcoran, former International league umpire, holding the indicator.

N. Y. COMMISSION TURNS DOWN CHAPMAN'S APPEAL

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—(AP)—The New York boxing commission today declined to aid Red Chapman, featherweight of Boston, in the New England fighters' attempt to compel Louis (Kid) Kaplan, holder of the 126-pound ring championship, to fulfill the terms of a contract which the two boxers had signed early last summer.

Papers were presented the board indicating that Chapman and Kaplan were to have boxed at the Queensboro, A. C., last June 8. Kaplan failed to appear on that date, complaining of an injured hand, but failure of Chapman's management to obtain a renewal contract made it impossible for the commission to help the Boston fighter the latter's representatives were informed today.

COAST GUARD TEAM WANTS GAME FOR THIS SUNDAY

The Coast Guard football team Section Base No. 4, at the State Pier in New London, is very anxious to get a game for Sunday, Oct. 18, and also for the following Sunday. The coast guards will play any fast semi-pro team in the state. For games call New London 4260 and ask for manager of football team.

PENN ROOTERS HOLD RALLY IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 16.—(AP)—Activities in connection with the Yale-Pennsylvania football game in the bowl tomorrow, were started tonight when a big rally of Pennsylvania rooters was held here under the direction of the New Haven branch of the Pennsylvania alumni. Coaches of the two teams, Lou Young for Pennsylvania, and T. A. D. Jones for Yale delivered addresses.

The many thousands of football fans who are expected here tomorrow may have to watch the gridiron classic in the rain, Leonard M. Tarr, weather forecaster at the weather bureau here, was unable to give out an optimistic report regarding the weather for tomorrow. The official forecast says: "Increasing cloudiness followed by rain late tonight and Saturday."

"There is no doubt," Mr. Tarr said "that rain will fall before the game starts tomorrow. But there is a chance that it will come early in the night and that it will be spent before morning. Even if it comes early in the morning, there is a chance that it will clear up in time for the game."

WALKER HAS NARROW ESCAPE IN AUTO CRASH

Walker and his trainer and assistant manager Teddy Hayes were motoring from New York to French Lick Springs Ind., when their machine crashed into the steel abutment of a bridge over the little Miami river, 25 miles northeast of here.

The fighters left wrist was bumped against the steel girder of the bridge, causing temporary discomfort to his arm but resulting in no injury. The automobile was slightly damaged but Walker and Hayes were able to drive into Cincinnati.

SHIEK LEONARD IS GRANTED A CHANGE OF NAME

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—John Leonard Michonski, Golden Hill street, "a pugilist by profession," was granted permission by Judge John W. Banks in superior court this afternoon to change his name to John Leonard.

Know in sporting circles as "Shiek" Leonard, the boxer explained that he has been known for eight years under the name of Leonard and that he found it inconvient, when fighting in New York, to be required, under the state boxing law, to go under the name of Michonski by which none of his sporting admirers knew him.

CADETS WILL NOT BE AT ARMY GAME TODAY

WEST POINT, Oct. 16.—(AP)—The annual football struggle between Army and Notre Dame tomorrow in New York will not be witnesses by the corps of Cadets, eleven hundred strong, for the first time since they started the series in 1913.

Military regulations limit the Cadets to three outside football games a season. These contests this year will be with Yale in New Haven on Oct. 31, and with Columbia and Navy in New York.

Rojas Gets Decision

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 16—Quentin Romero Rojas, Chilean heavyweight, won a ten round decision from Eddie McGovern of California here tonight. The weights were Romero Rojas 195; McGovern 172.

THREE BIG BATTLES ON IN WESTERN FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 16—With three championship battles up for decision, the field of undefeated teams in the race for the western conference gridiron championship will be reduced from nine to six and the favorite title contenders from seven to four after tomorrow's football games.

In addition to the contest involving the big ten title, two attractive intersectional games also will be played. Ohio State, which a week ago fought Chicago to a three to three tie, meets at Columbus, while Indiana, seems to have taken on too much in Syracuse for opening the new Hoosier stadium at Bloomington.

The battle between Wisconsin and Michigan at Madison will attract the major interest, with the Iowa-Illinois clash at Iowa City holding second place in the spot light, the Chicago-Northwestern game at Stagg field seems to be a renewal of civil war between these rival institutions. The three conference tilts will be witnessed by more than 105,000 spectators.

Observers figure that the 1925 big championship lies between Michigan and Wisconsin and tomorrow's battle may go a long way in deciding it.

In the Iowa game "Red" Grange will make his first start of the season against a big ten opponent and the contest is expected to reveal whether he has returned to his 1924 form. The Hawkeyes, however, have a star of their own in "Cowboy" Nick Kutsch.

SECOND GAME OF MOOSUP AND WAUREGAN SERIES

The second game of the Wauregan-Moosup series will be played at the parpet grounds in Moosup on Sunday afternoon. Manager Amidon of the Moosup team stated last evening that he would put a team on the field that could not be beaten by any team that Wauregan could produce. Manager Doyle of the Wauregan club was equally confident and said that his team would be entirely new and that as a battery he would have Flynn and Reagan of Holy Cross. Moosup has the edge with one victory and a win for the Moosup team means that it is all over but the shouting.

Wesleyan Sports Manager Elected.

MIDDLETOWN, Oct. 16.—(A. P.)—John C. Dudley, of Cambridge, Mass., and Ralph F. Eisehoff of Newton, Mass., were elected assistant managers of basketball and intra-mutual sports, respectively, in the fall collegeboly election at Wesleyan university today.

Wesleyan Sports Managers Elected.

Broadway Wins

The Broadway indoor baseball team took a hard earned victory from the V. M. C. A. Juniors Friday evening by a score of 10 to 6.

During the last twenty years Harvard has scored nine football victories over Yale, while the Elis have seven wins to their credit, in 1910 and 1911 the games resulted in ties.

NOTRE DAME-ARMY AND YALE-PENN GAMES BIG ATTRACTIONS IN EAST

NEW YORK, Oct. 16. (AP)—Once again the Army has been called out to defend the eastern seaboard against the invasion of Notre Dame.

For far-reaching interest the meeting of these intersectional football foes with 65,000 looking on at the Yankee Stadium, is expected to overshadow the clash between Yale and Pennsylvania at the gigantic bowl in New Haven after 32 years of separation. In 1893 Yale won, 14 to 6. That contest 32 years ago was the eleventh battle betwen the two and Pennsylvania tomorrow seeks revenge for what Yale accomplished in those years. The peaceful Quakers succumbed eleven times in succession.

Princeton vs. Navy

Into Baltimore at break of day a much improved Navy will pursue an uncertain Tiger from Princeton. Last year the men of old Nassau won by only 17 to 14, and Jack Owsley, formerly assistant to Tad Jones at Yale, expects a different verdict in the fray to come, although the Tiger has not been compelled to bare its claws in the early games.

Harvard vs. Holy Cross

Harvard, a menace to eastern championship claimants for the first time in several years by its 68-0 conquest of little Middlebury last week, faces the severe test of its early season in a fighting Holy Cross eleven. Last year the Crimson won, 12 to 6, and in 1923 managed to eke out a conquest by a mere six points. There was no other scoring in that battle and there was fear in Harvard hearts throughout. The Worcestermen always fight to the last ditch and this season have a powerful line and a speedy backfield.

Colgate vs. Lafayette

Eddie Tryon, former Suffield school back, will lead his Colgate warriors against Lafayette and the eastern eleven's only chance seems to lie in stopping the enemy captain. Tryon has amassed an imposing total of points, scoring four touchdowns in 22 minutes a week ago, when Colgate defeated St. Bonaventure, 49 to 0. Lafayette's victory on that day was fully as impressive, a 40-9 margin over Washington college.

Other Contests

There are several intersectional games of calibre, a tussle of great importance being that between Columbia and Ohio State at Columbus. The New York institution appears to be returning to gridiron prestige after several years, rolling up exceptional scores against its early season opponents. Syracuse university faces Indiana at Indianapolis, Penn State and Marietta lock at State college, Pa., and Georgetown meets Detroit university at Detroit.

Notre Dame vs. Army

Notre Dame's eleven carried and kicked their football across the continent last season to the national championship. If there is such an honor in the gridiron game. They defeated all opponents, the "Four Horsemen," Stuhldreher, Miller, Crowley and Layden, cutting through every manner of defense.

The "Four Horsemen" have ridden over the ridge but the dust from their charging hoofs remains to beclood the power of the replacements. Eating the dust of the great quartet, the new Notre Dame backfield has carried on sweeping through Baylor university from Texas by an overwhelming score, toppling Lombard, 69 to 0, and outplaying Beloit, 19 to 3.

Army's backfield is strong and the soldiers have a solid line. Last season Notre Dame won by 13 to 7, its first great victory of the season, but its green team is fanning a hard hour of struggle, a fact which Coach Knute Rockne admits freely. Harding, Trapnell, Wilson and Hewitt are expected to start behind the line for the Army, with Edwards, O'Boyle, Prell and Enright opposing.

Yale vs. Penn.

Yale and Pennsylvania are worried. Each belives that the other wields an uncertain power and each is careful about predictions. The Elis have lost little of the strength that carried them through an undefeated season in 1924 and Pennsylvania's production appears to be fully as strong as that which downed all eastern rivals a year ago. Allen, veteran fullback, will be out of the contest with an injury to his hand suffered in the Georgia game a week ago.

Leading eastern teams matched for tomorrow and the results of the 1924 contests follow:

Notre Dame 13, Army 7
Yale-Pennsylvania, no game.
Princeton 17, Navy 14.
Harvard 12, Holy Cross 6.
Rutgers 19, Cornell 0.
Colgate-Lafayette, no game.
W. & J. 10, Carnegie 0.
Penn State 28, Marietta 0.
Pittsburgh-Gettysburg, no game.
Dartmouth-Main, no game.
Brown-Bates, no game.

EVOLUTION DISTURBS FILIPINO POPULACE

Evolution has set the Philippines by the ears. The newspapers bristle with letters from excited subscribers. Some recommend birth control and all advanced doctrines; others are strict fundamentalists who see the ruin of the younger generation. As usual, the legislature comes to the rescue with a queer assortment of bills. One would tax bachelors, another would prohibit the teachings of evolution or the mention of it in the public prints. Another would tax marriage and impose fees for births—to be the father of a child would cost a quarter. Bishop Azpiroz of the Filipino Independent church says that his denomination has rewritten the Bible and embodied in it the in the world that has put modern science above the Bible.

OPINIONS ON AMERICA ARE AIRED AT GENEVA

Count Skrzynski, Polish foreign minister and head of the Polish delegation to the leaxue of nations assembly, has confided to his friends at Geneva some of the impressions gained during his recent trip to the United States.

"We Europeans," he says, "have committed three grave errors in our conversations with Americans since the war. First, we have spoken ill of our own particular European enemy. That makes a bad impression. Secondly, we have nearly always asked for money—which singularly weakens our case. Thirdly, we have persisted in trying to tell Americans what they ought to do and how they ought to do it."

The men listen attentively to the count's conclusions, but the women listened quite as intently to the American impressions of a young Polish attache who accompanied the count.

"Three things in America," asserted the attache, "are wonderful—the jazz, the skyscrapers and the women. But three things are frightful — the cooking the imitation European palaces and the ignorance concerning foreign affairs."

Incubation in the Desert

Many a person who has watched a mother robin nestling patiently on her eggs in a blossoming apple tree has wondered how the little creature or her ancestors ever learned that long process would cause the eggs to hatch. A great puzzle is set for them in the great deserts of our west, where the same birds have learned to cool their eggs instead of to warm them.

In the unsheltered nests on the sandy plains it becomes necessary to keep the egg from cooking. One hot, stifling spring in the Little Antelope a traveler had occasion to pass and repass the nest of a pair of meadow larks, located unhappily in the shade of a very slender weed. The birds were never sitting except at night, but at noonday they stood or drooped above the nest, half fainting with pitifully parted bills, spreading their wings between the sun and the eggs. Sometimes both of them together, with wings spread and half lifted, maintained a spot of shade in a terrific temperature.

Their patience in this case was rewarded for the compassionate traveler at last spared them a bit of canvas, which she mounted over the nest as a permanent shelter.

Tokio's Traffic Dangerous

The number of traffic accidents in the busy streets of Tokio are rapidly increasing, according to the metropolitan police records. During the last 12 months, ended in March, there were 6423 motorcar accidents in which 31 persons were killed and 3496 injured.

THE GENERAL STORE

I went to the drug store to get me some glue
And left with some socks of a lavender hue;

I went to the drug store to purchase some tacks
And being about it I bought me an ax;

I went to the drug store for linen and ten
And purchased some glasses to help me to see;

I went to the drug store for lumber . and wire
And could not help buying a motor-car tire;

I went to the drug store to eat and to drink
And purchased a chair and a battery clink;

I went to the drug store for needles and thread
And carried home tulips in yellow and red.

I went to the drug store for phonograph disks
And bought me some brooms—one kitchen, two whisks;

I went to the drug store for putty and paint
And purchased, in plaster, a dog and a saint;

I went to the drug store for bird seed and strings
And posted with cash for a diamond rings;

I went to the drug for essays by Lamb
And collared some seal and Virginia ham;

went to the drug store for shoes and a shave
And bought some insurance to teach me to save;

I went to the drug store for balm for my ills—
The druggist was sorry: he didn't keep pills!

If We Only Understood

If we knew the cares and trials,
Knew the efforts all in vain,
And the bitter disappointment,
Understood the loss and gain—
Would the grim eternal roughness
Seem—I wonder—just the same
Should we help where now we hinder?
Should we pity where we blame?

Ah! we judge each other harshly,
Knowing not life's hidden force
Knowing not the font of action
Is less turbid at its source;
Seeing not amid the evil
All the golden grains of good;
And we'd love each other better
If we only understood.

Could we judge all deeds by motives
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we would find it better,
Purer than we judge we should,
If we only understood.

The QUEST

I am looking for a wife, sir,
Can you find me one today,
With a sort of homey set up
And a bit of wifely way?
For wherever I am roaming
And I see a girl I know,
I have in mind a picture
Of a woman mixing dough.

The girls today are witty
And I like their frank appeal,
But somehow I always wonder
Can they cook a decent meal?
And back my fancy wanders
To a kitchen long ago,
And a picture of my mother
As she stood there mixing dough.

I see a little cottage
With curtains blowing white,
And my magazines and papers
And a room by evening light,
And a little fellow coming
With unsteady steps and slow
And my wife says, "Take the baby,
For my hands are in the dough."

Well the flapper fit my picture,
And when I come at night,
Will I find this homey mixture
In the soft and mellow light?
Or will auto, movie, dance hall
Be the way I have to go
In the way I have to go
With no baby, but to jazz it
While the batters mix the dough?

I am just a working fellow,
But somehoy I hate to spare
This picture that for many years
I've looked for one to share;
And I think I'll keep on looking,
For I sort of think I know
I'd never be quite happy
If my wife couldn't mix the dough.

The Town of Don't You Worry

There's a town called Don't Worry
On the banks of the River Smile
Where the cheer up, and be happy
Blossom sweetly all the while.
Where the Never Grumble flower
Blooms beside the fragrant Try
And the ne're give up and Patience
Point their faces toward the skies.
In the valley of Contentment
In the Province of I will.
You will find this lovely city
At the foot of No Fret Hill.
There are thoroughfares Delightful
In this very charming town
And on every hand are shade trees
Called the Very Seldom Frown.

Rustic benches quite enticing
You'll find scattered here and there,
And to each a vine is clinging
Called the Frequent Earnest Prayer.
Everybody there is Happy
And is singing all the while
In the town of Don't You Worry
On the banks of the River Smile.

ANSWERS AND INQUIRIES

HONEY DEW: Your name has been added to the Social Corner list.

KITTL LOU: Many thanks. Most attractive and effective.

VISITING SOUTH WINDSOR

Dear Members of the Corner: As the seasons roll around I promise myself much, what I'll make, where I'll go, and the pleasure of seeing old friends and visiting places historic which I have had such a desire to see; but time goes marching on and all I anticipate is not realised.

There is pleasure in anticipating. One morning four of us seated ourselves in son's car and went to Manchester on to South Windsor passing by where I once lived as my husband with Peter Thom, Patrick Garvan of Hartford and Mr. Scovell who lived on South Windsor street were owners of the paper mill there. It used to be called "Clapp's" paper mill. In passing along this section we saw such a quantity of tobacco being raised under cover. I would liked to have remained here a little while and learned if Mrs. Simpson and the Stark families are still there but when calculations are made to go a certain distance in so many hours all seem to feel there is not time, so we fly past homes and people I would so much enjoyed seeing once more.

Younger people in your family who did not live there because unborn, fail to understand what there can be in such places for mother to want to see. We must not expect them to understand. We drove out to the street and saw store and postoffice where I often went after putting "Mother Hubbard" cloak, made by Mrs. King, onto Virgil then two years old, harnessed up "Major," a white horse afraid of steam cars running from East Hartford to Springfield and out to postoffice for mail, about one mile away. If mail required answering we had to return to postoffice in an hour or so which gave us a change. The mill used to make book and newspaper. The same company was in Glasco but Mr. Osgood owned and wanted mill there to use for yarn, I think, so Mr. Thom and company bought out the Clapp people. Mr. Fish and family also Mr. Shey and family came from Glasco. Each one lost a child with scarlet fever while we all lived there. The little girl and boy, cousins, were buried in cemetery in South Windsor. One day Virgil was taken by his father up on the spring dam and soon we saw his two year old, come rolling over and over that end over and down the steep rough embankment made a grab at the "mother hubbard," which you older sisters remember had plenty of cloth in the skirt and rescued the boy. Another time we took Virgil out in carriage where land descending in rear of house and little boy was going down the hill carriage and all but was rescued unhurt. I was not an eye witness to these acts. M. being an only child and never any experience with children I decided then and there he was quite unfit to care for small children and never employed him again. He did not grieve over the decision. Had half a hogshead at corner of house to catch rain water. Saw Virgil playing around it and feared while I was at mill keeping books the girl at the house might not see him. M. asked me to get ready to give him a bath which I did and M. put him into tub of rain water and then into house for bath. He never showed any affection for the tub of rain water after his immersion. We were compelled to keep a cow at this place as people in this locality devote their time and strength to raising tobacco and raise vegetables only for their own families. Our first experience with a cow was when M. had to go away on business and left the cow in yard by the barn, but soon after his departure the cow decided to get out and look the country over to her own satisfaction and made a bee line in direction of the station a quarter of a mile up the road. It hastily put on a weep and followed her and on getting to the station she did not cross the railroad but instead she went onto and down the track at full speed. I finally succeeded in getting her off the track into a piece of woods. As it was getting to be train time I had a picture of a cow being chewed up by cars. You sisters know how active our minds can be under such trying ordeals. Finally succeeded in interesting a Mr. Brace who lived near the station and he escorted the animal home. Some dear friends from Greeneville moved onto a farm in Windsorville at "Barber" hill. So we went to Wapping and then on to their town and they made our lives pleasanter as we were among entire strangers. We attended their daughter's wedding. She was married to Charles Hayes. Many people were present at the ceremony. After a while we became convinced business at mill was not paying so left for better business opportunities. As a whole liked the place, only five miles from Hartford. As we passed through the place many of these things came to my mind. Mill was burned.

PREVENTS JARS CRACKING

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters and Friends: I always enjoy reading the nice interesting letters every week, and I feel that it is up to me to do my part to help keep the page full.

What a busy fall this has been with those who have had canning, pickling, preserving and jelly making, besides their regular house work! But when winter comes, with its deep snows and we go down cellar and see all those jars of canned fruit, we will feel well paid for our trouble.

So many people have told me that their jars crack when they put the hot fruit in them. I will tell my way.

When the fruit is ready for the jars, I take a towel soak it in cold water then wring about half of the water out and fold in about six or eight thicknesses, put on a cold plate and put the jar on it and fill with the hot fruit. If the jar is perfect it will never break. I have canned bushels of fruit that way and never lost a jar.

Calla Lily: Does your son remember the words to the music that was sung at the time he graduated from the Broadway school? It goes to the tune of Annie Lisle: all I know of it is Gems of Loyalty. B. G. S. to Thee.

If he remembers it will you kindly send it to me through the Social Corner. My son graduated at the same time but he has forgotten it.

Long live the Social Corner. Best wishes.

LIVING WITH IN-LAWS

To the Sisters: I have been an interested reader of the Social Corner as I have a friend in Norwich who sends me each week the Bulletin that has the Social Corner letters.

Have been watching since I read Kitty Lou's article on "in-laws." They were both very good. But have you ever tried living with a daughter-in-law? I have two sons, one in the west and one here in my home. He told me a year ago he intended to marry and I knew his intended wife was a very fine girl. I was pleased about it and as I am a widow my son and I decided to make our home together. His wife was all any one could ask, agreeable, sweet and loving. I anticipated an ideal home life, gave over every thing when the time came for her to do as she wished. It was all very well at first, but how she can't see why we have to live together. She would be so happy if she were with her husband alone. I keep to my room as much as possible, so as not to cross her. I have never found any fault or given advice. I would so much rather be alone, but I need my boy. He has always been such a comfort to me and I have no relatives so must stay for the present. I would like to hear from the different ones who have had such an experience or can they tell me what to do to make her endure me. An early reply will be greatly appreciated.

WORTH WHILE HOUSEHOLD HELPS

Dear Social Corner Editor: I thank you very much for the prize which you awarded me. It came as a great surprise, I am sure, but I appreciate it very much, and also congratulate the other Social Corner sisters who received prizes in the Septerber group. As some one was asking for a recipe for tomato mince meat, will send one that I have.

Tomato Mince Meat: 1 pint green tomatoes and 1 quart apples chopped fine, 2 cups sugar, 1 cup molasses, 1 cup raisins, 1-2 cup vinegar, 1 small teaspoon salt, 1 small teaspoon cinnamon, 1 small teaspoon cloves, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons flour.

Boil 1-2 hour or more. This will make four pies. It is some times called summer mince pie.

The poetry sent in by Pisces was fine, and that is about the way most of us feel by the time "canning time" is over. They claim they will not repeat it but rush right into it the next fall as natural as ever.

Neighbor Eveready: Your letter telling how to make oil mops and dusters from old stocking was excellent.

Here are some more hints for using up the black stockings. Make them into holders to use around the stove, for lifting hot kettles, etc., make them entirely of the stocking cut round or square as you prefer, about 1-2 inch thick all stocking, without the cotton filling. Tack them together and have them bound around the edge with strips of the stockings or strong gingham. They do not show every spot so quickly and can be washed so easily. Then another use for old stockings, is to sew two together and use them to wipe off the stove, and the more blacking that gets on this wiper the more useful it becomes in keeping the stove brightened up on the days when you have not time to give it a thorough blacking.

Here is still one other use. They can be made to prolong the life of your broom. Select a stocking (the coarser the better) and slide down the handle and fasten down as far as the broom is sewed. Then smooth it out nicely and bind the other edge around the handle (where the broom corns are fastened) with a stout shoe string or any stout cord. It will prolong the usefulness of your broom and prevent the strain from breaking the cord that holds the broom corns in place.

In these days of expensive brooms, it is a great saving for the best brooms are none to good.

Here is one more little hint to Social Corner sisters along the line of domestic economy. When you begin using your jellies and pickles that have wax covers remove the wax carefully in luke warm water. Then drop them into cold water dry them and place them in a nice clean box for another season, keeping those from pickles separate from those from the jellies, and they can be melted and used another season with just as good results as ever.

Deepest sympathy for all in trouble. Best wishes to all from

ENJOYED CLUB No. 1's MEETING

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: It is some time since I wrote but have enjoyed the letters written by the other sisters.

Wednesday, Oct. 14 Foxglove and Whirlwind met Jennie and myself in Hartford and we went to the meeting of Club No. 1. It was a beautiful day the foliage on the trees had taken on some of it's autumn coloring, the traveling was good and I enjoyed the trip greatly. We left Hartford about nine o'clock so were early at the hall. There were several sisters there before us etting ready for the bountiful dinner that came later.

I was pleased to meet several old friends that I had not seen for years.

I was sorry to hear of Anna Mell's death for she was a relative and I had lost track of her since, her marriage to Mr. Thompson. I did not know her by that name and did not know where she lived until after her death.

Wild Rose: I expected to see you there but did not.

Was sorry to hear Amy was not well enough to be out. I wrote you a letter not long ago, Amy, but have not heard from you.

Was glad to see Betty T. and Lucille.

Remember Me: I am sorry to hear you are in the hospital. Hope you will be better soon.

Theoda: I was sorry you could not be there. We had such a nice dinner and a nice entertainment after.

Rose Lee was chairman, and Sister Eveready had charge of the entertainment. Everything was fine.

Aunty No. 1. Hasn't your wrist got well neough yet so you can white for the Corner? I haven't seen anything for a long time.

Delish Deal: I am glad you are feeling a little better. I know how to sympathize with you. I have had several severe attacks of muscular rheumatism. I have trouble with my left foot most of the time.

Black-eyed Susie: Did you have good luck with the Robert O. Fletcher dahlia you bought last year with the "yellow slip" you received from the Corner?

Aries: Received your nice letter and will write soon.

Crimson Rambler: Hope you are improving. Did you get my letter? I wrote in August I think. Would have liked to have gone to Goshen hill on the 15th, but did not hear of it in time. I hope this weather will last for a while.

Effie M: I expected to see you at W.

Anna Z: Sevehal sisters inquired for you.

Kitje: Where are you? Have you seen Mrs. Saunders of Bald hill lately?

Was pleased to meet Olive, White Clover, Mary France, Marigold, Lonesome Pine and many others whose pen names I can't remember. Hoping the sick are all much better and sending best wishes to the members of the Social Corner, I am

RAG DOLLS

Dear Social Corner Members: There are many who like to make presents at home.

Given the raw material and a little preliminary instruction from mother or teacher it will be found that doll making has become more than a source of temporary amusement to the child. The desire to love and be loved is manifest in most girls from the moment the first doll is clasped in their arms. The mothering instinct is very strong, if by chance this is not the case it should be cultivated.

The finding of many grotesque rag dolls in Egyptian tombs proves that ragdolls have been first favorite from time immemorial. These funny little babies were laid in the dead child's arms by the ancient Egyptian mother in the expectation that they would cheer them in the next world.

No machine made or manufactured doll has ever superseded the raggedy home-made article in the childish heart. It has a firm unalterable hold upon the affection of every woman child who has learned she can use it or abuse it at her hearts content, and even to its utter destruction and yet its remains will come up smiling every time.

We all know how a child will play all day with its family of manufactured dolls, and when at bedtime it wants something to love and cuddle will demand her old rag doll, battered and [illegible] beyond recognition to take to bed with her where both sleep the sleep of happy childhood.

Dolls of rolled rags may be made very interesting if not quite artistic. The bodies, arms and legs are made of strips of rags rolled very tightly. If a wire hairpin is used for the foundation for the body will have more firmness. The legs and arms are made separately and sewed to the body very securely. When the legs are done, bend up, sufficient length for the foot, (sometimes it is necessary to cut a slit in the upper part of the foot to make it lie flat). The same may be done with the hands. Shoes stockings and gloves made be made of old silk stockings and kid gloves, will cover all deficiencies. I make the heads of these dolls of wads of cotton covered with flesh colored silk and the features marked in ink.

A quickly made and convenient rag doll is put into shape by folding a piece of heavy cloth lengthwise and cutting half the body. Now cut another half exactly like this, and sew them together and stuff with cotton or old rags. Of course this doll is more flat than round, but if the features are washed in with flesh color or done in ink the doll will find its place in the heart of many a little girl.

LEAD THE CHILDREN RIGHT

Dear Social Corner Members: We expect children to play for Hallowe'en but it is well for parents also to make certain definite plans. Civic and educational forces have been working some time to establish a sane spirit and harmless fun in the celebration of this festival. And their work is surely bearing fruit, but in the final analysis it is the parents who have the direct supervision of the children for the evening and it is largely in their power to make it one of fun and frolic or destruction. Children have a strong sense of justice, fairness and a keen judgment when right or wrong is evolved. The right attitude toward the occasion is only a matter of stating the facts, and the adult point of view in a tactful way and most children are willing to take the form of amusement for the evening that brings to them the maximum pleasure with no harm or discomfort to others.

When our son and daughter have not been invited to a good wholesome party we ourselves provide one. It is far the best in the end. The one we had last year was the first one in which the children have done almost the entire planning and work themselves. Perhaps it will help solve some reader's problem this year. The decorations, games, refreshments or anything about the party need not be elaborate. The spirit of the occasion is the most joyous of all and needs no prompting.

The invitations they planned simply, using orange paper and black ink. The guests were to come dressed as any character they chose. The house was decorated with autumn plants and foliage. The garage was theirs for the evening and the path there from the house was marked by a lane made by suspending bushes of dried leaves, figures of witches, cats and goblins, cornstalks and jack o'lanterns from two clothes line ropes. In the garage were tubs for apple bobbing, bowls containing leaves and "fortunes" written on bits of paper and enclosed in walnut shells. The decorations were cornstalks, from the garden—one bundle left open at the bottom for the cats, brownies, etc., to hold revelry. The floor was carpeted with leaves and grass. After a few games they returned to the house and the garage was free for preparations or refreshments. Big crepe paper pumpkins held sandwiches, cookies covered with orange icing and pumpkin faces in chocolate, rounds or orange crepe paper holding popcorn. The drink was orangeade with straws. All enjoyed the best time ever, and when it was time to leave for homes I am sure no steps were removed, windows disfigured or porches decorated with garden remnants.

If we create a desire and taste for the best in our children they want only the best.

GREETINGS FROM WHIRLDWIND

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I feel like a stranger it is so long since I have written, but I have read every letter.

Foxglove and I attended some of the picnics, one at Maple Leafs, one at Twice Twenty's and one at Helper's, and had a splendid time at them all.

Last Wednesday afternoon I opened the Corner page and when I saw there we two picnics I was more than peeved. It was such a fine day and Foxglove said in the morning she wished there was a picnic: but it was too late to start.

We attended the meeting in Norwich in the Buckingham the second of September and as we had tire trouble we were late. We had Jennie and Theoda with us. There were quite a few there and dinner was over, but the sisters found us something good just the same.

Sorry to read of so many that are ill and sorry to read of the passing of Anna Mell. My sympathy goes out to the dear ones left.

I see by the Courier some of the sisters attended the Springfield fair. Foxglove and I were there and we wore our Corner badge and pin but saw none of the sisters that day. (Thursday.) What a splendid lot of cattle and horses there were there. I had a friend there who took first prize on his Holstein cattle. I also was interested in the chickens.

Wednesday the seventh we went to Durham fair an enjoyed that as well as the larger ones.

Theoda: Hope you are having a good time.

Twice Twenty: Did you have a good time on your trip, and how is Jennie?

Dom Pedro: Will write you soon.

Palm Leaf and Joan: I see you both have a birthday. Accept my best wishes.

Balsam Fir and E. M. R. C. P.: Received your letters and so glad you liked our faces as it is all we have and like them ourselves.

Airy: So glad to know you are still in the land of the living and did not forget me entirely. Will not wait as long as you although I will not promise to write at once.

Well, will ring off for this time.

WHIRLWIND, (Oct. 17.)

GRATEFUL FOR REMEMBRANCES

Dear Social Corner Sisters: With a heart full of grateful, loving and tender thoughts, for your kindly remembrance of my birthday, I am sending a few lines, to tell you how much I appreciate your greetings, your words of cheer and sympathy, your messages of kindness and best wishes for my happiness. It is certainly a surprise as well as pleasure, to be so well remembered by so many of the sisters, as I have never been able to mingle with you and assist at your gatherings, which I should have enjoyed doing, if health and strength permitted. I am enjoying the beautiful October sunshine as I sit in my warm room with plants in the window and a beautiful basket composed entirely of straw flowers, which was the gift of a dear friend in California whom I have never seen, but I am sure she is a dear lady with a kind heart and is fond of old ladies. Again thanking you for your kindness and courtesy will close with love to all from

Your loving sister

ANOTHER PLACE TO VISIT BEFORE SNOW FLIES

Editor and Members Social Corner: Perhaps you have all heard of or visited Squaw Rocks (one of natures curiosities) about 2 1-2 miles from Moosup, Conn. Squaw Rocks is a ledge extending north and south for about 20 rods. Parts of the ledge are said to extend half a half. Near the highest portion is a formation of rock known as the "devils coffin," which is about ten feet deep, eight feet wide and 20 feet long. Below this and reached by a covered passageway, is a large cave, all of rock, called the "old lady's kitchen." A tall person can walk upright here, while the "old lady's arm chair" invites you to rest. The "old lady's stove" or "table" is convenient for refreshments, and from an opening or "window," one gets a view of the valley to the east. Not far from the 'kitchen" is a flat rock known as the "dancing floor." Near it is a cavern extending 20 feet into the rock and is called the "well." Following the path in the well one comes out of an opening 50 feet below. Near the "dancing floor" is the "fiddler's stand," sometimes called "pulpit rock." This appears to be balanced. To the north, and reached by the "sheep path," and passing the "toboggan slide," is an entrance to a cave with two openings. One leads into a good sized room, the other leads into a passage which has never been explored as it is considered dangerous. Trees grow out of the rock crevices and snakes are said to be unknown here. (I am indebted to the Moosup Journal for these measurements.)

Stanza: Your suggestions seem good to me. Some very instructive and broadening ideas may be advanced in such a discussion.

Strawberry: Sorry I could not remain longer at the meeting. Would like to have become better acquointed with the sisters.

Buffalo: Thank you for sending in the complete poem. I like to save the poems for my scrap book. I am sending one called The Flowered Gown by M. Widdemer sent into the Social Corner page years ago.

I wish that I could find my gown
With printed roses up and down
And rose pink ribbons made to tie
In wide bows like a butterfly
It had a kerchief of white lace
With ribbon at the crossing place
To mark the beating girl-heart, lit
With gay unwisdom, under it.
And ruffles very crisp and wide
With lace upon the underside
I could put out my hand at night
And find it in its place aright
Between my lexhorn on the wall
And mother's heirloom Chins shawl
Behind the cherry closet door
In the blue room on the third floor;
But that room's at such a height
It would be hard to reach tonight
There are two flights of stairs to climb
And seventy weary years of time.

CANDY AND JELLY RECIPES

Dear Social Corner Sisters and All: One of the sisters asked for candy recipes. I am very much interested in candy making. I often make candy and at Christmas I always make several different kinds. However, here are two I always have good luck with.

Marble Foam Candy: 3 cups of light brown sugar, 1-2 cup of water, 2 egg whites, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup of chopped walnuts, 1-2 cake of chocolate. Boil the sugar and water until the sirup crackles when tried in cold water. Meanwhile beat the egg whites stiff and when the sirup is cooked pour it over them gradually, beating constantly, when cool, add vanilla and nutmeats. Beat until it will hold its shape then pour into a buttered tin. Melt the chocolate over hot water and pour over the top of the candy when it has hardened. Cut into squares heating the knife in hot water and wiping it dry before cutting in order to keep the chocolate from cracking.

Chocolate Caramels: Take of grated chocolate, milk, molasses and sugar one cup each, piece of butter size of egg and boil until it drops hard. Now put in one cup of chopped nuts, put in a buttered pan, and before it cools. Mark off in squares.

Wild Flower: So you never saw my husband till at Springfield that day when I stayed at home with baby and mamma went with him!

Buffalo: Hope to see you next Sunday if pleasant.

I would like some of you to try cranberry and quince jelly. It is fine.

Cranberry and Quince Jelly: 5 large quinces put through food chopper, 2 quarts of cranberries, 3 quarts of water. Cook until soft, strain through jelly bag. To each cup of juice add one of sugar. Before adding sugar cook juice ten minutes very hard then add sugar and cook ten minutes longer. It makes 18 glasses.

Best wishes to all.

Am I too late to get a pin?

GETTING A BROWN GLACE CRUST

Dear Corner Sisters: Here are six simple ways to obtain that rich brown glace crust.

Mix 1 teaspoon of butter with three teaspoons milk, melt on the stove and brush lightly, over the crust.

Mix one egg yolk with 3 teaspoons of milk then brush the top of the crust.

Take cold water and let run over your pie or take brush and brush top of pie.

To prevent the juice running out of pies make small funnels of stiff white paper and place them in the top crust.

Large macaroni is also good—take small pieces. Put a cloth around the edge of the pie crust about one inch wide or cut your under crust larger than the upper crust and lap it over the upper crust.

New England Pie Crust: Three cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 tablespoon sugar and 1 teaspoon salt, sifted three times, then add 1 cup shortening (if I use butter I always wash the salt out of it.) Now mix in shortening until it is all mixed in like meal, stir up with 1-2 cup thick sour milk, knead out on your board.

FRIENDSHIP

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I wonder how many of the sisters notice the motto at the top of our Corner page, put in by our editor, I find them a great help and a wonderful motto to keep before me day by day. Sept. 26 the motto was. Time is given to every body to carry out good deeds. How many of us, when night comes look over the day that has passed to see what good deeds they have done and what kind thoughts we have sent out? I am very much afraid some of us would be found wanting. Another motto was, Better to say nothing than nothing to the purpose. To me they are wonder head lines. They help me to be a true friend to my friends. If another makes an unkind remark about him or her, to you, show that friendship and help straighten out the untrue and unkind remarks which are made through petty jealousy. Let us watch for our editor's mottoes and try and live up to them. Good nature pays large dividends. Why can't we be so good natured that we will receive compound dividends. Let us all try it. When we hear an unkind remark made before we judge too quickly, let us try and find out if it is really thus and so. If we go right to the person or persons and find out the truth, then help put out the fire of scandal and falsehoods we will all feel much better for it.

Friendship is a golden bond
A bond that's sure to pay
Great dividends in happiness
Along life's stony way.
When storm clouds gather round us
And all looks dark and gray
This precious bond of friendship
Will roll the clouds away.

Charity the greatest gift
Came from a loving God
Sometimes means just a pleasant word
Or just a smile and nod.
'Twill help a brother with his load
Of cares and worries when
We least expect he needs the help
He gets it there and then.

Benevolence, oh, what a world,
It conquered more than man will ever
Win, by strivin with the sword or peace is gained by loving deeds
And not by strife and pain
True Friendship is the binding link
In Charity's golden chain.

Necia: May I correct a statement made about leaving our dishes at the Odd Fellow hall? The janitor gave us a little space in a closet where we can put just the pitchers, etc. Let us do as we started to do—bring our dishes each time—and then we wont have the expense of a dish washer.

Black-eyed Susie: You and Joan can certainly tickle the ivories. Come again.

Wildflower spoke to Calla Lily about getting the Norwich, Gardner Lake and Middletown bus to take a ride over the new road. Anyone can go who wants to if it is carried out.

I hope the editor won't think I have written too much, but there is a lot more could be said on friendship, but must stop. Hope to see you all at Odd Fellows hall Nov. 4. Come early to avoid the rush.

Success to all.

ENJOYABLE TIME AT NORTH WINDHAM

Dear Corner Sisters: Just a few lines to let you know I am still one of the Corner.

I want to say that we had a most enjoyable time at North Windham.

Alfara and Tuny Ann were splendid hostesses. For dinner we had splendid pie, succotash, beans, salad, squash and apple pie, cake, rolls and coffee. It was like a wedding feast. Was sorry more could not come to enjoy it.

We had our fortunes told in the afternoon and such a general good time. It was time for us to return home before we realized it could be so late.

Too Late: Was very sorry I could not attend your picnic. It was one of the pleasant times I had to forego.

Attended the meeting at Buckingham. Had a very pleasant time and fine dinner, and nice social two hours after dinner. Each one helped. Mrs. John Fanning gave a very interesting talk. And we did ample justice to the fine watermelon Mr. Fanning brought.

Savilla: Hope you did not get too tired. You worked so busily waiting on us at table.

Joan: We missed your good music but presume you were favoring others.

Practical Polly: Hope you enjoyed your birthday.

Peg Away: What a good time we had at Rocky Point and Oakland beach. Such a splendid ride and such a lovely car. Hope we can go again next summer.

Primrose: Did I hear some one say you were going away? Hope not for.

Twice Twenty: I often think of the splendid time we had with you and Zany. What a dandy housekeeper Zany is! A place for everything and everything in its place.

Will the editor please accept thanks for pin. Good night.

A HOUSEHOLD FRIEND

Dear Sisters: There isn't a better friend in the household than common salt and one can't begin to remember half of the things it will do for us if we just give it the opportunity.

Dip a piece of damp flannel in salt to clean knife handles, stained teacups and glasses spotted by hard water.

Soak prints in salt and water before washing to fasten the colors.

When frying griddle cakes, grease the griddle slightly for the first one; after that use a little salt.

A tiny pinch of salt added to the whites of eggs when beating will make them froth quicker and and the froth will be stiffer.

Wine stains may be covered with salt, and at the first opportunity pour boiling water over them.

If soot falls on the carpet cover it thickly with salt then sweep it up quickly it will not leave any stain.

In cleaning a white sweater or shawl put it into a flour bag containing equal parts of salt and flour. Shake well, no washing required.

For cleaning enamel bath tubs rub with a cloth saturated with kerosene or linseed oil, upon which has been spread a layer or salt. Afterwards rinse tub down with warm soapy water.

Salt is excellent to sprinkle on the walk in winter to eliminate the ice.

Salt and water will remove iodine stains no matter how long standing.

Salt in your shoes will help keep your feet warm and also help the circulation.

Salt will stop nose bleed; it will also stop a hemmorrhage.

To make a grandmother's gargle for sore throat, take 1 cup of very strong sage tea, 2 tablespoons each of strained honey and salt, strong vinegar, one rounding teaspoon of pulverized cayenne, steepine the cayenne with the sage. Strain, mix and bottle for use, gargling four to five times daily according to the severity of the case.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

Two ambitions that live in the heart of practically every American boy have been realized by Raymond Griffith, whom Paramount presents as a comedy star in "He's a Prince!" which comes to the Palace on Sunday.

The two ambitions realized by Griffith were to "join a circus" and to "join the navy."

Almost born on the stage and actually raised on it, Griffith became a performer in the Barnum and Bailey Circus when he was twelve years old and lived under the "big top" for five months.

Then followed school and more stage work and as soon as he was old enough he enlisted in the United States Navy During his two years enlistment he rose to the rank of boat-swain's mate and made two trips around the world.

Griffith plays the part of a high royal naval officer in one portion of "He's a Prince!" Mary Brian, who made her first appearance in motion pictures less than a year ago as "Wendy" in "Peter Pan," is featured opposite the new star. The supporting cast features Nigel de Brulier, Edgar Norton, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Michael Dark and Carl Stockdale.

Edward Sutherland directed the production. Keene Thompson wrote the screen play from the story by Reginald Morris and Joseph Mitchell.

At Y. M. C. A. Sunday Afternoon

Men and women and boys and girls over fourteen are invited to the interesting service at the local Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 4 p. m. Several reels of moving pictures will be shown. Fifteen minutes will be given to the showing of a picture entitled "A people without a history," the Hopi Indians at home in their cliff dwellings in northern New Mexico; views of the surrounding country, on the sandstone cliffs, on top of which their cave like dwellings are situated, the mode of living, custom and dress of this ancient tribe; also a visit to the American Indian Reservation where lives one of the oldest tribe in existence. A reel on New York Skyline; showing the beauty and romance of the great American metropolis of the Western Hemisphere; also the sparkling bay and the Statute of Liberty, etc. Another reel on "the etcher and his art" will be of real interest. In addition to the pictures, there will be a brief talk by Secretary Hill, and vocal solos by Hugh Kinder.

Breed Theater

Another Flaming Youth,—only with deeper heart interest and heart thrills."

That is how John Francis Dillon, director of the above picture, describes Chickie, the latest First National picture, which he also directed and which will be presented at the Breed theater Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday.

When we produced Flaming Youth, I thought we could never produce another picture that would be better," said Dillon. "But since completing the direction of Chickie I have felt assured that we have done it. For sensations, thrills, color, tensity and emotional acting as well as a lot of real fun and laughs I feel that Chickie is the best thing I have done.

The remarkable work of Dorothy Mackaill alone would lead me to say that. But when you stop to consider that we have a cast containing such actors and actresses as Hobart Bosworth, John Bowers, Gladys Brockwell, Myrtle Stedman and many others of ability you can readily see why I enthuse. And then the story itself is a thriller.

A poor girl who is barely making a living as a typist has ambitions to marry a millionaire. She meets him. She goes to his home to dine. She mixes with the wealthy men and their feminine playthings at their week-end parties.

She sees life as these people live it. She is tempted. She falls, and then—when the world has fallen away from her and there seems to be nothing ahead but disgrace, despair and an endless struggle—well, the picture must be seen before you realize what a sweeping, soul-stirring picture it is.

The thread of an argument often implies that the whole thing is merely a yarn.

Story-Sermon at Central Baptist

"Could Jesus Succeed in Business, Politics or Industry To-day?" will be the theme of the story-sermon at the Central Baptist church Sunday evening. This will be given by Rev. J Harlow Graham of Trinity Methodist church. "The city men's Bible class is just beginning the new course on "Jesus' Way of Living," prepared by the University of Chicago. The service on Sunday night is in preparation for this new course and it promises to be one of unusual interest not only to the men but to all who can attend. The public is cordially invited.

Palace Theatre

"You'll see a great show, one of the best vaudeville bills we have had up to date, with a Paramount picture and an 11-piece symphony orchestra—all at the Palace popular prices." This is the assurance of Manager E. L. McEvoy, in the presentation of his show the last half of the week.

Horlick and the Sarampa Sisters open the show with a whirlwind acrobatic dance reveue. They are a trio sure to please.

Ashley and Shipman, two clever artists, with beautiful scenes and costumes, give a pleasing interpretation of the dances old vs. new, and singing old vs. new.

And then comes Grant Kimball, with a voice you'll never forget. Kimball and Gerald Griffin would have sometime fighting it out for honors. Kimball, however, has a pleasing personality, and his tenor voice strikes home to one's heart. An act which should not be missed.

Will Hr. Woods & Co., with a company of five—all girls—a comedy skit you'll bowl at. Everything up to the minute all action, dancing, singing, beautiful costumes, scenery, lighting effects, each an artist and it is up to the theatregoers for the rest.

To complete the perfect bill is the Paramount picture, In the Name of Love, with Wallace Beery, Ricardo Cortez, Raymond Hatton, Gretta Nissen, supported by an all star cast.

Palace Theatre

Edythe Chapman, popularly known as "the little mother of screen stars, has another characteristic role in Howard Higgin's production for Paramount, "In the Name of Love, coming to the Rialto on Sunday.

This time she enacts the role of proud parent to Ricardo Cortez. Incidentally, this is the first time Cortez has been a screen mother.

Miss Chapman one of the real veterans of the silver sheet, has mothered more than two score of film celebrities, including Gloria Swanson, Bebe Daniels, Thomas Meighan and Richard Dix. She loves to tell of the time she played mother to Theodore Roberts.

"In the Name of Love" is notable for the excellence and quality of its cast. Greta Nissen, the gloriously beautiful Norse girl, for whom wonderful cinema achievements are predicted plays the leading feminine role opposite Cortez. Other prominent featured players are Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton.

Sunday Night at the Broadway

Two great features are scheduled for the Broadway theatre Sunday night, making a show of fifteen reels all for 25c.

The main feature is "The Torrent" and read what the author says:

A play of mine, "The Storm" has entertained millions. Encouraged by its success, I have written "The Torrent,"—a criticism of the uxury and extravagance of modern city life and a plea for the return to the simple standards of the wilderness. I hink The Torrent is even more important than my former contribution to the screen, and am interested in knowing if the pubic agrees with me.

If you are out of sympathy with the frenzied jazz age now prevailing in America, I wish you would visit the Broadway theatre during the coming week and see "The Torrent," with a real star cast including Gertrude Astor, Ora Carew, Ashley Cooper Frank Elliott, Billy Franey, Charles K. French, William Fairbanks, Eddie Gribbon, June Elvidge, Richard Hatton, Robert McKim, Joseph Kilgour Otto Lederer, Fontaine LaRue, James Mason, Margaret Cullington, George Ovey, Lewis Sargent, and Maxfield Stanley. Sincerely yours, Langdon McCormick.

The second feature is with Buffalo Bill Jr., in Fast and Fearless packed with pep and punches. Besides these two features a comedy, Kinograms and augmented orchestra, under the able leadership of Frank Benson will play real concert music through the entire show. Monday night is Country Store night.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

The week in Norwich fifty years ago was a rather quiet one from a news standpoint. Oliver H. Reynolds, large horse and hack owner, had just completed building what was then one of the finest livery stables in the state, at the corner of Bath and Chestnut streets. The annual fall inspection of the fire department took place at Union square. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Bulletin of October, 1875, are as follows:

Monday, Oct. 11, 1875—The annual fall inspection of the fire department took place Saturday, being for the second time in several years, only that the customary parade and display being abandoned. The hose carts, steamers and the hook and ladder company reported at Union square, no alarm being given to test the rapidity of their movements. A large crowd was on the square all afternoon.

The Norwich Caledonian society held the first of their weekly literary and musical entertainments at Owaneco hall, Saturday evening, under the presidency of James Gilmour, the chief of the society. A programme, consisting of reading selections and original paper on Duty and Influence and the singing of sons was gone through with much acceptance and credit.

The funeral of Mrs. John T. Clark took place Saturday afternoon from the residence of her aunt, Mrs. John Mitchell of Thamesville. The attendance was very large and the floral offerings profuse. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Gilsy of Christ church.

Tuesday, Oct. 12, 1875—One of the finest livery stables in the state, if not in New England, has just been built by Oliver H. Reynolds, who for many years has been the largest horse and hack owner in the city. The building, which is on the corner of Bath and Chestnut streets, is of brick with a slate roof and a handsomely ornamented front. It covers an area measuring 46 by 87 feet and is 42 feet high from the basement floor to the roof. The stable is in the basement which is entered from a private way from the rear and also from the floor above. It has stalls for 31 horses, exclusive of box and ground stalls.

The Shetucket steamer which proved to have met with an accident at the inspection Saturday, was tested on Union square again yesterday afternoon and work admirably. The trouble was with he check nuts on the valve.

The old barn at the corner of High and West Main streets, on the West Side, which has been a landmark for many years, was torn down yesterday. Russell Rathbone proposes to build a large stable on its site.

Wednesday, Oct. 13, 1875—There will be no more macadamizing on Washington street, this fall, as the street commissioner is still engaged on the Greeneville road, where it is thought repairs and improvements are more required.

Amos E. Cobb, the popular superintendent of the Bacon Arms company was presented yesterday noon by the employes of the works with a very handsome silver tea set. J. W. Williams presented it in a neat speech and Mr. Cobb replied appropriately. The gift was especially appreciated as the day was Mr. Cobb's birthday.

Mr. Cook the engineer of the Norwich & Worcester road being sick, Charles A. Allen of Worcester has been appointed to take charge of the erection of the new bridge over the Shetucket and the remaining work upon the tunnel.

Thursday, Oct. 14, 1875—In many inland places oysters are quoted at 25 cents a quart which makes it appear rather strange that 40 cents or more should be asked for them here where they are nourished and cultivated.

A large company gathered in Christ church yesterday afternoon, the occasion being the marriage of Miss Marietta Gilbert, of this city and Gideon Wells of Springfield, Mass. The bride was gowned in a traveling dress, as the wedding was was intended to be a very quiet one but the loss to Norwich of a charming and accomplished lady quite filled the church with her many friends. The ushers were Dr. Kinney and Mr. Carew.

Sidney Turner, formerly of this city, and at present residing in Baltimore, has purchased on private terms, the elegant residence of Gurdon A. Jones, Jr., on Sachem street. He will shortly remove to this city and make it his permanent residence.

Friday, Oct. 15, 1875—Weddings seem not to come singly and in these golden autumn days they certainly cannot be pronounced unseasonable events. Yesterday Norwich gave away another of her gifted daughters—Miss Estelle H. Martin. Favorably known to almost all our churches, through her assistance in their service of song, she has made for herself a creditable record. The marriage service was performed by the Rev. Mr. Dana.

The following note is rather a curious specimen of spelling and punctuation. It was received by a firm in the city yesterday:

Oct. 4, 1875.

I wish you would send me a 25 lib bunch of norway nail rods to plainfield send them weadnesday if you can I was calculating to come down and setle up with you the last of september but Mr. —— the over seer to wauregan was not up to his promis in paying me he come and put me off til the midle or last of October dont be scat I have bin sum but I have sum incouragement now but money is as scurs as breth for a ded

The Races Yesterday—The fine weather yesterday drew a larger crowd to the fair ground than on the day before, principally of horsemen and few ladies. The trotting in the two classes on the programme was remarkably good and the best time ever recorded on the track, it is said, was made in the second heat in the open to all classes. The time was 2.36.

Saturday, Oct. 16, 1875—Mrs. Margaret Farrell charged with misprison of fenony, in the Norwich town murder case, was brought before the city court yesterday. Through her counsel, Mr. Shields, she waived an examination and was committed to answer to the superior court in default of thousand dollar bonds. The change on which she is held means simply, in ordinary phraseology, concealing the crime.

Miss Helen LeDite Potter presents the second entertainment of the Winter Nights at Breed hall next Wednesday evening. The entertainment is original in its character and in many respects entirely new to the Norwich public.

The exhibition of autotypes at Ripley's closes today as it to open in Hartford next week. A large number of our art loving citizens have imposed the opportunity to view this collection which is exceedingly fascinating to all lovers of beautiful things.

UNCASVILLE

Sunday afternoon, old home day is to be observed at the Montville Center Congregational church. If stormy it will be held October 25.

In the Kindergarten of the Palmer Memorial school the following pupils were perfect in attendance for September: John Coffey, Michael Koppo, Roderick Lawless, Albert Paradise, Conrada Allen, Viola Gardner, Emma Millifski, Irene Pachiado, Alice Stankowich and Frances Szahna.

Just what the doctor orders,
As Dieticians they are enthusiastic over its easy digestibility and its delicate texture.
Yet seldom is such healthful food so appetizing. Nothing but the hearts of wheat. Concealed in its creamy smoothness is a natural grain flavor that makes this cereal an ever-welcome favorite the year round.

POETRY

In Ether Spaces

Somewhere in space there is a realm where lingers
Each word that ever fell from the lips of man,
All music stirred to life by touch of fingers,
All sounds since time began.

Rumble of quaking earth and plains upturning
Creation morn: the sullen beat of rain,
The coo of dove with olive-leaf returning,
The stir of life again.

A child's soft treble in the temple, heeded
By doctors who about Him listening drew;
"Father, forgive them," on dark Calvary pleaded,
They know not what they do."

The songs are there which echoed through dim ages.
And chants of kneeling priests at pagan shrines,
The speech of prophets writ on history's pages
In God-directed lines.
There dormant dwells the roar of battle royal,
The clash of arms amid war's furnace flame,
Victorious cries of warriors brave and loyal,
A people's loud acclaim;

With words that gladdened hearts of earliest lovers,
And curses since night's robes trailed Eden's sky,
While vague as half-remembered dreams there hovers
Each mother's lullaby.

O sounds afar in ether spaces dwelling,
In mighty minstrelsy awake! Unite
In chords the story of the cons telling
Since stars first gemmed the night.
—Meredith Nicholson.

Sunset Horns

The horns of sunset sound
Over a sapphire sea.
As beauty draws her veil
Tremulously.

A russet overglow
Is tinged with mystic hues,
Of purples, grays, old rose,
And pastel blues.

As evening's jeweled lights
Appear upon night's dome,
A dilatory crane,
Low, pinions home.

The moon lifts high her lamp
And many a palm-fringed isle
Basks in the silvery light
Of Beauty's smile.

The horns of sunset die
Over a sapphire sea,
And beauty guards the night
Triumphantly.
—Franklin N. Wood in Boston Transcript.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

MOOSE

Happiness is manifest in the children one sees in the class rooms, cottages, shops and playgrounds here at this Loyal Order of Moose city of childhood where the children go to school forty-eight weeks of the year. There is no lack of recreation of every sort—movies, plays, games, parties, trips to fairs, grand opera, and other places of amusement beyond the limits of this estate of 1023 acres and swimming, camping, skating, all water sports and all other adventures of wholesome youth. Mooseheart boys even indulge in that passion no longer capable of being gratified by most city born youths—the building and fixing up of a shack according to one's own tastes. In short, life is far from being a bore at Mooseheart.

Matthew P. Adams, the bachelor superintendent of Mooseheart, in praising his school system of 48 weeks the year, says, "We have never had to take a child out of school for nervous disorders here at Mooseheart in the 12 years we have been conducting the all-year school. Teachers, too, "he added, "maintain good health on the all-year system."

Communities contemplating the all-year school are warned, however, that this is not a speeding-up system when rightly operated.

"The all-year school should never be adopted as an economy measure nor as a means of getting the children through school younger," says Mr. Adams. "We find that it costs a little more than the short-term school and we would consider it advantageous to the children to speed them up so as to have complete the present curriculum of the elementary or high school grades at an earlier age."

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

The regular meeting of Richard E. Hourigan Post 594 was held at their rooms on Main street on Tuesday evening, Oct. 13th. Commander Leo Jacques presiding. There was a large attendance and much business transacted. The various committees reported: The house committee shows a progressing report since the opening of the new veterans rooms; also many new members have been added to the roll in the past month. The report of the relief committee shows that the sick and needy veterans and their families are being cared for. The entertainment committee are making good headway in keeping up the social spirit of the post. They are already planning another big social night which will be in the near future.

Chairman Hull of the amusement committee is busy enrolling names of members for a bowling team for the post and has already announced a pinochle tournament ofr the coming winter months. The post is expecting a visit from the department officers at the next regular meeting Oct. 27th at which time a smoker will take place. The following members were appointed on the Americanization committee: Comrades. Albert J. Turner, Ord Lesemann and Lee Jacques. These names will be sent into national headquarters.

The members of the post were called to stand in silent prayer by Post Chaplain A. J. Turner to pay silent prayer to those men who lost their lives recently on the submarine S-51 also those of the ill fated Shenandoah. It has been learned recently that 12 members of the later, were members of the V. F. W. The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock p. m.

Grotto

Nemrod Grotto is making great plans for its ceremonial next Monday evening and as an unusual feature will be visited by Clinton Nicholas Parker, a representative of the Grand Monarch, who will be here to inspect the work.

The ceremonial programme is to be gin at 6 in the evening with a business meeting at Grotto hall. At 6.30 the Prophets and the candidates will leave the hall for the Community house on Church street, where supper will be served. After supper the members will return to Grotto hall and the ceremonial in full form will begin at 8 o'clock. This part of the exercises will be over by 9.45 when a vaudeville programme will be put on for the entertainment.

AGREES WITH ANDIETTA

Dear Corner Friends: I would like to say to Andietta that her letter about visitors to farms was right to the point. I could say amen to every word. I too have company that do not respect our rights, pick up the best apples, bite into them and then throw them on the ground. Many times I have wanted some to cook but could not find a sound one under the tree. Children think they have the right to pick up as many as they wish without asking and waste them.

Roberta: Was very glad to see you. Hope you can come again. Yes we are sorry to have Primrose move out of our neighborhood. I could run over there once in a while. She has moved into the house we lived in for seven years.

THE MEETING AT BUCKINGHAM MEMORIAL

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Members of the Corner met at Buckingham Memorial Oct. 7 with a good attendance. Snowflake proved equal to the occasion. With her helpers Gusta, Ducky, and others, served a fine dinner. Beans and pies were in the majority. Sometimes salads lead; then again cake is ahead. Watermelon, provided by a guest, won the favor of all, as did the donor's speech. Another guest entertained by reading. Elva, Dahlia and others gave readings. Pa in behalf of Sedgwick Post welcomed all to the hall also read some laws and bylaws for the benefit of old members and new ones. All agreed in saying we had a good time, with three cheers for good old Buckingham. Alta read the report of our last meeting which was satisfactory to all.

Ruth and Plain Jane are to be hostesses at our next meeting.

Way down the line on a winding road through the woods (where the trees are clothed in their fall suits of beautiful foliage) stands a little old fashioned cottage with quaint dormer windows. Clematis grows on a trellis over the front door that has little odd squares, windows at the top and an old fashioned brass knocker, that echoes loud and long when one uses it. The most wonderful fire places built of stone, that look as if they would last for ages are on the inside of this little cottage. There is a wooden latch on the door that leads to the upstairs rooms with the lach string on. When it is on the inside one can not go in. I know the meaning now of when the latch string is out all are welcome. An old fashioned desk and mirror that are just fitted for the places they occupy are in we find there.

Some time little children must have played in the yard under the big trees that stand there. Think the little house must miss their glad voices singing and the noise of their little feet running in and out of the now silent rooms. Know the little house is lonely when the people that go there for the week end go away. We will pull the shades down, bank the fire, blow out the candles, and bid the lonely little cottage. Good night.

Best wishes for the Social Corner.

WURDY BELLE.

BUSY WITH HOUSEHOLD DUTIES

Kind Editor and Social Corner Friends: I want to thank the kind editor for my social corner pin. Should have written before but have been kept very busy with canning and housecleaning and caring for my little baby boy and others who go to school. Haven't we had lovely fall weather? Was sorry to hear Crimson Rambler had been ill but hope she will soon be well again for it is so hard to be sick, when one has so many cares of the home to attend to.

Uncle Sam's Daughter: Shall keep the table of measurements you sent in to the Corner for they are just what I oft times wanted to use as I have a large family and cook and can a lot every year.

J. E. T.: Did you arrive home safely after going to Spring. Hope you did. L. T. H. and I and my husband were in a hurry that day or we would have called on you and your next neighbors. I think your suggestion would be fine and something everybody would enjoy, as it would be something new and interesting.

I enjoyed reading Strawberry's poem as it is very true. One may say things in haste and repent at leisure. I have a poem given me by Rev. Mrs. Miller entitled The Don't You Worry Town which I think is very nice and will send it to Social Corner. Will close, or I fear this will not find its way to the Social Corner page. All good wishes to the Social Corner friends and sympathy to the sick and those who have lost their loved ones. If I knew addresses of sisters in hospitals would send them a card.

COLD AND STORMY IN MAINE

Dear Social Corner Friends: I love to get addresses of sisters who are shutins, so I can send them a card, or letter, or paper—something so they will know they are not forgotten.

When a day rolls around and I do not receive one or more letters, I feel as though I was forgotten. But in my heart I know I am not.

Well we are having a gale tonight. It snowed today (10th) but melted as soon as it reached the ground and since then it has rained quite hard. Wind is blowing from northwest, 75 miles an hour, and quite cold. There wont be any apples left on the trees and they were not half picked.

Never before did I know of such weather so early in the season.

But we must have our Indian summer yet! I see the Cloud Digger was right when he said we would have an early fall. Some how I dread the cold but hope we will have plenty of rain so as to have less snow.

Sunday was a most beautiful day and how welcome the sunshine is.

The relatives of Anna Mell, have my sympathy. How uncertain is life, when I read of so many of my acquaintances passing on.

Calla Lily: Received your card o. k. Will answer later. Read the Nautilus magazine but failed to see the poetry mentioned.

Thanks R. D. for poetry; pretty good.

Polly Peppermint: Trust this finds you well, as well as busy.

Best wishes to H. and K. Would love to have you write.

Regards to everybody from

WANTED TO GO TO WILLIMANTIC

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: This has been a fine day so will ask how are all the dear sisters. I hope all the sick are getting along fine. Oh how I wanted to go to Willimantic to Club No. 1's meeting. I had no one to go with and I did not dare to go alone, as I can't see as good as I did a month ago. I have another cataract on my right eye. The left eye is not strong enough for me to go around much all alone, so of course I had to stay at home. But I hope I can go to the next meeting. I went to the I. O. O. F. hall to our meeting and had a nice time. They have got a fine hall with plenty of room and everything was social and nice.

Of course as far as I know I think the I. O. O. F. hall is the largest and of course there's more room for a large crowd.

Jennie: Thanks for the cake recipe. Hope you are well. Hope to meet you again.

Foxglove: Did you get my letter? Was sorry I could not get to Willimantic.

Dahlia: Received your postal this morning. Sure I will keep the package for you.

Let's get Acquainted

If I knew you and you knew me,
'Tis seldom we would disagree.
But, never having yet clasped hands.
Both often fail to understand.
That each intends to do what's right
And treat each other honor bright.
How little to complain there'd be
If I knew you and you knew me!

Then let no doubting thought abide
Of firm good faith on either side;
Confidence to each other give.
Living ourselves, let others live;
But any time you come this way
That you will call we hope and pray;
Then face to face we each shall see,
And I'll know you and you'll know me.

With best wishes for the Corner.

CATNIP.

PLEASED WITH REMEMBRANCES

Dear Social Corner Friends: I must thank all who remembered my birthday with cards and gifts. Elka Jane, Chocktate, Necia, True Blue, Robin, White Dawn, Nannie Lue, Catnip, Hope. There was a card without a name but I think it was from Practical Polly. Am I right? If I have not mentioned some others please excuse me and take the will for the deed, for there has been so much to do just about the same time that I may have forgotten. Just now one more has come to me. Last, but not least, Black-Eyed Susie.

Necia: We did have a very pleasant time at our last meeting, Oct. 7 at Odd Fellows hall. It was so roomy and nice. I was very sorry to hear of Anna Mell's death.

Best wishes.

SCOTTIE.

RECIPES TO TRY

Dear Cornerites: Try these recipes and let me know what results you have:

Diced Potato: 1 pint cooked potatoes diced, 2 onions, 1-4 teaspoon salt, a pinch of pepper, 2 slices of bacon. Fry bacon, then fry onion, add potato and fry with medium fire. Season potatoes with salt, pepper and a little paprika or celery salt.

Irish Potato, (Boston style): 3 1-2 cups riced potato (hot), 2 teaspoons of onion juice, 2 pimentos finely chopped, 3 teaspoons mashed butter, 2 1-2 tablespoons of hot top milk, pepper and salt to taste. Mix well together and bake until creamy.

Fried Apples: Wipe off and core 6 large MacIntosh apples. Slice them into half inch thick slices, sprinkle with granulated sugar, let stand about 1 hour, then dip in flour and fry in bacon fat until a nice golden brown on both sides. Remove them with a perforated spoon, then lay them on a hot platter and sprinkle with brown sugar. Do not peel apple. The above recipe is original.

Corn Bread: 1 cup flour, 1-3 cup of corn meal, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1-2 pint sour milk, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 tablespoon butter. Beat the whole until smooth and bake 20 minutes.

Corn Bread No. 2: 1 1-2 cup flour sifted three times, 2-3 teasup corn meal, 1-2 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup sour milk, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter mashed.

Now separate eggs and stir the sugar up with them, also butter, then add milk and mix again. Sift dry ingredients together. Stir until smooth, then bake in hot oven.

My Drop Biscuit: 2 cups flour, 3 tablespoons butter (melted), 1 cup sour milk, 1-4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 baking powder, 1 tablspoon sugar.

Stir up sugar and butter, then pour in milk and add flour, baking powder and soda.

Transparent Steel

A new method of making sheets of metal of unprecedented thinness, invented by Dr. Karl Mueller of the Physical Technical Institute of Berlin, seems likely to prove of considerable industrial as well as scientific importance. He has succeeded in producing sheets of steel so thin that they are as transparent as the clearest glass. The test plates used to determine the transparency of optical flasks, and ruled with line one twenty-five hundredth of an inch apart, were photographed through such a metal sheet, and when enlarged to 400 diameters the scale lines showed distinctively without any distortion. This absence of aberation proves that the structure of the film is perfectly even and equal in all directions. The metal sheets are so thin that atoms will pass through without impediment. Alpha rays from radium, that consist of streams of the stripped atoms of helium, and are completely blocked by a sheet of paper, are not perceptibly weakened in passing through such metal sheets. It is calculated from the specific gravity of the metal that in these sheets there are not more than 30 layers of atoms in thickness. Yet the sheet of metal is so strong that when fastened in a frame it may be bent out by blowing on it to a sixteenth of an inch without rupture.

Dr. Mueller makes these sheets by depositing an extremely fine film of the metal on a smooth surface by means of the electric current and afterward separating the film from the foundation on which it was fixed.

Many applications have already been made by scientists and inventors to secure these transparent metal sheets for experimental purposes. They seem likely to serve as semi-permeable membranes for the separation of gases. They may greatly advance the progress of telephotography and the television. They also seem likely to prove serviceable in metallurgical research, and in the making of galvonometers, radio receivers and apparatus for measuring the action of the heart.

SPECIAL TRAINS FOR SATURDAY FOOTBALL CROWD

Estimates that range all the way from 65,000 to 73,000 have been made for the attendance at Yale-Pennsylvania football game at New Haven this Saturday, but how many of this nebulous number will travel by rail is making a problem for the New Haven railroad management.

Whatever the number may be, it is reckoned that most of the extra travel will be from New York, though a big crowd is expected to travel from Philadelphia. The New Haven and Pennsylvania roads have arranged jointly for nine special football trains from Philadelphia right through to New Haven via the Hell Gate bridge route.

Incidentally the added travel because of this game will result in a record passenger train movement via the Hell Gate bridge. There are at the present time ten regular trains using this route, and with nine specials in each direction there will be a total of 28 passenger trains using the Hell Gate bridge on October 17.

Football special will also be ready to leave Grand Central Terminal, New York, every fifteen minutes, beginning at 8:30 a. m. and continuing until about 11 o'clock.

A number of special parties having private cars are also being taken care of, these cars being attached to regular trains. Four of these are from Philadelphia, one from Trenton, one from Warren, Pa., and another from New York.

Good Corn Breeders

Indians were good corn breeders. Varieties grown by them when the white man first came are still being grown in New England, says Nature Magazine, and are fully as productive as other varieties maturing in the same time.

Barbaric Destruction

The Saracens were enabled to heat water for their baths for a period of six months with the 700,000 volumes they took from the great library of Alexandria, Egypt, by Caliph Omar's orders in 640 A. D.

Why isn't a boil on the back of your neck a case of out of sight but still in mind?

MARKET WAS ACTIVE

NEW YORK, Oct. 16.—(By the Associated Press.)—A frenzied outburst of buying in the motor shares, several of which were run up 5 to 11 points to the highest prices ever recorded, infused new strength in today's stock market and sent it skyrocketing again after it had shown signs of wobbling under an avalanche of selling orders around midday. Total sales, which fell just short of two and three quarter million shares, broke all records since the famous "three million" share day in December, 1916.

The sensational advance of the motor shares was accompanied by unconfirmed rumors of open market buying for control, special dividend distributions and capital stock splitups. In point of activity, General motors was the leader, running up nearly six points to a new peak at 132 1-2 on total sales exceeding 135,000 shares. Hudson, however, scored the most spectacular gain by soaring 11 points to a new top at 104, the major part of the advance being registered in the last 30 minutes of trading. Yellow truck, now a General motors subsidiary was run up seven points to 35 and Fisher body climbed nearly six points to a new top at 118 1-4. Studebaker, Hodge brothers common and preferred and Continental motors also exceeded their previous 1925 maximum quotations.

The market opened fairly strong with numerous one to two point gains registered in the initial transaction. Although sporadic profit taking and bear selling was apparent from the start, the market moved steadily forward until around midday. The marking up of the renewal rate on call money to 5 1-2 per cent, was followed by a wave of short selling by professional traders which reached its maximum intensity in the early afternoon when a few specialties had been hammered down 4 to 9 points below their earlier highs and scores of others had yielded a point or more.

The subsequent lowering of the call money rate to 4 1-2 per cent and the revival of activity and strength in United States steel common and General motors steadied the list, and eventually turned the course of prices upward again. The late advance was by no means uniform, several issues, notably Kinney and company, United Cigar stores, American agricultural chemical preferred, New York canners and International paper showing signs of acute weakness. Steel continued to gather strength, moving up nearly 3 points to 127 1-2, the highest price since last spring, on total transactions, exceeding 280,000 shares.

Among the many issues to break through to new top prices were Cerro de Pasco, Du Pont, Allis Chalmers, American brake shoe, National Cloak and suit, Home sound, United drug, Loew's Inc. ox film and Mathieson alkali. S. S. Kresge, which established a record high of 800 the other day, showed an overnight loss of 26 points at 740 on a few sales. A sharp break also took place in McCrory stores B, which fell from 139 3-4 to 115 and then rallied to 118 for a net loss of 19 1-2 points on the day.

Call money renewed at 5 1-2 per cent, dropped to 5 and then to 4 1-2 in reflection of the return flow of funds sent to the interior to meet October 15 requirements. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges failed to make any appreciable response to the signing of the Locarno security pact. Demand sterling yielded slightly to $4.83 11-16, and French francs dropped to 4.42 1-2 cents and then rallied to 4.47 1-3 cents on reported French government buying. Italian lire held firm above 4.00 cents with indications that Italian government support had temporarily "pegged" the rate around that figure. Danish and Norwegian kroner ruled around 20.35 and 20.05 cents overnight gains of 10 and 25 points, respectively.

Pearson of Bath, Me., today communicated with the New London police, requesting assistance in locating his daughter, Alberta Louise Pearson, 16, who ran away from home last Wednesday and who, it is believed, came to this city in an endeavor to reach New York. Pearson stated that when the girl left Bath she was without funds. Pearson also stated that the girl might be found at 370 Main street, where she was located on the 6th inst., and taken back home by her father, or at 130 Willetts avenue, or at the home of a sailor, or possibly in Groton.

ULLMAYER FAMILY TROUBLES AIRED IN NEW LONDON CITY COURT FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 16—The love nest in which have resided John Ullmayer, an employe of the Ship and Engine company and his wife has been broken up—wrecked beyond repair. Their trouble will get into the divorce court eventually where an effort may be made to patch it up, but the chance that this method will succeed is very slim. Mr. and Mrs. Ullmayer met in the court for the first time in several weeks. Before that they had not faced each other in many months. The wife showed a wilful and determined disposition and the student of facial expression was convinced that he manifested a desire to be rid of a woman for whom he once had measureless affection. Mrs. Ullmayer accused him of being mean to her, of failing to keep an agreement that he made before attorneys representing him and her, and of keeping from her money to which she was entitled.

Ullmayer said his wife had been a forger and was arrested for the offense when she left him and went south to Jacksonville. He said he received a telegram from his wife in that city, but he did not place reliance upon its contents and sought information that he obtained from the chief of police there and from the probation officer, which disclosed to him the situation he had stated existed. Mrs. Ullmayer contradicted him—not in stating that she was not accused and arrested as alleged, but she said the arrest was a mistake and that she was exonerated. A dramatic situation developed when, on the witness stand after he had interrogated his wife at length, Ullmayer turned and asked her, "Will you come and live with me again?" Mrs. Ullmayer replied that she would do that. Then Ullmayer snapped out, "You have a fat chance!" This brought a rebuke from the court, but that did not feaze Ullmayer for he smiled in derision as his eyes caught those of his wife.

There was hatred and repulsion in all the various phases of the case as it was presented. Neither party was represented by attorney. It happened that Judge Prince has advised the woman and that Prosecutor Hollandersky had given counsel to the husband so that both were disqualified from serving in the case in the police court. Assistant Judge Crandall was on the bench and Clayton B. Smith presented the case for the state. The charge is the simple non-support complaint and allege that since the 20th of February last Ullmayer had wilfully neglected and refused to support his lawful wife and their child, John Ullmayer, Jr., now five years old.

Mrs. Ullmayer as a witness hurled the first accusation, reciting that she married Ullmayer in December 1909, in Shelbyville, Ind. She is a comely woman with sparkling eyes and cleancut lips. As Rena Ullmayer she came here the following May and lived with her husband till 1923. They resided in Groton, on High street, for a considerable time but differences arose and it was agreed that the furniture should be sold. He said he gave her permission to sell their household goods while she declared that what they did not need should be disposed of. When the couple came to New London to live with Mrs. Brax. Finally Ullmayer left his wife and took up his residence in Blinman street. In February last Mrs. Ullmayer left here and went to the south when she telegraphed to her husband that she had hurt herself and that she was to be admitted to a hospital and needed financial assistance. This was when Ullmayer alleged the arrest for forgery took place. Mrs. Ullmayer came back two weeks ago today and then the complaint for non-support was made.

Ullmayer, after his wife had stated her side of the trouble, asked for the privilege of questioning her on the witness stand, and that was accorded him. He approached the witness and hurled questions at her, also asked her questions which the court would not give him the privilege of asking. He finally brought out the forgery accusation, but the wife was quite composed and shot shafts of contempt and derision from her piercing eyes. She said the arrest was a mistake and declared that she had evidence to substantiate what she claimed. Mr. Ullmayer declared that he had furnished a home for his wife and child at an expense of $4,000 and that he had told her that she might have it all; he wanted the child and that was his purpose now. He said he would take the child and provide well for him, but he would not give a dollar for his wife's support. He asked her point blank, "Who is paying for your support at the Crocker house?" He didn't get a response to that inquiry. It was revealed that Mrs. Ullmayer was anticipating accouchment in a few days, any day, she said. Ullmayer snapped out that he would not pay for any expense Mrs. Ullmayer might incur, as he was not the father of any child she may give birth to. He asked her if she did not admit adultery, but she denied that, with a show of indignation.

The case dragged along through accusations and allegations of the sort referred to and finally the court explained the situation and the law. It was to the effect that there was only one course open to the court and that was to find Ullmayer guilty, for he must support his wife until such time as the marital relations shall be severed by due process of law. Ullmayer was ordered to pay his wife $12 a week for a period of six months after he declared that his pay was $36 weekly. He was ordered to furnish a bond of $350 or go to jail. He appealed to the common pleas court and gave a bond of that amount for appearance there.

Michael J. Doyle complained to the police this forenoon that his garage, Jefferson avenue, which houses several trucks, was entered by thieves last night and that a quantity of gasoline and oil was stolen. Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith found that the lock on the front entrance was forced and that the amount of gasoline and fuel taken was not great. The officers also found on the ground near the entrance the operator's license and registration certificate of Boleslaw Oriuski, 218 Huntington street, which were stolen from Oriuski's automobile while it was parked at the plant of the Bloom Silk company plant, Garfield avenue, several days ago. It is believed by the police that the thief, who ransacked Oriuski's car is also the garage thief and that he dropped the license and registration certificate while at work on the garage lock.

Frank Kontney, motor machinist, first class, United States Coast Guard service, reported to the police this evening that he went to a Chinese laundry, 62 Golden street, and paid for a package of laundry. When he arrived at the sailors' locker room in Green street, a block away from the laundry, he discovered that he had lost his pocketbook containing $30 and two railroad tickets for New York. He returned to the laundry, but did not find his property, it being the presumption that Kontney lost the pocketbook on either Green or Golden streets and that it was found by some pedestrian.

William Hendell, 254 Huntington St. proprietor of a small store corner of Main and Shapley street, was attacked last night by one of three sailors, who attempted to steal his commercial automobile and who were discovered by Hendel when the sailors were attempting to start the engine. Hendel was in his place of business late and hearing some one at his automobile he went to the front entrance of the store and detected the sailors trying to operate the car. Hendel drove them away, but before one of the gang departed, he struck Hendel several blows about the face and head. A south bound trolley car came along and Hendel leaped to the step, escaping from the sailor and continuing on the car through Main street, until he met Patrolman Patrick Sheehan, with whom he lodged complaint against the sailor, who had attacked him. Officer Sheehan accompanied Hendel back to the latter's place of business, but when they arrived there the sailors had disappeared.

An automobile, owned by the Connecticut Power company, and driven by Gurdon Williams, 316 Huntington street, in passing through Howard street late this afternoon knocked down Betty Hume, a girl about 7, when the child ran from the sidewalk in an attempt to cross the street. The girl ran against the rear mudguard and was knocked down, but did not sustain injuries more serious than bruises which was determined after the child had been taken to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hume, 30 Howard street.

Frank Greenman, a laborer, residing at 33 Winthrop street, who has a long police court record for charges of intoxication and breach of the peace, was taken into custody early this evening charged with violation of his parole. He was locked up pending a hearing in the police court tomorrow morning.

Greenman was taken into custody Sept. 2 charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He is married and has several little children and when presented in court the following day, he was given a suspended sentence of ten days in jail, that he might be able to continue at his work so his wife and family would not be deprived of his support, as they would be if he was committed to jail. Late this afternoon Greenman appeared at his home much the worse for drink, so much so that he created such a disturbance that complaint was made to the police. Patrolman Frank Philopena and Henry Hick went to the Greenman house where they found the parole violator and quickly lodged him in a cell at the police station. For some time after being locked up Greenman was extremely noisy, banging on the sides of the cell.

Spiros N. Ganas, proprietor of the Coney Island restaurant, 58 Bank street, complained to the police this evening that he had been robbed of his watch, which he had left on a shelf in one of the store rooms. The watch was a 19-jewel timepiece, and was given to Ganas a short time prior to the death of his father, and for that reason he prized the watch highly. Ganas declared that he did not wear the watch at all times, but that he kept it on the stock room shelf. He remembered seeing the timepiece Tuesday, and today he missed it. No ons has access to the stock rooms, except employes of the restaurant and they are compelled to pass through the kitchen to reach the upper part of the building. Ganas stated that a temporary employe finished work Wednesday night and was supposed to put in an appearance Thursday, but failed to return to work. It was that day that Ganas missed the watch.

Four New London young men were taken into custody in Waterford early this morning by Sergeant Clifford Gorgas and Officer Henry Albright, Groton barracks, three of them being charged with intoxication, and the other with breach of the peace. The quartet was brought to New London and locked up for the balance of the night, being released upon furnishing surety on their respective bonds for their appearance in the Waterford town court this afternoon. When the young men were arrdigned they were given nominal fines by Judge Frederick Dimmock, who also administered some sound advice to the accused. The four New Londoners were on the New Haven turnpike about 3 o'clock where they tested their lung power by singing some of the latest song hits. Their musical ability evidently was not appreciated for a resident communicated with the Groton barracks Sergeant Gorgas and Officer Albright arrived at the location of the song-fest a short time later and placed the gang under arrest.

COUNCILOR MAY WANTS LAW TO DEAL WITH JAY-WALKING
(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 16.—The talk in the city council last Monday evening as to the division of the city's business in the purchase of automobiles has brought to light the fact that the patronage has been distributed among four or five dealers when machines other than trucks were purchased. The Ford make of trucks got the lion's share of the latter business because the price was lower and the parts were universal so that they could be renewed at the least loss of time and at the minimum of expense. The trucks purchased have usually been of the small size as that the capacity of truck can be handled readily and is operated for less money than some of the other trucks.

It is supposed that an ordinance that will cover what is known as jaywalking will be introduced at the meeting of the city council next Monday ing. The play was suggested by Councilor May, who met with the membership for the first time Monday, and who is obviously to take an active part in the doings and talking of that body. He raised an interesting question when he proposed the new ordinance, for even competent lawyers hold that the city has no authority to insist that pedestrians shall cross streets at given points. It is held that no court will convict for crossing the streets at other than designated points. It will be admitted as beyond question that compliance with a custom to cross at marked spots will be for the advantage and for the safety of pedestrians. The streets should be marked with the SOS signs on the surface of the streets, the letters meaning to stay on the sidewalks. But every one will be interested to observe what will be done about the adoption of the ordinance. This city is becoming up to date in many things and the endeavor to make the street crossings safer than they have ever been is one way in which progress can be made if the people will take kindly to it.

WILLIAM BURDICK IN JAIL TO WORK OUT FINES AND COSTS
(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 15.—William Burdick, Quaker Hill, Waterford, was before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court late yesterday charged with violation of the automobile law and breach of the peace. On the former charge Burdick was complained against for operating an automobile with Massachusetts registration in Connecticut for a period longer than is allowed by law, 15 days. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs. He admitted driving the car illegally for 32 days. Burdick was unable to pay and was remanded to jail until such time as the fine and costs is paid.

Burdick's charge of breach of the peace developed as a result of his having visited the home of Frank Briggs, also of Quaker Hill, Oct. 2, where he threatened to inflict bodily injury upon Briggs. Burdick denied the allegations, but he was ordered to pay the costs of the court. He was without funds to pay and will have to either raise the two sums imposed as penalties or work them out at the county institution.

APPRAISERS HEAR TESTIMONY ON VALUE OF 20 ACRE FOOTE FARM

The three appraisers named in condemnation proceedings on the Frank J. Foote farm of 20 acres in Montville, Attorney Andrew B. Davies of this city, Dan D. Horne and Ambrose Sullivan, both of Montville, held a hearing here Friday morning in the city court room, reserving decision after hearing the testimony and the arguments in the case. The appraisers and all the parties in interest will visit the property.

Senator Lee Roy Robbins represented the state park and forest commission, which wants the property to add it to the new Shantok Fort park site, and Attorney J. J. Desmond appeared for Mr. Foote.

Two witnesses appeared for the state commission, Albert M. Turner, field secretary, and Walter Filley, a member of the commission. Both testified to the need of having this property for park purposes, but neither placed any value on the land.

Mr. Foote, the owner, testified that he had bought the place for $500, had built a shanty on it and had improved three acres for cultivation. He said he had had chances to sell but is not willing to do it.

Three witnesses, S. Jeffrey Colt, a neighbor, Clarence Sholes, a real estate agent, and Jerome W. House, first selectman of Montville, placed the value at $2,500, and Lincoln D. Rogers, a neighbor, made it $3,000.

In his argument Attorney Robbins claimed that the neighbors were influenced in their valuations by thoughts of what bearing this might have upon their own property, while Attorney Desmond argued that the tract was valuable because it could be developed into building lots which could be sold for $150 each.

The commission has offered $1,000, but Mr. Foote has declared his price is not less than $4,000. The main part of the park site, which is 110 acres has been bought for $14,000 by the commission.

The couple were married June 21, 1921, and the plaintiff alleges that the defendant deserted her on April 15, 1922. She stated that she maintained the home in Hope street for 30 days, hoping that her husband would return and after that she boarded. There were no children by the marriage.

HOW WEBSTER SOLVED ITS SCHOOL PROBLEM.

Webster is a medium sized manufacturing town just fifty miles north from here. A few years ago they had a very acute school problem in Webster. The city schools were overcrowded. Many children attended half session. There was no money in the school treasury for new buildings and something had to be done to relieve the situation.

Just like in Norwich they have a large Polish population. In fact, that is the oldest Polish settlement in New England. For many years the Polish people maintained a parochial school. About 700 to 800 children attended that school. The old frame building has long outlived its usefulness, in fact, it was condemned by the city authorities as unfit for school purposes. The closing of the Polish school would have made the situation still worse. But where there is a will there is a way.

The city officials got together with Rev. A. Cyran, pasor of the Polish congregation in Webster. He was willing to build a new school, providing the city would help him. A community drive was arranged for a new parochial school. The campaign netted over $40,000. A new parochial school was built at a cost of $230,000 and can accommodate over 1,000 pupils. Everybody is satisfied and the city saved its taxpayers many thousands of dollars for school buildings and their maintenance.

The same is true of Norwich, say those who are working on the drive for the new St. Joseph school equipment. The new St. Joseph school will relieve the congestion in several school districts. Not only that, but its social features will be opened to the public and especially to the young people of the neighborhood. That is why every public-spirited citizen of Norwich should help Father Iclek in his drive for $25,000 to complete and adequately furnish the building. The drive will commence the last week in October. The general committee of which Adelard Morin is chairman is working out the details and expect to go over the top and oversubscribe the required amount.

Two candidates were initiated by the New London County Pomona grange at its meeting Thursday with Preston City grange. M. H. Bartlett, master of the Pomona and a member of Pachaug grange presided at the meeting which was called to order at 10 o'clock in the morning. Following the degree work and business dinner was served by the Preston City grange.

After dinner the afternoon session was called to order by the master. State Lecturer Charles E. Wheeler of Storrs was present and addressed the gathering. There was also a double whistling solo, alto and soprano, by State Steward Louis T. Polles, of Southington. The state steward also addressed the meeting. Mrs. George Beckwith of Franklin entertained with the singing of old time melodies and other musical numbers included:

The meeting was well attended and proved interesting and instructive to all who were present.

Detour Sign Placed

A big detour sign to warn motor traffic to take route 3 on the east side of the Thames river rather than the road on the Montville side has been placed at the corner of West Main and Water streets by the state highway department. The detour is advised because of the work now in progress on the highway at Trading Cove hill.

BUT ONE PERSON MISSING FROM STEAMSHIP COMANCHE

Vessel Was Destroyed by Fire Off the Coast of Florida Early Saturday Night—Eight Persons Were Injured, Most of Them During the Transfer of the Passengers to the Texas Oil Tanker Reaper—Many of the Passengers Were Drenched and Were Brought to Jacksonville For Attention—Cause of the Fire Remains a Mystery.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 18. (AP)—All but one of the passengers and crew of the Clyde line steamship Comanche, which was destroyed by fire six and a half miles off Mayport, early last night, had been accounted for shortly after noon today, officials of the line announced.

"The missing man is William Lowsler of Winthrop, Mass., a first class passenger. There are onl ythree now in hospitals. They are Joe Jacobs Raligh, N. J., Adolph Franklin, Hamburg, Germany, and Adolph Bangert, seaman."

Some of the Comanche's passengers were brought in private automobiles to Jacksonville, making the work of checking the list difficult. The check was continued this afternoon with the hope that the two missing persons would be located.

Eight persons were injured, most of them during the transfer of the passengers to the Reaper, a Texas Oil tanker, which proceeded to the assistance of the Comanche. The injured were reported resting easily in Jacksonville hospitals this afternoon.

The origin of the fire remains a mystery. The Comanche left Jacksonville at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon with a passenger list of 73 and a general cargo. She carried a crew of 82 men.

The fire broke out in consignment of rosin in forward hold No. 2 shortly before 7 o'clock. It spred rapidly through the forward holds and the ship sent out SOS calls for assistance soon after the forward deck began to blaze.

The Reaper responded to the call and by 8 o'clock the passengers were being transferred to the Reaper. Twenty minutes after Captain E. E. Curry followed the last load of passengers and his crew over the Comanche's side, the super-structure burst into flames which were visible for miles.

The flames from the forward deck lighted the sea for rescue work, accomplished under difficulties and with a heavy sea running. The pilot boat Meta from Mayport, also went to the Comanche's assistance.

Many of the passengers were drenched and were brought to Jacksonville for attention. The rescue of the passengers was not accomplished without difficulty. One lifeboat filled with passengers was crushed when the bow of the Reaper swung toward the Comanche, and those in the lifeboat were plunged into the water.

Part of those in another lifeboat were precipitated into the water when one end of the boat was lowered too rapidly. Members of the crew displayed coolness and heroism and plunged into the waters after the passengers. It was in the mixup in the water that the two persons unaccounted for were lost, officials said, if they remain unaccounted for. However, Captain Curry and members of the crew expressed the opinion that all of those in the water were rescued.

There was no panic among the passengers nor during the work of rescue with the exception of the two mishaps in which the lifeboats were upset.

The Comanche was abandoned between 8 and 9 o'clock last night, three and a half miles northeast of Whistling buoy and the Reaper brought the passengers to Mayport where the majority of them were taken off and brought to land by the Meta.

Three of the injured, however, were brought to Jacksonville by the Clyde line ship Ozark. The remainder were brought to Jacksonville in a fleet of motor buses and automobiles and cared for in homes and hotels. A number of the passengers of the Comanche came in private automobiles to the city, making the work of checking the list of survivors more difficult.

Two tugboats this afternoon were reported towing the steel hull of the Comanche to Jacksonville. With the exception of the steel hull, which probably be badly warped by the fire, the boat is considered a complete loss. Fire boats were detailed to put out the smouldering fire upon her arrival here.

The flames from the burning vessel were visible from the tops of high buildings in Jacksonville and many motorboats drove to Mayport Beach to view the scene. They were able to discern the work of rescue with the lifeboats and the Meta taking the passengers off the Comanche.

Mayport is a small town at the mouth of the St. Johns river, 25 miles east of here. A number of fishermen ply their trade off the coast at Mayport and pilot boats also make their headquarters here.

DEATH OF MRS. BIDDLE CAUSED BY ALCOHOLISM

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 18—(A. P.)—Post mortem examination of the body of Mrs. Laura Biddle, prominent Philadelphia society matron, and wife of Craig Biddle, wealthy sportsman, led County Autopsy Surgeon A. F. Wagner to announce late today that death was probably due to alcoholism. He said he would not enter that cause officially in records, however, until a chemical analysis of the stomach and vital organs had ben completed.

Mrs. Biddle was found dead in her apartment here yesterday bruises discovered on the body led police to open an investigation which was speeded up when detectives reported they had difficulty gathering any information from occupants and attaches of the apartment house.

In line with the post mortem findings, Deputy District Attorney Harold L. Davis announced that he was told of Dr. Joseph S. Cipes, Mrs. Biddles private physician, that she had partaken largely of intoxicants in the last few years and the findings paralleled the patient's history as he knew it.

Dr. Cipes who examined the body as it was found late yesterday by Sadie and Mary Davis, maids, told the police at that time he believed heart trouble from which Mrs. Biddle had suffered was the cause of death.

Police detectives declared they found two bottles containing what they believed to be liquor, in Mrs. Biddle's apartment yesterday.

Dr. Wagner expressed belief that bruises discovered on the body were caused when she fell or rolled off the bed shortly before she died.

FUSS AT GREEK ORTHODOX CHURCH AT STAMFORD

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 18.—(A. P.)—Threats made by "The Patriots" of the Greek Orthodox church here, that they would break into the church and hold services today were not carried out after conferences with the police. The church was guarded by two policemen last night and police guarded the edifice today.

"The Patriots" followers of Archbishop Alexandros, have been in dispute with "the Royalists" for some time and the matter has found its way into superior court twice, control of the church being the point at issue. "The Royalists" are now in control.

A suggestion was made by the "Patriots" that the "Royalists" hold services early in the morning and the church to be turned over to "The Patriots" for the later services. This suggestion was not accepted by "The Royalists" and "the Patriots" threatened to break their way into the church today. After conferences with the police, however, this plan was abandoned and there was no disturbance today. The usual service was held at 8:30 a. m. this morning by "The Royalists."

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK TRAIN ON NEW HAVEN ROAD

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Oct. 18—An attempt was made to wreck the northbound valley train from New London on the New Haven railroad at Maromas tonight, a large stone having been placed between the rails. The train struck the stone but was not derailed. The passengers were shaken up, but none was injured. The train was held up for a short time while the obstruction was being removed and then continued on to Hartford. It was in charge of Conductor James McCabe of Hartford. The police are investigating.

SEEKING ISSUE FOR THE N. Y. MAYORALTY CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(A. P.)—With less than two weeks remaining before the close of the mayoralty campaign, representatives of the various candidates are searching for an issue over which the population of the metropolis will consent to become excited.

"A five cent fare with a seat—not a strap," "Say it with shovels," "A business man for a business administration," have all proved interesting campaign slogans—the first for the democrats, the other for the republicans—but they seem to have stopped at that. The term "apathy" has been used to indicate the attitude of the general public toward the election.

The only really bright spot in prospect during the coming week for either candidate is what has been announced as a "a real old-fashioned political rally with all the trimmings," scheduled to be held at Tammany Hall on Tuesday night.

Band music, red fire, banners and all the democratic candidates will be on display. The republicans, however, although they have nothing of this nature on the programme, are prepared to put in an entire week of speech-making in all boroughs, ending with a luncheon Saturday at the City club.

Charles Evans Hughes, former secretary of state, will make his only appearance during the campaign in support of the republican candidates at a mass meeting to be held Monday night, October 26, in Mecca Temple, Manhattan. It was announced tonight. He will discuss the campaign issues.

TO CUT RED TAPE IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—(A. P.)—Existing regulations for th econduct of army administration affairs are to be simplified, and yards of red tape wrapped about business procedure in the war department are to be eliminated.

The tape disposal and the simplified regulations are to be brought about by Dwight R. Davis, newly appointed secretary of war, through approval he is to give to recommendations he made while he was assistant secretary. Former Secretary Weeks approved the recommendations of Mr. Davis in principle several months ago, but because of the illness which resulted later in his resignation as head of the department, they were not put into effect.

Under Mr. Davis' plan, a great mass of detail and routine business to which the secretary and assistant secretary have been compelled to devote much time and attention, will be attended to by the various chiefs of branches without reference to them.

Mr. Davis believes this change will permit him and his successor in the assistant secretaryship, Hanford MacNider, to devote more time "to the larger aspects of war department problems."

FATALLY INJURED IN FALL DOWN STAIRS

He died at the Woonsocket hospital shortly before noon. Shortly before the accident the man had complained to a clerk in the hotel that he was not feeling well.

15 Yale Geology Students Injured

Were on Field Expedition in Middletown When Platform Over a Forty Foot Pit Collapsed.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 18. (AP)—Five Yale geology students were seriously injured and ten others were hurt while on a field expedition near Middletown, Conn., today when a platform over a 40-foot pit collapsed and 15 men fell out of sight into the depths. Several others managed to leap before the collapse and escaped.

The men were standing on the platform erected in Strickland Quarry when with little warning, the staging crashed down, throwing the men down into the pit where they landed in three feet of water.

Richard Dana, 1927, of St. Louis, suffered lacerations about the face and neck, severe injuries to the back and a fractured jaw. He was taken to the Middletown hospital where it was said that his condition was serious.

Frederick A. Spencer, of Cleveland, Ohio, received a severe back sprain and was unable to move his legs for several hours.

Edmund B. Beaumont of Kingston, Pa., suffered internal injuries. Edwin W. Lewis of Greenwich, Conn., and Albert R. Matheny, Jr., of Pittsburgh, were cut about the legs and Matheny had a broken rib.

Theodore W. Dominck of Greenwich, Conn., suffered lacerations about the face and body and John R. Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, was badly cut about the face and arms and suffered a bad scalp wound. Fletcher Calling of Pittsburgh, was cut about the body and received scalp wounds. The instructor, Professor Flint, was badly cut.

Eugene C. McHenry, Dayton, Ohio, was injured seriously internally. Allen Hazen of Marion, Alabama, was badly shaken up.

The trip, which was part of the course of study, was to enable the men to study the formation of quartz, feldspar and mica. The platform was erected so that it would hang out over the edge of the pit.

The only warning was the crack of breaking boards and a few seconds later, the platform fell. The men were hurled down into the hole in the earth. The water at the bottom of the pit, it was said, saved many of the men from death.

The men who escaped secured ropes from nearby farmhouses and rescue work was started at once. A ladder also was secured and of the men who were not seriously injured were able to climb up this. Those unable to use the ladder were pulled up by means of the rope. Spencer could not move and he was brought up in a chair tied to the rope.

Raymond White Lapham, son of the donor of the Lapham Field house and prominent athlete, was one of those who escaped. He jumped from the platform and clutched the rock, slipping six or seven feet before his hands grasped rock that would hold him. He escaped with torn hands.

Prof. Richard Flint, of Chicago, showed great courage, according to the men, ignoring his own injuries and assisting the others to carry Dana to a nearby farm house.

The bottom of the pit, where the men fell, is made up of sharp pointed rocks where stones had been removed, and despite the fact that the water broke the men's fall, they were badly cut by the stone. They were found lying in a pile, some of them unconscious, when fellow students made their way to the bottom of the pit. Those unable to move were lifted out of the water while others able to walk started their climb up the ladder to the top. It was then that the rope was brought into play and several were taken to the top by this method.

The platform was held in a horizontal position by two wooden braces. The accident was caused, it was learned tonight, by one of these braces slipping out of place. When this support was taken away, the remaining brace was not strong enough to hold up the weight of the men, it broke. The platform had been erected by the quarry men and was not built especially for the college students.

There were several groups of men from the department of geology at the quarry at the time of the accident and the cries of the injured soon brought them to the scene.

Professor A. M. Bateman of the geology department at Yale said tonight:

"It is very fortunate that nobody was more seriously hurt and I am very thankful for this. It might have been the most terrible accident at Yale in years."

"COWBOY GANG" CRIMINALS ROUNDED UP IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(A. P.)—The "Cowboy Gang," underworld gunmen held responsible for scores of crimes before the alleged leaders, including one woman, were rounded up last week, employed a special agent to provide stolen automobiles for use in committing crimes, the police said today, in addition to furnishing his members with special silencers for their revolvers and a shooting gallery where they practiced marksmanship.

Joseph Silverberg, alleged agent who furnished the gang with stolen automobiles was arraigned in Tombs court today on a charge of grand larceny. Magistrate Brodsky was told that Silverberg's theft of automobiles was an integral part in the notorious "Cowboy gang's" ruthless programme of wholesale robberies, thefts and even murder. After hearing the police charges, Magistrate Brodsky held Silverberg in $3,500 bail for hearing tomorrow.

Police charged the gang with 64 crimes. Among the loot recovered were 30 stolen automobiles and a large shipment of wool.

Business Expansions Exceed Expectations

Satisfaction With the Country's Business Was Expressed in the Stock Market Dealings.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Business gains last week continued to exceed expectations. From nearly all quarters came evidence of improvement, so pronounced in the steel industry and other basic lines that all doubts as to the healthful condition of the autumn trade were roved.

General satisfaction with the country's business expansion was expressed in the stock arket, which experienced the heaviest trading since the closing months of 1916. Speculation unquestionably broke out of bounds in some of the popular favorites, but the sustained strength of U. S. steel, New York Central and other stocks which have the most powerful banking support in Wall street, provided a reliable measure on the market's movement. Daily transactions, exceeding two and a half million shares eclipsed those of the post-election boom last year.

The long awaited increase in unfilled tonnage of the United States steel corporation which developed during September was accepted as proof of the quickening of commercial activity with the beginning of fall. The gain was unexpectedly large and was followed during the week by more favorable reports from the industry. Both the value of new business and indication of a high rate of operations for the remainder of the year, the trade reviews reported, had caused producers to take a firmer stand on prices.

Bank clearings have continued to testify to the expansion of trade. So far this month the daily average of the Leu cities has been some $200,000,000 larger than in October last year, while the daily check collections of the federal reserve system during the week reached the highest figure on record.

For the eleventh week this year, loadings of Revenuqht exceeded the million car mark during the period ended October 3. The normal seasonal slackening in the movement of grain was noted but shipments of merchandise were heavy. Many of the carriers placed large orders for rails and new equipment.

AN UNIDENTIFIED WOMAN KILLED BY AUTO AT MILFORD

MILFORD, Oct. 18—(A. P.)—Milford police are seeking to establish the identity of a well dressed woman about 45 years of age, and presumably from Bridgeport, who was struck and instantly killed at six o'clock tonight on the Washington bridge by a car operated by Michael Lubentz, 147 Libby street, New Haven. The woman's body, which is being held in a Milford undertaking parlor, gave evidence to show that the cause of death was a fractured skull.

According to Lubentz, who was released under bonds of $1000 on a technical charge of manslaughter, he was driving his car east on the bridge over the Housatonic river and was closely following an east bound Connecticut Company bus. Near the Devon side of the bridge, the woman darted from the sidewalk directly into the path of his machine, was struck and hurled to the pavement.

In the absence of the medical examiner, Coroner Eli Mix of New Haven, ordered the body removed to an undertaking parlor. An inquest into the death will be held Mohday morning at 9 o'clock by the coroner.

The dead woman is described by Milford police as being between 45 and 50 years of age, weighing 150 pounds and is five feet, six inches tall. She was dressed in a long black coat, bearing the tag "Meiges and Company." Light purple suit, low black shoes, and black silk stockings. She has gray eyes, raven hair, slightly tinged with gray. In her pocket was found the sum of 80 cents in change. Police believe that she is a native of Bridgeport and was on her way to visit friends near here.

Pinchot, in a statement, said he considered the matter of such importance that he had cancelled several speaking engagements in order to lay it before the president.

SEC'Y MELLON IS OPPOSED TO EXEMPTING TAXPAYERS

Believes That Cancelling Levies on All Incomes of $5,000 or Less Would Mean an Enormous Loss to the Government Without a Single Compensating Advantage—Unwise to Increase the Exemption For Single Persons From $1,000 to $3,500, For Married Persons From $2,500 to $5,000—Declares It is Advisable to Have Every Citizen With a Stake in His Country.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18—Strong opposition to suggestions for exempting taxpayers with incomes of $5,000 or less from all federal income levies was voiced today by Secretary Mellon on the eve of the meeting of the house ways and means committee to begin consideration of a tax reduction bill.

"The sole result of such a change," the treasury head declared, "would be an enormous loss of revenue to the government without a single compensating advantage. As a matter of policy, it is advisable to have every citizen with a stake in his country."

The statement, addressed to Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey in reply to such a suggestion by him, is taken as an answer to the proposal, advanced recently by Representative Garner of Texas ranking democrat of the ways and means committee.

He proposed to increase the exemption for single persons from $1,000 to $3,500 and for married persons from $2,500 to $5,000. Such a scheme, which has the endorsement of other democratic members of the committee, is estimated to relieve 3,000,000 taxpayers from all lyies.

Whether the treasury will favor any increase in personal exemptions has not been made known. Its entire tax policy however, will be presented to the committee at the opening of hearings tomorrow afternoon.

Nevertheless, reductions in the normal tax rates applying to the smaller incomes, increases in exemptions, or perhaps both, are expected to result from the committee's efforts.

The committee will not get down to definite work on the measure until after two weeks of public hearings, during which all persons interested in revision of the law will be heard.

The measure is expected to be ready for presentation to the house when congress meets in December. Passage of the bill by that body before the Christmas holidays is planned, and final enactment of a measure by March 1, fifteen days before first payments of the new year are due, is predicted.

The letter of Secretary Kellogg to Senator Edge, dated October 7, says:

"You suggest that it might be advisable in amending the income tax law to exempt all net incomes of $5,000 or less. Your reason for this suggested is your information that it probably costs the government more to collect the tax on net incomes up to $5,000 than the government receives from the tax, and, therefore, it would be in the interest of economy from the government's standpoint to exempt net incomes of $5,000 or less.

"Your estimate of the loss of revenue of $83,000,000 by the adoption of such a suggestion is apparently based on the elimination of the tax on net incomes of $5,000 and under, without extending a like exemption to taxpayers with higher incomes. It would hardly seem equitable to raise the exemption on taxpayers having incomes on $5,000 and less and not permit similar exemption to taxpayers having incomes in excess of $5,000. For example, it is not fair to levy no tax on a man with a net income of $4,900 and to tax a man with an income of $5,100 on all incomes in excess of $1,000. If the principle of a straight $5,000 exemption on all taxpayers were applied, it is estimated that the loss of revenue, based on 1923 returns, instead of $83,000,000, would be $167,000,000.

"If now we compare this prospective loss of revenue with the expense of collection, it is obvious that the tax is very productive of net revenue to the government. It seems to me if we had a complete cost system there would be allocated to the expense of collecting the tax on net incomes of $5,000 and less not more than $5,000,000. Compare this expense with a revenue of $167,000,000.

"There is another point to be considered. It would not be practicable even if the exemption were raised, to eliminate the making of returns by those having a certain gross income though their net income is below the exemption. At present, in having a gross income of $3,000 a year must make returns. Were this not required, many taxable incomes would evade payment of tax. So, if the exemption were raised, almost as many returns would have to be audited. You can readily understand this since the law now stands less than 50 per cent. of those who make returns and whose returns are audited pay any tax at all.

"Coming now to the question of delay and congestion in the bureau, it has been our experience that returns of small net incomes are very quickly audited, and that the returns of large incomes are the principle cause of delay and require the great number of employees. An experienced auditor can handle up to 300 small returns a day, whereas it may take him three or four months to handle one large return. Add to this the fact that these returns are audited in the field, and you readily see that their elimination would in no wise relieve the bureau of internal revenue from its present congested condition nor permit a lowering of the period of the statute of limitations.

"It is true that under the present law a married man with an income of $3,000 pays but $7.50 tax, or 1-4 of one per cent. of his income, one with $4,000 pays $22.50 tax, or 1-2 of one per cent. and one with $5,000 pays $37.50 tax, or 3-4 of one per cent. These seem insignificant sums. They are to the taxpayer, but not to the government. It must be remembered that great businesses have been built up on small returns and large volume. The most conspicuous example which comes to my mind is the five and ten cent store. We ignore experience if we say that these small taxes from net incomes of $5,000 or less are not worth collecting.

"Income tax first touches the citizen of this country at a much higher point of income than in any other country with which I am familiar. In other countries the tax is on a broad base. With us this base has already been very much narrowed. To eliminate it further would make the whole tax structure unstable and its continued usefulness as a source of revenue uncertain. As a matter of policy, it is advisable to have every citizen with a stake in his country. Nothing brings home to a man the feeling that he personally has an interest in seeing that government revenues are not squandered, but intelligently expended, as the fact that he contributes a part, usually a direct tax, no matter how small, to his government. I feel therefore, that the adoption of your suggestion would be wrong in policy and ineffective in decreasing the cost of collection or in eliminating delay and congestion. The tax on the incomes to be affected is already so small as to be no burden to the taxpayer. The only result of such a change would be an enormous loss of revenue to the government without a single compensating advantage."

BRIDGEPORT RESTAURATEUR WAS SHOT BY A NEGRO

Litchell had gone into the restaurant about 3 o'clock and ordered a sandwich. After eating the sandwich, he said that the "place was rotten and the food bad," to which Franchi said that "if he didn't like it, he could get out." The negro is said to have replied that "there isn't anyone who can put me out of the place." Franchi then grabbed the man about the body from behind and pinning his arms, led him to the street. While held in that position, Litchell pulled chi forced the negro through the plate ling behind him, struck Franchi in the stomach. The negro then started to Golden Hill street, threatening bystanders that he would kill anyone if they came near. Franchi still kept his hold. A second bullet which went wild, smashed out 2 small windows in the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad station near by.

In front of a shoe repair shop, Franchi forced the negro through the plate glass window, cutting him about the head. Through weakness from loss of blood, Franchi was forced to let go his hold and was taken to the hospital. The negro was saved from the threats of a crowd by the arrival of police and the ambulance.

Franchi was given a transfusion of blood at 3 o'clock this afternoon and while his condition is very serious, he has a chance for life. Litchell's condition is not serious and he is under police guard at the hospital.

35 PERSONS WERE INJURED IN COLLAPSE OF BLEACHERS

WASHINGTON, Penna., Oct. 18. (AP)—Six of the 35 persons taken to a hospital following the collapse of a section of the bleachers at the Carnegie-Tech-Washington and Jefferson football game yesterday, remained in the institution tonight. Wet leaves on the highways are considered one of the most dangerous road face conditions upon which to apply brakes and motorists who respect the value of life and property proceed with caution during rainy weather at this time of the year. Several car owners reported skidding with minor damage, Friday night and Saturday.

Fall weather accounted for a decided increase in week-end business in the city. The various transportation facilities of private cars, bus lines, trains and trolleys brought in hundreds from surrounding towns. The amount of purchases Saturday were most gratifying to local merchants who have suffered from trade depression for some months. Shoppers had no difficulty in finding large stocks of merchandise in all lines, and reasonably priced.

PUTNAM MAN'S TRUCK STRUCK BY TOURING CAR ON BRIDGE

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 18—One man, Roland E. Johnson of 3 Parsons street, Centerville, R. I., was taken to St. Joseph's hospital to receive treatment for a fractured nose and considerable damage was caused to the two vehicles, in a terrific crash of a Buick touring car and a one and one-half ton Federal truck, on Natchaug bridge, about 10:15 o'clock Saturday forenoon.

Fred L. M. Johnson of Washington street, Arctic, R. I. brother of the injured man, was operating his car towards this city. The highway was in a slippery condition from the rain and wet leaves. As he approached the bridge which spans the Natchaug at the city line, on the North Windham road, he saw the Federal truck loaded with bales of cloth coming from the opposite direction and applied his four-wheel brakes. His car skidded and collided with the truck, which was operated by Ernest E. Cutler, of Putnam, when midway on the bridge. Roland Johnson, who was riding in the front seat of the touring car, was thrown against the windshield bow and suffered a fractured nose. The left front fender of the machine was rolled up beyond repair, the left tire was punctured and the chassis bent. On the truck, the right front spring was broken, the front of the frame snapped and the front wheels pushed out of alignment. The bales were unloaded on a local truck and both machines were hauled off by a wrecker. Motorcycle Officer Grant Bombria of the police department, assisted by State Policeman Frank Schweikert, made an investigation of the accident. Officer Bombria concluded that it was unavoidable and made no arrests. The officers directed one-way traffic over the bridge for some time while the truck was unloaded and towed to the wider highway where a relief car from Putnam was sent on to make repairs.

BIG GERMAN CARP BACK, AFTER 5 YEARS' ABSENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Oct. 18.—Two local hunters, skirting the shore of the southern boundry of Bennett's cove one day last week, had their attention attracted by a commotion in the water in the small inlet from the main body of the cove. Investigation verified their suspicions that the great German carp had returned for a lasting fall visit. Early in June, during pond lily time, Ed. Wyatt, William Magel and H. G. Willis had a close-up view of three of these, the greatest fish ever seen in local waters.

At that time every known attempt was made by the town's most expert anglers to induce the carp to take a bait, but every attempt proved futile, although small boiled potatoes were tried as a last resort.

Now it is claimed that carp, in the fall, will bite at raw chickens' livers, if they can be placed partly in the soft mud at the bottom of the shallows they inhabit at this time of the year.

Their habits have got the local fraternity guessing for it is six years since they made their first appearance in the upper reaches of the Aspinook. Then for five years they were not seen again. Both the hunters of last week claim that a charge of shot would have settled the matter of capture, as far as one carp is concerened —whose dorsal fin was well above the surface—but as one man said, what's the use of blowing the great fish to bits? First it is illegal to do so, and what's more the big three-foot fish couldn't be brought down and exhibited. The scales on the one seen last week were the size of a silver half-dollar, as near as the men could tell through 3 to 5 inches of dark water.

The warning is out now, and given fairly. Keep strict watch on your chickens' livers. Shanghai especially, for they may be extracted for cash bait without warning at any time.

MYSTIC

A new weekly paper is the Mystic Light, edited and published by C. C. Bennett of South Glastonbury.

Mrs. Phillips has a copy of the Mystic Press, edited and published by L. M. Guernsey for many years. It was a six-column, four-page paper This copy was published June 10, 1886, so lacks only eight months of being 40 years old. Of all the advertisements of merchants of all kinds of goods not one is under the same name and ownership today except Noyes dry-goods store, which is now owned by the son, Clarence T. Noyes, and on the Stonington side. His father's store was No. 4 Central block. In his ad he offers one lot, 1,500 yards dress lawn at 5 cents per yard; one lot, 28-inch canvas lawns, at 8 cents per yard, and some other goods cheap. There is the report of the town banks, one on each side of the river; No. 251 reports of the condition of the First National bank of Mystic bridge at the close of business June 3, 1886. The other notice reads: No. 645 reports of the condition of the Mystic River National bank at the close of business June 3, 1886. Every one named in that report has passed away. Samuel Clift was judge of probate for Groton and Richard A. Wheeler for Stonington at that date. DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Indicative of the earnestness with which delegates to the general convention of Union St. John Baptist entered into their deliberations at Holyoke the past week is the appended revue of some of the matters so seriously considered there.

The Union St. John Baptist is a great and responsible organization representing the French Canadians of New England. It has upwards of 50,000 members. It happens that about every community in eastern Connetieut with a heavy percentage of French-Canadians was represented by delegations in the meeting. For that reason the following is of special interest hereabouts:

A resolution declaring the submission of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique to the Holy See and to the bishops in spiritual matters was introduced by Rev. Henri Vincent of the Holy Family church, Woonsocket, at the order's convention here and passed by the delegates, who also decisively defeated the opposition which has created bitter factional strife in the organization for the past year.

A division in the ranks of the clergy, most of the priests supporting the insurgents, was one of the outstanding developments of the convention. This lack of unity was deplored by Fr. Vincent who declared, "L'Union St. Jean Baptiste is an American society, as Catholic as it is French. By virtue of its constitution and the citizenship of its members, it proclaims its attachment to the American republic, to the flag and Constitution of this country. It is determined to work for the conservation of our nationality, our traditions, our language and our Catholic faith. It declares its submission to the Holy See and to the bishops in religious matters.

"It deplores the violent use of words that is bound to injure our good name before our fellow-citizens of other races, and especially the public controversies in the newspapers and in meetings at which the respect due the clergy was lessened. If today the world is in discord, it is because there are more battle than prayers."

As part of the thorough defeat administered by the administration to the insurgents, Elie Vezina of Woonsocket was re-elected secretary general of the union, defeating Adolphe Hobert of Manchester, N. H., by a vote of 228 to 120. President Henri T. Ledoux of Nashua, N. H., was re-elected also, with the exception of one director, J. B. Ecrevrier of Winooski, Vt., the entire present administration was returned to office.

Balloting in the election, which came as the climax of the order's 11th and stormiest convention, began at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. It was not until nearly 6 o'clock that the result was definitely made known.

Nominating Mr. Ledoux, Rev. J. H. Lauzon of St. Regis Falls, N. Y., pleaded with the priests, of whom there were 26 present, to rise to show their attachment and devotion to L'Union, but only seven or eight of them arose.

Mr. Vezina and Dr. J. M. Carrier of Fitchburg, Mass., almost came to blows during the afternoon session, when the latter was discussing an amendment to the constitution. Referring to Eugene Jalbert, legal adviser of the order, Dr. Carriere said:

"Lawyers must be watched."

"Yes," shouted Mr. Vezina, "and traitors and vipers as well."

"Cowards, too," returned Dr. Carriere.

"The cowardice is on your side," exclaimed the secretary general, advancing toward Dr. Carriere. The latter rushed towards the platform, and with arms in air, pointing an accusing finge at the secretary, cried:

"No, it is on your side."

One of the amendments passed gave more power to the executive board regarding the expulsion of members.

"We have just had an example of what we must expect from giving more power to the officers," said Dr. Carriere, terminating his remarks. Mr. Vezina tried to reply, but the opposition element booed and he stood silently at his desk.

When the results of the decision were known, the Maine delegation burst into the V-E-Z-I-N-A yell. Mr. Vezina, who has occupied his post since 1911, and who was first vice president from 1904 to 1910, waged his successful campaign on the platfor mof entire submission to ecclesiastical authority in spiritual matters.

Other officers elected were: Arthur Davian of Faterville, Me., first vice-president; Dr. J. C. Z. Potvin of Springfield, Mass., second vice president; Emile Leroy Audy of Chicago, third vice president; J. L. Daout of Haverhill, Mass., fourth vice president; J. Arthur Favreau of Boyon, treasurer; Dr. F. A. Ruest of Pawtucket, medical examiner; J. George Lafalyre of Syracuse, N. Y., controller; Emong Cadoret of Torrington, Conn., Alma Forcier of Goodyear, Conn., Alfred Lantagne, Biddeford, Me., Geodeon Vallee of Lewiston, Me., Wilfrid Beaudry of Holyoke, Mass., Alphonse E. Lafrance of Fall River, Prime Robichaud of Gardner, Mass., Dr. J. H. Riopelle of Saginew, Mich., Arthur Beaudette of Manchester, N. H., Adonat J. Demers of Woonsocket, Emile Dubuc of Pawtucket and Dr. J. D. Bachand of St. Johnsbury, Vt., members of the Board of Directors.

There is much that is glorious in observation of the blossoming of Americanism amidst the childhood of this complex nation. This happens to be "Old ronsides" week. The radio has reached millions in broaching this subject having, in this instance, to do with the preservation of the warship Constitution, pride of the American navy back in 1812, and other early years of this nation's struggles toward its present pre-eminence.

It is with an appeal for consideration against egoism that the following very interesting original letter is presented to readers of The Bulletin hereabouts—and it is an original letter.

The letter comes from an earnest pupil in the East Brooklyn school. It has to do with the plan to establish an airport in Danielson and it advocates a proposal that will find many ready supporters.

The grammar grades have been very much interested in reading from your newspaper about having an air mail route stop at Danielson.

We suggest to the public that the field chosen be named Anderson Field, in honor of Warden Anderson, who is working extremely hard to make Danielson a stopping-place.

Yours truly,
MARY ESPINOSA

The spirit of those who love the game of football dies hard. Graduation from high school does not kill it. There is evidence in this town that graduation but lights the flame.

Whats this all about? Well, it's about a group of former students of Killingly High school, the majority of them graduates, a number of them former stars of school teams, who have decided they want to play football on their own account.

One who knows the players individually and something of their prowess will say here that they will make a whale of a team, considering that only a few of them have had any experience playing football under the advantages of college coaching. What they have is strength physically, the will to do, speed, courage and a few other real assets for playing football.

Here is the tentative list of this team, planning to get out and make a name for itself at an early date—very surely well before the Thanksgiving season.

Here's about as good a football team as could be garnered from the ranks of Killingly High school players of the past 20 years. The candidates are young, husky, powerful, anxious to go—what more could one ask? If they get into action—as they hope they will—well, it will take a football team to beat them. That's certain.

A special meeting of the Circuit league is to be held at the Methodist church here Wednesday evening. In view of the fact that Esther Thurston, a missionary recently returned from Japan, is to speak at this service, there is promise in having a large attendance. Miss Thurston went to Japan from Manchester, Conn., and because she is a Connecticut woman there will be special interest here in any message she has to give.

PUTNAM

At Elks' hall this (Monday) evening there is to be meeting of the Chamber of Commerce for which an interesting program has been arranged. There will be talks by three speakers. James Higgins of Boston, who is much in demand at banquets and social meetings of the business organizations of New England and Charles Gilman, who is obtaining wide celebrity in a similar role. He is a cousin of Alex Gilman, head of the Gilman Hardware company and is intimately known to other Putnam people who speak highly of his ability. The third speaker is Rev. James F. English, pastor of the Second Congregational church, who is interested in civic work. There will be musical numbers and refreshments.

Pomfret school football team defeated Huntington school on the Pomfret grounds Saturday, 27 to 0. All of Pomfret's games this season will be played on their own grounds with the exception of the game with Taft

Putnam High school won another decisive victory at Plainfield Friday, being victorious over the school of that town 36 to 0. The local school has one of the best teams it ever boasted.

George W. Gilpatric, Jr., a member of the senior class of Putnam High school and the manager of the school football team was taken to a Worcester hospital Sunday with well defined symptons of appendicitis and an operation indicated.

Guy Baker has gone to Florida, where he may spend the winter. He made the trip by automobile in company with Mr. Patterson and son of Webster, Mass. When in Florida last winter Mr. Baker exchanged his house on Mechanics street in this city for some Florida lots which he expects to convert into cash at a marked increase over their valuation when he bought them.

Ernest L. Davis expects to go on Safety Harbor about the first of November to spend the winter. Safety Harbor is about 15 miles from St. Petersburg and is the site of a large sanitarium which has natural spring baths. Mr. Davis owns a number of residential lots there for which he has been offered a marked advance, even as Florida profits are mounted, over the purchase price. He expects to sell all but one or two of them.

At the 25th anniversary celebration of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste held in Holyoke, Mass., Putnam was awarded first prize for having the most delegates in line. Clayton Thurber and family of Clinton, Mass., have been guests of Mr. Thurber's parents, Mr. and Mrs Charles Thurber, of the Sawyer district.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hammond and family have moved to Boston.

An unusual feature of the exercises at the installation of Rev. James F. English as pastor of the Second Congregational church was the fact that his father and brother took principal parts in the exercises. The father, Rev. William F. English, Ph. D., is treasurer of the Missionary society of Connecticut and his brother, Rev. William F. English, Jr., of Chicago, is secretary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions

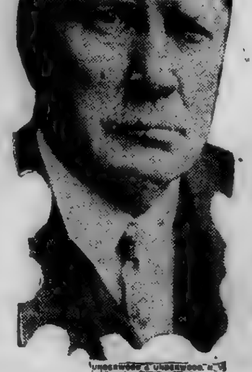
New Governor Virgin Islands



Captain Martin E. Trench has been appointed by President Coolidge to the Governorship of the Virgin Islands, the group purchased by the United States from Denmark in 1917 for the sum of $25,000,000. They are under the jurisdiction of the Navy Department. The islands were discovered by Columbus in 1494, and he was so amazed at the number (there are three major islands and more than 50 smaller ones) that he feared there would not be enough names of Saints, so he placed the entire group under the protection of the eleven thousand martyred Virgins of Saint Ursula, hence the name. The new Governor was formerly commandant of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, and more recently the Charleston Navy Yard at Boston.

At the home of Mrs. Frank Howard Tillinghast of Central Village, Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, her daughter Helen Waldo became the bride of Alanson Bates Colvin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Colvin, of Danielson. The bride entered the room preceded by the flower girl, Miss Priscilla Ellsworth, niece of the bride, as the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Wallace H. Payne, cousin of the bride. She was met in front of a beautiful bank of autumn foliage by the groom and Rev. William C. Prentiss, pastor of the First Congregational church, Plainfield, who performed the ceremony, the double ring service being used. The bride was given in marriage by her mother. Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Payne played several selections. The bride wore a gown of white georgette. Her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The flower girl's frock was of pale blue voile and she carried a basket of pink carnations. As pointed out recently, these restrictions have been the subject of wide discussion, both favorable and adverse. The results of this investigation will be presented at the conference, which will be open to all persons interested.

Russia Trying To Foil Security Pact

George Tchitcherin, Soviet Foreign Minister, who, it is understood, is proposing a security pact to Poland as a suggestion to the Allies to allow Russia to participate in the coming meeting. Russia will do this, or offset them with a Russian security agreement to Poland, Roumania and Czecho Slovakia.

Father John's Medicine is a Very Great Help for Colds and Coughs

Three Years Use Has Proved Its True Value

After using Father John's Medicine for three years, Mrs. Leon Vermeete, who lives at the corner of Walton and Clifton Streets, Fitchburg, Mass., says: "It has been a great help for coughs and colds and a very good medicine for strengthening the children. It has been a success where others have failed for my babies. I give it to the children when they have a cough or cold or to build them up."

The strengthening food elements in Father John's Medicine are so scientifically prepared that they are easily taken up and made into new flesh and strength by children or older people who are weakened and run down. It has proved its value by more than 70 years' success as a body builder and in the treatment of colds and coughs.

POETRY

Hearts Aflame

"Did not our hearts burn within us while He talked with us, and opened to us the Scriptures"? (Luke 24:32.)
Where fire-sparks fall soon bursts a flame—
There's tinder ready in all hearts
"While I but mused," from God there came
Sparks of that fire his truth imparts.

And if to Emmaus we but walk,
The spot with loved ones we call home,
While dusk enshrouds we list Christ's talk,
That flame into our lives will come.

Flame of His Love—with steady heat,
Consuming Self to ashes gray—
Love gives the Burning Heart—replete
With Joy, 'till dawns the "perfect day"

Chill frosts and ice of unbelief
Will loose their grasp, as when in Spring
The sun's quick beams bring warm relief
And winter past, birds cheerily sing.

Our cold and faithless moods of mind
Melt when His spirit thus draws near—
His torch of truth applied, we find
Sets hearts afire as Christ we hear,
Scriptures He opens glow with fire.
Verses once thought but dry and dead—
His presence sates the soul's desire,
Lured by His light we're upward led.

Willing He walks beside us still,
One needs bu listen to His voice—
And though unseen, his words will thrill.
Hearts set aflame through Him, rejoice

My Old Counsellor

The sun looked from his everlasting skies
He laughted into my daily dying eyes;
He said to me, the brutal shining Sun:
"Poor, fretful, hot rebellious little one:

Thou shalt not find it, yet there shall be truth;
Thou shalt not grow old, but yet there shall be youth;
Thou shalt not do, yet great deeds shall be done,—
Believe me, child, I am an old, old, Sun!

Thou mayst not hear them, but the birds will sing;
Thou mayst despair, no less will hope be rife;
Thou must be dead, but many will have life.

"Thou mayst declare of love, it is a dream!
Yet long with love, my love, the Earth will team;
Let not thy foolish heart be borne so low,— Lift up thy heart! Exult that it is so!"
—Gertrude Hall.

INTERSTATE BUSSES

No one knows what action the congress is going to take in regard to the regulation of motor busses, but it has long been evident that some action is needed, and in view of the fact that no control exists at the present time for those engaged in interstate business the action should be taken at the session which opens in December.

Motor busses operating entirely within a state are under state control. There is no question about that. When such a line crosses a state boundary the busses are engaged in interstate business, which would if judged by the railroads place them under the control of the interstate commerce commission. But that authority has never been delegated to the commission so it cannot act, and it is a question whether it is desirable to place such a flood of business before this federal body. At present such interstate business is running wild as far as any regulation is concerned. No one sanctions the route or the right to operate.

It is a case where congress must decide what to do. It can increase the federal commission in order to look after these problems or it can delegate the authority to the states. Such is not according to practice, if the latter plan should be adopted, but the situation is unusual. There is every reason why interstate bus lines should be under regulation quite as much as the interstate lines. Just now to escape regulation all that is necessary is to establish a line that crosses a state line somewhere and it is beyond the control of any regulatory body. They can do business in states where a state commission might not permit an intrastate line to operate.

No one knows whether congress will delegate the authority to the states to deal with this matter, as called for by a bill that will be presented, but such action would relieve the situation and if appeal was permitted to the interstate commerce commission a protection of the interests of such lines could be assured.

WHERE CARE IS NEEDED

While there is warning being advanced to those who go into the woods this month with regard to the prevention of fires, it is well that they should also bear in mind the need of so using their guns that they do not add human losses as well as game.

Although the number is not large, as figures go, there are too many who are killed every season through carelessness in the carrying or the use of firearms, and even though there is but one death that is too many when it comes to mistaking a human being for a game.

A timely report has come from New Hampshire of the fatal wounding of one hunter by his companion. They were out in search of deer and it was the "accidental" discharge of the rifle that caused the shot which was soon followed by death.

Those who start out with firearms are duty bound to have some regard for others. It is not solely a question of their pleasure or their results for the day; they must give due consideration to the safety of others both from the standpoint of care and first making sure that what is aimed at is game and not humanity.

Hunting accidents and deaths are preventable. They follow very closely, in the character of lessons they teach, the destruction of property through the carelessness of hunters and trespassers. Those who go through the woods and underbrush, climbing over walls or through gates, with their rifle or shotgun cocked, may be in position to send a quick shot after any game that suddenly appears but they are likewise in danger of premature and unexpected explosions. A fall, or something catching the trigger, can easily be responsible for the accidental discharge of firearms. Frequently the shot may cause no harm, but there are many instances where it has reached its mark in a fellow hunter causing frightful wounds and death. If those distressing affairs can be prevented by the exercise of proper care it is certainly not too much to ask or expect.

MORE RUBBER

Demand for rubber has been increasing steadily. It is still gaining even though the consumption has risen in a period of four years from 250,000 tons in 1920 to 475,000 tons in 1925, while production has not been keeping pace with it. While there was a time when more was available than was required, the situation today is that of restricted production. Because the sources of rubber are so tightly controlled demands are not being met with the consequent result that rubber prices have been driven sky-high. This country has found itself, subject to British legislation as regards its rubber, for while that country and its possesion do not produce all the rubber the world uses they furnish the bulk of it and are in a position to dictate what amount the world can have and what price it must pay.

This there will be no surprise at the announcement that Harvey Firestone has launched a million dollar project in Liberia where he is to produce rubber on a scale that will take this country out of its dependence upon other fields for such a commodity. It was Mr. Firestone who called attention some time ago to the opportunity which existed for developing rubber plantations in the Philippines. It would have been a natural sequence had he begun his development in that region. But he had carefully looked over the field and following a study of the difficulties of placing American capital in the islands, due to the laws which the islanders have established, the Philippines are ignored and to Africa will go the benefit connected with this new venture.

Production of rubber in Liberia is not an experiment. It has been done before and under the right guidance such an undertaking should prove highly successful. It cannot be an overnight development for rubber trees require about five years before they produce but with what is available and what is planned the production from that quarter should have its effects upon the rubber market in due time. Those suffering from high prices, those who are in control of the market and those who have failed to get this project will be keenly observant of results.

USING SUBSTITUTES

Much has been said during the present coal strike about the use of substitutes and the availability of a sufficient quantity to take care of the needs of the coal consumers through the winter so that no hardships need to be experienced.

Perhaps one of the best examples in connection with the use of substitutes is furnished by Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, who had his bins filled with 30 tons of anthracite coal, or an amount sufficient to carry him through the winter. He used foresight in the spring and did as many others did so that the coal strike had no terrors for him.

But he is not content to have his heater stoked with anthracite while such fuel is getting scarce and while so much is being said in behalf of the substitutes for those consumers who are obliged to buy their coal a ton at a time. The result is that he has had his 30 tons of hard coal shoveled out of the cellar and replaced with bituminous coal. He has been preaching the use of substitutes, and in spite of the additional cost involved in changing supplies he has decided to put into practice that which he has been preaching.

Such examples as that go far to support the contention that bituminous is a fit fuel and can be employed with good results. The smaller sizes of anthracite which are available are also being used by many coal dealers because of economy and results.

Leadership is what is needed under such conditions and that is what is being provided by the governor of Massachusetts. Others may well say that if substitutes are good enough for the governor they are good enough for me. Thus they may do something to relieve themselves from the stranglehold of the biennial coal strike.

TROUBLESOME RECOUNTS

As the result of the recent caucus contest in Springfield there is to be a recount of the votes in one of the wards. There was a close result in one particular instance and the person declared elected received a plurality of only 35 votes. It has resulted in a call for the opening of the ballot box and the counting of the votes once more. There is nothing that gives any assurance of any change, and the Springfield Republican voices its doubts when it says, "All experience with recounts, however, creates the presumption that the result already announced will not be overturned."

The demand for a recount comes frequently. It was not long ago that it was sought in New York city. Philadelphia also called for one and there are many places where ballots are gone over and over in an endeavor to get at the correct expression of the voters. Sometimes there are changes and at other times there are not. Every election brings its share of the disputed results because of the manner in which others are permitted to interpret what the voters intended to do when he cast his ballot.

That is one of the uncertainties which is overcome by the use of voting machines. Elections can be close and yet be correct as Norwich has had reason to understand on different occasions. What might have been questioned under other conditions is accepted when voting machines are used. The machine isn't subject to the manipulation which is possible in the handling of paper ballots. The vote is recorded as cast and without being left to the interpretation of biased minds. The voting machine eliminates delay, expense and suspicion.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Eggs that are to be kept should be stood on the small end and not the broad end.

Hot salted vinegar will restore copper and zinc to their first luster.

When shoes become scuffed and peeled rub them with the white of an egg. It will paste the broken places down.

It is well to make soap jelly of the soap you use in the kitchen and laundry as it is much quicker to use than rubbing the bar.

A feather brush is the best to remove dust from gilt picture frames. On no account use a linen cloth, as it wears the gilt off and deadens its brightness.

Vellum covers which require cleaning may be made almost equal to new by washing with weak salts or lemon, or, if not much soiled, warm soap and water.

Tar stains may be removed from cotton fabrics by covering the spot with butter and allowing it to remain for a few hours before washing.

Keep embroidery hoops of different sizes in the kitchen to put hot pies and kettles on. They do not slide and are excellent to place pies on to cool.

If the milkman fails to arrive with cream, in time for breakfast, whip an egg very light, place a little in each coffee cup, pour in coffee and then add milk and you will not miss the cream.

To patch wall paper tear a piece slightly larger than the portion to be covered to match, but torn with rough edges and without any definite shape. Then paste over and the patch will not be noticeable.

If you place lemons in the oven before using them, heat them thoroughly and roll with the hand until they are soft you will not only get twice as much juice as when they are cold but there is a flavor which a cold lemon never possesses.

SELECTING LINOLEUM

When there is a maid in the kitchen to wipe up the linoleum each day there is nothing prettier than the blues, whites and gray tones. But if the housewife does all her own work, sewing, taking care of the children, a wise choice is a linoleum following the hardwood patterns or in brown tones. Because this housewife cannot possibly find time to scrub her kitchen floor every single day, try as she will, and the brown tones unquestionably show dirt less.

HOME-MADE PEGS

We must have a peg on which to hang our aprons, towels, etc., and so often these kitchen articles are damp that the peg must therefore be rustproof. Drive a nail through an empty spool into the back of the cellar door or in the cellarway. The spool will neither rust nor tear.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

The normal person excretes normally about two pints of perspiration in 24 hours. In order to keep the skin functioning this way in illness, one must resort to bathing in bed and fastidious care of the skin.

How many people give due importance to the homely lemon, which is invaluable as a beautifier in a dozen ways. Lemons are always more or less cheap and plentiful, so there can be no excuse for any woman not having one always handy. Lemon juice is unrivaled for cleansing, softening, and whitening the skin and removing stains.

While oranges are generally conceded to be the most important of fruits to the system, on account of their high percentage of mineral salts potash and anticorbutic qualities, tomatoes (while not a fruit,) contain the same qualities. Canned tomatoes of a reliable brand, strained, are good substitutes for oranges. The strained juice may safely be fed to babies threatened with scurvy or rickets.

Camphor is most soothing and healing and is used in practically every hand lotion for smoothing roughtened skin. The spirits of camphor are slightly antiseptic, dry up quickly and heal the annoying little fever blisters or cold sores that so often follow a slight cold or indicate that the system is just a little out of order. The camphor may be applied frequently until the cold sore begins to disappear.

DANDRUFF TREATMENT

Treatment for falling dandruff is massage every morning for five or ten minutes. And there is only one really right way to massage: Begin at the nape of the neck, pressing the thumb firmly into the base of the skull, and work with circular motion around the neck to the ears. This gets up the circulation quickly. Then the scalp all over the head should be lifted, pressed and kneaded in circular sweeps of the finger-tips and cushion at the base of the palms until the entire scalp is pink. Make your circular motion back from the face rather than toward it so that the muscles of the face are lifted rather than pushed down. Then use a cleansing tonic once a week, to free the scalp from scales and dirt, and at least twice a week touch the middle fingers to the pomade and, parting the hair in rows, go all over the scalp with it. And every day of the world brush your hair at least ten minutes. You'll not only lose your dandruff, but you'll find your hair softer, shinier, and much more alive. There is a cleansing tonic for oily hair and one for dry, and a special tonic for tired, "nervous" hair. But all need the pomade three or four times a week on the temples and where it is receding from the brow and the thin place on the crown.

SAVE YOUR OLD RUGS

If you have an old rug or two that you are not going to use any more, do not discard it. You have no idea how well one will look in the kitchen or even on the porch with the aid of a little paint and varnish! Place it on the floor wrong side out and give it two coats of an attractive paint and one coat of weather proof varnish. You will find that the rug will last for an indefinite length of time.

LICTATES OF FASHION

Smart new lingerie of violet voile has insets of flesh color set in in triangular pieces.

Much velvet ribbon in bright colors is being used on the new straw hats.

Very large hats of horsehair braid in pastel shades have large satin bows as trimming.

Bows and knots of self material are very much liked for trimming on the small, close hats. The felt or velvet bow gives a youthful look that women can not ignore.

Georgette crepe in high colors, particularly flame and king blue is very popular for lingerie.

The black milan hat frequently turns up on one side and has a fan or two of black gros grain ribbon there.

A scarf that is suitable to wear with almost any coat is of white crepe de chine with broad borders of cross-stitching done in rose red.

It is agreed by fashion authorities that skirts will be definitely wider at the hemline for some time to come. They are short, too, from the floor.

Slip-on sweaters of fiber silks in vivid colors with designs in front have silk scarfs to match, harmonizing with the dominating color of the sweater.

The jumper, this fall, is scheduled to have a widely increasing vogue. It will be worn with many of the tailored suits made of the English and Scotch tweeds.

Blonde bengaline, untrimmed, forms some of the very smartest of ensembles. A blonde satin hat and pumps frequently complete the outfit.

It is considered very chic to have one's bracelet; finger rings and hat pin ornaments of the same jewels or combinations of jewels. The ensemble idea is being carried further in accessories than ever before.

Crystal necklaces are once more in the fore and they are particularly good when very long and beautifully cut into square shaped pieces. They are worn with light or dark dresses.

KNITTED HATS APPEAL

One of the most charming novelties seen in the shops of the Rue de la Paix and the Avenue de l'Opera is the knitted sports hat. Some of these brought out earlier in the season were rather crude affairs of cotton or wool yarn. This latest Parisian chapeau is a bit of hand work, worthy of attention on its merits. It is knitted or crocheted in fine zephyr into which a border of flowers or conventional pattern is woven.

BANDEAU POPULAR

The Longlen bandeau, a scarf of colored silk tide about the head, is considered chic, and is worn by the mannequin who displays the new sports suits. Some of these will find their way to the Riviera and to the American southern resorts during the winter.

FOR THE BRIDE

An unusual and practical "shower" gift is a package of four or six dust cloths, each made out of a different shade of cheesecloth and edged with a corresponding shade of soft yarn. The rainbow dusters are tied together with a bow of ribbon.

LAUNDRY HINTS

A toothbrush, used for dampening seams for pressing saves time. The brush opens the seam as it draws along and facilitates the work.

Try ironing men's soft collars on a Turkish towel doubled to four thicknesses. The collars will iron much easier. They will be smoother and shine like new when finished.

Sponge the garment on the right side, but press on the wrong, unless a dampened cloth is laid over the material and the pressure is done on this.

All lace should be carefully pulled out before being ironed. Embroidery should be placed over several folds of blankets. Frills can be plaited with the fingers and pressed with the iron.

To set colors in gingham, put 1-2 cup of vinegar, 1-2 cup of alum in a pail of lukewarm water. Soak the garment in this for one hour before washing, being careful to leave it out in the sun only long enough to dry it.

SETTING COLORS

Various colors are best set by certain substances as follows:

To set blues and greens use one-half cup of strong vinegar to every four quarts of cold water.

To set pinks, blacks and browns use two cups of kitchen salt to every four quarts of cold water.

To set lavenders use one tablespoon of sugar of lead to every four quarts of cold water.

To set mixed colors, as in prints, it is safest to use salt for for pinks and blacks.

FOR CLOSE QUARTERS

The limitations of an apartment may be readily overcome with a little thought and care in providing abundant storage space. Chests of drawers, highboys, tables with drawers, secretaries, bookcases and box couches are excellent choices. In fact no article of furniture for the apartment should be chosen for its surface space alone.

BAKED GREEN PEPPERS

Baked green peppers offer one of the simplest ways of preparing this tasty vegetable. The tops are cut off the peppers and the seeds scooped from the inside of the shells. Place a piece of butter on the tops of the peppers and bake three-quarters of an hour in a greased pan. Served with pork, beef, lamb or other roasted meats, baked green peppers are delicious.

THE TOY BOX

There is nothing like a large box to hold baby's toys and instilling the habit into baby of putting the toys into said box before bed time. When a habit of orderliness is formed so young it invariably will stay with the child forever.

ECONOMY

After using gasoline for cleaning purposes, filter it through a chamois skin and all dirt will be removed. The gasoline can then be used again.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Twenty-six women were recently admitted to the bar in massachusetts.

Nearly 700 women are employed by the municipal government in Philadelphia.

Spanish custom insists that even mothers should not go about much on the streets alone.

Nine women now fill positions as assistant United States district attorneys in various parts of the country.

Between 70 and 80 per cent of the textile workers in China are women, who toil from 14 to 15 hours a day, seven days a week.

Mrs. Fannie Rixes, owner of one of the largest bakeries in St. Louis, began her business career selling sandwiches from a basket.

Miss Nan Gordon, manager of the Auditorium theater, in Charlotte, N. C., is the only woman in the south who is manager of a legitimate theater.

WOODENWARE ODORS

Woodenware which has any odor of the food which has been in it—and wood absorbs odors quickly—should be soaked in hot water in which soda is dissolved, one tablespoon of soda to four quarts of water.

FLOWER BOWLS

If you have a small piece of coarse screening cut it to fit your flower bowls, then turn down the four corners, making it look like a small table and place it in the bowl. Flowers put through the holes in the screening may be arranged very attractively and will last much longer than when crowded into a bowl.

RECIPES

Ginger Apples: Take six medium, equal-sized apples, pare them, and remove the cores—but leave the apples whole. Place in a deep pie dish, or baking tin, and add water to come three parts up the height of the apples—also four ounces of sugar, and a little lemon juice; bake until the apples are tender, but not broken. Then lift them carefully out, and place in a glass dish; fill the centers with a little preserved ginger finely chopped and a very little sirup. Pour round them one pint of boiled custard to which a tablespoon of the ginger sirup has been added.

Apple Mold: Dissolve one ounce of gelatin in one pint of cold water, add to it three-quarters pound of sugar, and boil together for 5 minutes. Pare quarter and core one and one-half pounds of cooking apples, put these into the boiling liquid, add a little flavoring essence, and simmer very gently. When the apples are quite soft, carefully sift out the pieces into a wet mold, and pour it over the apples. Let it set, and serve with cream.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Navy Day at Submarine Base

Mr. Editor: The Navy league of the United States has again obtained the approval of the president of the United States for celebrating Tuesday, October 27th, 1925 the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, as navy day. The purpose of navy day is to bring the citizens of the country into intimate contact with their navy and to let them know its mission, condition, value and needs. The Navy league feels confident—and we agree with them—that as the citizens' knowledge of their navy increases so will their determination to keep their vital first line of defense at a proper standard.

In order to further this desired acquaintanceship all the naval stations and vessels of the United States will be "at home" to the people on navy day. Like all hosts we hope for many visitors.

Will you lend the aid of your paper in rendering the valuable service to the people and to the navy of bringing them together by giving publicity to navy day and urging the citizens to "come and see"?

This base—the only naval station in Connecticut—will be open to visitors from 9:00 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. on Tuesday, October 27th. Boats will run from the city landing near the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad station, New London, to the base every half hour while the base is open to visitors.

Very truly yours,
E. J. KING,
Captain U. S. Navy, Commander Submarine Base, New London, Conn.

Stories That Recall Others

Back to Standard

She had been wearing them rolled down all summer. One day recently one of her friends accidently discovered a change and naively inquired:

"Aha, back to the old methods of suspension, eh?"

"No," she quickly retorted, "just back to standard time."

A Lesson in Politics.

A humorist and politician was talking of some of his early experiences the other day. Among other things he said:

"I well remember getting up on frosty November mornings and going barefoot to the barn to milk the cows I would get there before the cows were up, and I would kick one of them and make her get up so I could warm my feet in the straw where she had by lying.

"And that was my first lesson in American politics—to make the other fellow get out so the successful aspirant can warm himself in his predecessor's place."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

James Cranswick Tory, who has been sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia, is widely known as one of the foremost insurance men of eastern Canada. He is 63 years old and a native of the province of which he has been made the chief executive. After passing through the grade schools and academy in his home town he completed his studies at McGill university. Soon after his graduation he took up his life work in the field of insurance and in course of time rose to the position of general manager of one of the largest insurance companies in Canada. His public career began in 1911 with his election to the Provincial legislature. A curious phase of Mr. Tory's appointment as Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia is in the fact that he is the third consecutive incumbent of that office to have won his success in business life in the insurance world.

From Small Beginnings

Charles Canning, the Great British Statesman

A mother who failed as an actress; a step-father who drank to excess and delighting in tormenting his stepson; a home where everything was wretched and miserable and sordid; a father who had been disinherited by his proud family, and who had died miserably when the boy was only a year old; a future as black as that which loomed before poor litt Oliver Twist in Dickens' novel—misery, dirt, torment, ignorance and the humblest life—that is what characterized the boyhood of George Canning, who was later to become Britain's secretary for foreign affairs, and premier of England.

All this good fortune may be said to be due to the kindness of a wandering actor who, without knowing the importance of his deed, befriended the wretched boy, and thus changed the history of the British empire. That actor's name was Moody, and it deserves to be recorded. He pitied the poor abused lad, grew indignant at the stepfather, his fellow actor, put a good impulse into words and sat down and wrote a fiery letter to the boy's proud relatives. The letter was effective. The uncle came to the rescue for the boy and shrdlu shrdlu bu, provided richly for the boy and sent him to Eaton and Oxford, the most exclusive educational institutions in all England. That was a transformation worthy of the fairy Godmother in the old stories.

After a most brilliant career in school and college, young Canning entered English politics, and with clever strokes of humor found the weak places in the armor of his opponents Such a man very quickly gains office, and so Canning held various positions such as under-secretary for foreign affairs and receiver general. Like Lincoln, he was distrusted by some because of his constant flow of wit, repartee and humor, but his shafts made themselves felt. Like all politicians and statesmen he had his periods of success and of overthrow and a number of violent enemies. He was accused of various misdeeds, and at one time defended himself by fighting a duel in which he was wounded. After holding many important offices he became the brilliant leader of the house of commons, and very quickly Prime Minister. He died at 57, after having given invaluable services to his country. It is to be hoped that Moody, the wandering actor who had helped him in his boyhood, lived to see the great results that came from his quick action in helping a friendless and miserable boy.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

HATS AND HISTORY IN TURKEY

"Hats and history are not coupled in most people's minds," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society anent the recent efforts of Turkish leaders to have the fez replaced by European types of hats, "but in Turkey radi changes in types of head coverings have marked important historical developments.

"When the Ottoman Turks came down out of Central Asia as rough riding plainsmen they are believed to have worn the high, soft cap of astrakhan wool known as the kalpak—a sort of little brother to the drum-major's fuzzy, towering head piece of today. The Turks have shown a tendency to take their reforms by sudden spurts, holding tenaciously to the latest innovations between times. Before long after their arrival in Southern Asia they had gone over bodily to the turban of that region, and this remained the characteristic Turkish headgear for many centuries.

"The turban became the complex badge of rank and even profession in Turkey at the height of its power. From the snow-white turbans of the Moslem ecclesiastical dignitaries and the huge piles with distinctive stripes and shapes of the grand visier and lesser political lights, these head coverings ranged down to the dirty cloths wound round the heads of the peasants. Every good Turk during this era had the profoundest contempt for things European and the hat was the badge of the infidel. One of the greatest insults that could be offered to a Turk who had shown too great friendliness toward 'Franks' was to nail a hat to his door.

"The fez which has been associated in the minds of the last few generations with all things Turkish, came as one of the sudden Turkish reforms relatively a short time ago. Sultan Mahmoud II, who ruled during the early years of the nineteenth century, wished, like Peter the Great of Russia, to modernize his people and turn their thoughts from Asia. He decreed that his people should abandon the turban and wear the fez, doubtless influenced by the fact that the latter is at once modish and more convenient. He coupled the fez with the introduction of the frock coat for his courtiers and the well dressed young Turk in general, and was cursed roundly by most of his people as 'the infidel sultan.' The use of the fez continued, however to such good advantage that within a generation or so it was looked upon by the outside world, and no doubt by most Turks, as the distinctive age-old Turkish head covering.

"Why Mahmoud settled on the fez as the particular type of head covering to replace the turban is hard to understand. Most of his reforms looked toward Westernization. But something very like the fez was worn by the ancient Assyrians and Hittites, and it is supposed to have come down to modern times through the Byzantines and the Greeks. One thing in its favor, was its lack of a brim. So long as the Turks were devout Moslems, practicing their prostrations at prayer time, brims were not permissible since they interfered with the touching of the forehead to the ground.

"After the World war when a revolution became successful in Turkey, the leaders at first turned back to the ancient kalpak of the original Turks. This head covering became popular as signifying a return to the virtues of the old stock and was worn by all people of prominence in the new regime.

"Like all the other changes in head coverings, the most recent move in favor of the straw and fedora of western Europe has its significance. The Caliphate has been abolished, the Mohammedan religion has been removed from its place of power in the government, and there is no more reason why a Turk should not wear a brim if he chooses, than an Italian or an Englishman. And the movements that accompany this Europeanization of head coverings is significant. Polygamy has been abolished, women are encouraged to abandon the veil, marriages are to be civil only, and an entirely new code of laws, modeled after European systems, is being drafted. The Turk is not only changing his hat, he is making himself over cap a pie."

Where Mats are Heirlooms

In Samoa the mat occupies a traditional place and in those islands mats are often treated as heirlooms. These Samoan mats are excellent specimens of art, and the older the mats, the greater the value attached to them. The possession of an old mat [illegible] the owner high standing, and may be said to constitute a sort of title [illegible] to rank and property, from the Samoan standpoint. It matters little whether the mat be tattered and torn, its antiquity is its value, and for some of the most cherished mats, large sums of money would be refused.

Some of the mats have names known all over the Samoan group. The oldest is called "Moe-e Ful-Ful," or "The Mat that Slept Among the Creepers." This title was derived from the fact that the mat had been hidden away for years among the creeping convolvulus that grows wild along the seashore. It is known to be 200 years old, as the names of its owners during that period can be traced.

Your Chin Line—
must bear his closest scrutiny!

Is yours the chin line of youth—or of age?

ARE you always completely at ease, or are you ever worried by the scrutiny of many eyes? Can you be sure that others look upon you entirely with admiration, or do you imagine a questioning look—as though people are wondering whether lately you haven't changed a little?

Modern scientific methods, as perfected by Dorothy Gray, make it possible for youth to retain its beauty, and for age to regain much of the charm that has been lost.

Watch "the line of least resistance"

The first danger sign is not so apt to be wrinkles or greying hair as a sagging of the chin line—for the chin offers least resistance to the approach of age. This sagging of the chin line, by drawing other important muscles out of place, causes wrinkles.

At Our Toilet Goods Department you will find a Dorothy Gray Preparation for every need:

For patting lotions, skin foods and astringents into the skin, use DOROTHY GRAY'S Patter: it restores contours to sagging muscles and reduces a too plump under chin. $2.50.

You may make relaxed muscles firm by using DOROTHY GRAY'S Russian Astringent Cream, a lovely powder base which at the same time contracts loose, flabby skin under the chin. $3.00.

For softening and beautifying the skin, and building up the tissues, there's nothing more effective than DOROTHY GRAY'S Tissue Cream. Especially beneficial for a sensitive skin. $1.00, $1.75.

If your face is too thin you will find DOROTHY GRAY'S Special Skin Food nourishing and fattening. Fills out hollows and wrinkles; rounds contours. $1.00, $1.75.

Is your skin very dry? Then use this blend of rare ingredients—DOROTHY GRAY'S Special Mixture—combining the beautifying and strengthening qualities of skin food and oils so necessarily penetrating. $4.50.

Never Let a Cold Get a Start

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold but only one DIRECT way—with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like "a vapor Lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Tiarpine and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

"The Hidden Idol" has Norwich interest, since the book was written by W. Tingley Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Cook of Broadway and was given its first presentation here.

When broadcasted from Schenectady Friday night the musical comedy was very clear and satisfactory.

LEBANON CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH CELEBRATES 225TH ANNIVERSARY

Congregations of over 300 that filled the Lebanon Congregational church to more than its seating capacity, so that numbers had to stand, attended all the services held Sunday in celebrating the 225th anniversary of the church, of which Rev. Sanley Sellick is pastor, the fifteenth to serve the church in that capacity. The pulpit was attractively decorated in autumn leaves with the dates 1700-1925 shown in gold figures.

The morning service at 10.45 opened with the organ prelude and the pastor conducted the opening exercises. The responsive reading by Rev. L. L. Harris of the Exeter-Liberty Hill Congregational church, was followed by the hymn, Faith of Our Father, and the Scripture reading by Rev. A. G. Littlefield of the Lebanon Baptist church. Prayer by Rev. Theodore D. Bacon, D. D., was followed by the anthem, O Come Let Us Sing, rendered by the choir, and the pastor spoke brief and cordial words of welcome. A baritone solo, Behold There Shall Come a Day, was rendered by George Hollingsworth of this city.

The anniversary address was by Rev. Dr. Benjamin Wisner Bacon of Yale Divinity school, who spoke from he text Isaiah, 51, 1 and 2, Hearken to me, ye that follow after righteousness, ye that seek the Lord; look unto the rock whence ye were hewn, and to the hole of the pit whence ye were digged. Look unto Abraham your father and unto Sara that have you; for when he was but one I called him and I blessed him and made him many.

Before proceeding with his sermon, Dr. Bacon spoke of his special interest in Lebanon because his grandfather, David Bacon, had married Alice Parks of Lebanon, a girl of seventeen when she was married, and they had set out at once for the present location of Detroit to be missionaries to the Indians.

Dr. Bacon's scholarly treatment of his sermon theme was listened to with the closest attention, as he pointed out that the text was written by the unknown prophet of the Jewish restoration, who was commissioned by God to recreate a national consciousness in the Jewish exiles returning after 70 years in Babylon. This was a specially significant passage to the Jews and Jesus found the words of this prophet the expressions of his ministry and the utterances of his own calling. This was a call to patriotism, a summons to the men of vision and faith.

Speaking of the worship of ancestors, the preacher said we should not be merely sons of Pilgrims in the flesh, but in the spirit of high service and high ideals by which our ancestors were animated. He declared that there is need enough of Americanization, but it cannot be accomplished through dangerous conspiracy to take the law into our own hands. We must show ourselves sons and daughters of a noble ancestry in spirit rather than in flesh. There is no need to think that the Pilgrim spirit is dying but our children could well emulate the laws of the men who made history in building these New England towns. The Isaiah idea, the Christian idea of patriotism is one of service. We cannot be true Americans, if, with the vision of free America, we do not blend service to the world. God grant that we may have a double portion of Pilgrim faith for service as individuals and as a nation.

After the hymn, O God Beneath Whose Guiding Hand, the service closed with the benediction by Dr. Bacon.

Afternoon Service

The afternoon service was at 2:30, beginning with a hymn, All Hail the Power. Miss Lydia Hartig, minister of the Goshen Congregational church read the scripture and prayer was offered by Rev. James G. Graham of the South Windham Congregational church. A solo, Learn Ye to Suffer (Handel) by Mrs. E. L. Robinson of Putnam was followed by remarks by the pastor and a tenor solo by Storrs Brigham of Hartford.

Letters of greeting were read by the minister from three former pastors of the church, Rev. Stephen Smith of Atlanta, Ga., Rev. Eugene S. Smith of Berkeley, Cal., and Rev. William O. Foster. He also read a greeting from Rev. Oscar Mauer of the First church, New Haven.

Rev. C. H. Rickells of Norwich moderator of the New London association of Congregational churches and ministers, brought greetings from that association, in which he spoke of the value of years, not so much in quantity as in quality, which Lebanon had always had. The church survives he said, because it is in the fittest to survive and he pointed out that there were four Congregational churches organized in New London county in the 17th century. These were New London First, 1642; Norwich Town First, 1660; Stonington First, 1674, and Preston, 1693.

Edward P. Lyman brought the greetings of the Columbia Congregational church, organized in 1730, but now without a pastor. He showed the first communion cup presented to the church in 1758 by Capt. Samuel Buckingham.

Miss Lydia Hartig, the minister, brought the greetings from the Goshen Congregational church, organized in 1739 and Rev. L. L. Harris brought greetings from the Exeter Congregational church, organized in 1773, now united with the Liberty Hill church. Rev. A. G. Littlefield brought greetings from the church of which he is pastor, the Lebanon Baptist, organized in 1805.

State Librarian Speaks

After the solo Teach Me to Pray (Jewitt) by Mrs. Robinson, the historical address of the afternoon was delivered by George S. Godard of Hartford, state librarian, who spoke upon Lebanon from the Outside.

In part Mr. Godard said:

Lebanon is one of the oldest of the 169 towns of Connecticut. It has been located in two counties, New London and Windham, and the town of Columbia, incorporated in 1804 from a part of the territory of Lebanon, is in Tolland county. Lebanon was named in 1699 and incorporated in October 1700. It was doubtless named from Lebanon in Syria, and was the 36th town to be established by the general assembly of Connecticut. It is one of the five Connecticut towns whose names begin with "L". The others are Ledyard, Lisbon, Litchfield and Lyme. It was one of the first towns to be really incorporated. Prior to October 1700 the general assembly usually authorized a town to assume a name which was generally selected by a leading man of the town who usually selected the name of his home town in England. Lebanon seems to have been an exception, for, as above stated, it was probably named from Lebanon in Syria.

Lebanon had been a popular name in the United States. There are no less than 34 American states having towns or villages by the name of Lebanon in some form, and no less than 24 American cities which have streets or avenues named Lebanon in some form.

In biblical times it was also a popular name according to Dr. Josiah Strong, for we find it mentioned no less than 71 times in the Old Testament. "The Cedars of Lebanon" are historic. But we are told that the Lebanon of old in some of its transportation facilities was not so very different from some of the transportation facilities of our Lebanon of today, for they were described as some of ours are now described as being "inaccessible to chariots." May we not hope that the Jonathan Trumbull Highway, so long contemplated and desired, may in the near future become a reality, and thus restore beautiful, historic Lebanon to its former place on the map.

Dan Huntington, in his "Reminiscences of Lebanon," published in Cambridge, in 1857, speaks of Lebanon thus: "There is not, probably, a finer inland farming territory in the same state, nor, so far as my youthful reminiscences extend, any place more distinguished by a moral and enlightened population, than the good old town of Lebanon, lying on the great road from New London to Hartford, through Norwich, Franklin, Columbia, Andover and Bolton; about twenty miles from the Sound, and on the route of the first stage-coach ever driven in New England. The town street is the broadest I ever saw or heard of, three or four miles in length, with gentle elevations and depressions, north and south, sloping a little east and west, with neat door-yard fences, handsome domiciles and home-lots, on both sides under good improvement for agriculture and horticulture, with beautiful streams at the bottom of the hill, right and left. And yet the same street, at the time I speak of, excepting a clearage here and there for a church, a school-house, or parade-ground, is deformed with immense craggy rocks, clay-pits, sluggish streams, and frog ponds, and shapeless, tottering stone-walls, with crooks and angles innumerable every few rods, which rarely fail to attract the notice of the traveler unpleasantly.

Lebanon 3,274; Hartford 3,027; Farmington 3,707; Lyme 2,956; Middletown 5,664; New Haven 5,085; New London 3,171; Norwich 5,540; Stonington 3,518; Windsor 4,220.

Someone has said that "A people who have not the pride to record their history will not long have the virtue to make history that is worth recording," and someone else has observed "No man is fitted to be entrusted with the control of the present who is ignorant of the past, and no people who are indifferent to their past need hope to make their future great."

The Rev. Eleazer Wheelock, D. D. was a resident clergyman in the north society in this town, which has since been incorporated into the town of Columbia. He was educated at Yale college, where he graduated in 1733. He became the principal of a seminary which had been established in this town for the education of the native Indian youth. About the year 1770, he removed from this town to Hanover in New Hampshire, and the seminary was transferred to that place, and became the foundation of Dartmouth college, of which the Rev. Mr. Wheelock was appointed the first president, and may be considered as the founder of the institution.

The Connecticut council of safety met in the old war office with Governor Jonathan Trumbull, the friend of Washington and the only loyal governor in the thirteen colonies presiding. From this war office Governor Trumbull on Nov. 15, 1783, issued the important proclamation which established Connecticut's claim to the western reserve, the sale of which 127 years ago for $1,200,000 gave the Connecticut school fund, from which the school children of the state have received $12,793,893.32. The Trumbull papers were collected in Lebanon, taken to Boston and have now been returned to the custody of the state of Connecticut.

The loyalty of Governor Trumbull in the Revolution found a counterpart in the service of Governor William A. Buckingham in Civil War times. So has this town served the nation in two big crises of its history.

As stated Lebanon is one of the oldest of the 169 towns in Connecticut. It was and is a typical New England country town, in which the older life, the early industrial activities and their appropriate surroundings have fast been giving way to the new.

Lebanon should find her pride in her historic cemetery with its Trumbull tomb and the many graves of those foremost in the founding and establishing of our colony and state and that government—our United States—whose wonderful opportunities we are permitted to enjoy, to which all the nations of the earth look, and for the continuance and preservation of which we should devote all that we have and are; in that historic Trumbull war office, small in size but far-reaching in its influence, the one time capitol of Connecticut during Brother Jonathan Trumbull's term as governor of Connecticut from 1769 to 1784; in her beautiful historic green, on which the French cavalry, a part of the French forces sent by France to the assistance of the American colonies, passed the winter in 1780 and 1781, preparatory to their march to the Hudson to assist Washington; in her historic homes from which there went forth leaders in government, education and other important activities in our state and nation and beyond; in this beautiful, commodious and substantial church, in which and around which have centered many associations and influences far-reaching, and which has one of the most beautiful spires in our land. The Trumbull war office, now restored through the efforts of patriotic societies and used as a public library for the benefit of the community, embodies an architecture purely colonial. It is not only beautiful in its lines as a colonial building but it is beautiful in its history. Centered around and in it have been decisions and events which have influenced history of the world. This little building, therefore and the other objects which I have just called to your attention do not nor can not belong to Lebanon alone. They belong to the early Connecticut and their descendants, now residing and active in all lands. They are hallowed and stand on hallowed ground.

It now remains for us, whether we are the sons and daughters of the 20th century who have the blood and spirit of 1776 coursing through our veins, or whether we are those who have more recently come to us from distant shores or their descendants, to show whether or not we are worthy children of our ancestors and living up to our opportunities and responsibilities.

Our mothers and fathers did the things necessary to be done in their day, whether at the spinning wheel, the oven, the bedside, on the farm or elsewhere. Wherever they were needed, there they were, so with us. We are not all needed in the field nor at the bedside, but there is a work for each one which no one else can do. Are we doing it?

The hymn, O Beautiful, For Spacious Skies was followed by the benediction by Rev. G. F. Bailey of the Norwich Town church.

The programme at the evening service at 7.30 was carried out as follows:

An unusually large congregation listened with much interest to the young minister, who is to go to the mission field at Johannesburg, Natel, South Africa. NUTMEGS AND SPEEDBOYS PLAY TO SCORELESS TIE AT SACHEM FIELD

Sunday afternoon before a record crowd the Norwich Nutmegs and Jewett City Speedboys fought each other to a standstill, the result being a 0-0 tie score. The game was hotly contested from start to finish with both teams fighting for every inch. The large crowd that witnessed the game went away feeling that it was one of the best football contests played in this vicinity in years.

Much credit is due Jewett City for the sportsmanlike way that they played. There was little or none of the roughing so customary in games of this sort. Both teams played hard, clean, fast football that is a credit to the management of the Nutmegs and which should win them many friends among the sporting public of Norwich.

In the first quarter Jewett City had a marked advantage, the ball being deep in Nutmeg territory throughout this period. After receiving Butt's kickoff the Speedboys steadily marched down the field to their opponents' 15 yard mark when the Nutmegs defense stiffened, they taking the ball on downs. After one play the Nutmegs fumbled and the Speedboys recovered on the 20 yard line and a touchdown for them seemed certain. However, after three unsuccessful thrusts at the line they fumbled and Pallocha recovered for the Nutmegs on the 18 yard line. The Nutmegs then kicked to mid-field on the first play and Parkhurst was downed in his tracks by Kelley. For the remainder of the quarter the ball see-sawed back and forth between the Nutmegs 30 and 50 yard lines.

The second quarter opened with Jewett City in possession of the ball on her opponents' 25 yard line. After three tries at the line which gaines them nothing, Parkhurst threw a forward pass to J. Barry that was knocked down on the fifteen yard line and the Nutmegs took possession of the ball. Here the Nutmegs showed their first form of the day, getting three first downs in short order from runs by Williams and MacLaren. However, after bringing the ball to mid-field the Nutmegs lost it on downs. After two rushes the Speedboys threw a long 30 yard forward as the whistle blew, with the ball on the Nutmeg's 15 yard line.

The Nutmegs, after being outplayed in the first half came back strong in the second and had the ball in their opponents' territory for most of the time. The Speedboys kicked off and Pallocha of the Nutmegs was downed on his own 40 yard line. After several exchanges of punts from which the Nutmegs gained some advantage, Butts having the better of MacGowan, the quarter ended with the ball on the Speedboys' 35 yard line, in Nutmeg possession.

At the beginning of the fourth quarter the Nutmegs made two first downs in succession, one by a 13 yard dash through tackle by MacLaren and the other by a 15 yard run around end. But the Speedboys strengthened and took the ball on downs. After gaining a first down as the result of a long forward the Speedboys lost the ball to the Nutmegs on a fumble and the game ended with the ball in Nutmeg possession in mid-field.

The aerial attack was used by the Speedboys for some nice gains after their attempts to hit the line were unsuccessful.

The shinning lights for Jewett City were Parkhurst, McGowan, Sawicki and J Barry, while for the Nutmegs every man fought hard and it would be a difficult task to name any outstanding players.

The following are the lineups:

Nutmegs		Jewett City
Kelley	L. E.	J. Barry
Pallocha	L. T.	Sawicki
Hagberg	L. G.	Monchor
Sullivan	C.	Davis
Grover	R. G.	Cobb

KUTSCH LEADS SCORERS IN WESTERN FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 18—Nick Kutsch, versatile Iowa sophomore backfield star, who scored all the points necessary to beat Illinois Saturday, drew away from his competitors in the big ten scoring column and is well in the lead.

Friedman, Michigan, scored the largest total of points of any big teh player Saturday and went into second place, passing his team mates, Osterbaan and Gregory.

"Red" Grange staged one of his long runs for a touchdown, Saturday, but he is still far below his 1924 total of points. The ten highest scorers are as follows:

Kutsch, Iowa	6	3	4	40

NEW HAMPSHIRE AND MASS. AGGIES LEAD N. E. CONFERNCEE

STORRS, Conn., Oct. 18.—(AP)—Games played to date between the teams of the New England college conference, which is made up of the state colleges of Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Maine, indicate that choice of the strongest team in this group will lay between the Massachusetts Aggies and the University of New Hampshire elevens.

Massachusetts Aggies defeated Connecticut Aggies yesterday 13 to 0 at Storrs, while at the same time in Durham N. H., Rhode Island State fell before the strong University of New Hampshire eleven by a score of 25 to 0. Maine, the other member of the conference, defeated Connecticut Aggies a week ago, 7 to 0, but in the basis of the work shown in that game the Pine Tree staters cannot be ranked in a pair with the Massachusetts Aggies. Just how they compare with New Hampshire is problematical but the comparitive strength of the two teams should be definitely settled on November 14, when they play at Orono, Maine. New Hampshire and the Massachusetts Aggies do not meet this year so the two elevens can be rated on camparitive scores only.

The New England College conference rules went into effect in the fall of 1923, bringing into play a standard set of rules and code of eligibility, for the five institutions that are its charter members. Its primary purpose was to introduce a high plane of intercollegiate competition between the colleges in question, with a set of rules that would be uniform and fair for all concerned.

Unlike some conferences the primary idea is not to win a "conference championship," and it is especially provided that no "championship" shall be awarded. It is not necessary that all conference teams shall play each other, and the only team that will meet all others this year is the Connecticut Aggies.

Followers of the state colleges within the conference will be interested to know the various teams shape up, however, and as mentioned before, New Hampshire and the Massachusetts look to be the strongest at the present time. The result of the Connecticut Aggies-New Hampshire game at Manchester, N. H. November 7, should give a fair index as to whether Massachusetts Aggies or New Hampshire can be considered the best team in the New England conference. If Connecticut wins, Massachusetts takes top honors by virtue of its victory over the nutmeg aggies yesterday. If New Hampshire wins, then it will be a more or less debatable question as to which is the strongest team unless the granite state eleven downs Connecticut by an overwhelming score.

Last year, Connecticut Aggies had the best team in the conference, defeating Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, which gave the Nutmeg Aggies an undisputed right to its claim.

NID D'OR WINS FEATURE EVENTS AT PARIS TRACK

PARIS, Oct. 18—The close of the 1925 flat racing season at the Bois de Boulogne track in beautiful summer weather today brought out 100,000 race lovers and the first spring styles in women's hats for the 1926 season.

Nid D'Or, three-year old belonging to the Duc de Cazes and ridden by apprentice, won the municipal council stakes of 300,000 francs at a mile and a half from a field of 27 starters. He was at 15 to 1. American owners finished second and third. A. K. Macomber's The Sirdar and Ralph A. Strassburger's Asteroide getting inside the money.

The women's 1926 straw hats attracted as much attention as the races. Two of the most prominent—which had just won first prize at the exposition of decorative arts for their designer—were, one of black made of thin straw interwoven with big horse hair. The other of Rosewood color, simply trimmed with a taffeta scarf. Another hat was of red mephisto picot with applications of gold and silver skin and scarf in red mephisto crepe de chine, the ends of which were trimmed with gold and silver.

WINDHAM BLANKS TEAM FROM MIDDLETOWN, 14 TO 0

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Oct. 18—Windham High came through for a victory before hundreds of fans at Recreation Park Saturday afternoon, submitting the Middletown High outfit to a loss of 14 to 0. The visitors were outplayed in the general run of the game yet proved a formidable opponent. Both sides failed to score in the first quarter and it began to look like a fourth consecutive tie game for Windham, this city. In the second quarter Tommy Meikle muckled the pigskin, ran round end for twenty-five yards and landed safely over the goal for Windham's first touch down. He kicked the goal for the extra point. In the third quarter, Larivierre, half back plunged through the line, breaking through a stonewall to the goal line six inches away and placing Windham's second touchdown. Meikle kicked the goal. Middletown failed to even up. Lawrence Haggerty a promising young "sub" was injected as halfback in the last quarter and made a sensational run of thirty-yards before being interrupted. Subs came in for his share of the glory with some clever kicking.

MICHIGAN KEEPS ITS SLATE CLEAN IN WESTERN FOOTBALL

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Michigan kept its western conference record clean and its goal line untouched by the sweeping victory over Wisconsin Saturday, and now leads the big ten with two victories. Iowa has won its only conference start, against Illinois, with Nick Kutsch outscoring "Red" Grange.

Chicago has a tie game against its otherwise clear conference record, while Ohio has but a tie game in the conference records. Purdue and Minnesota have played no conference games. Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana and northwestern are trailing.

WAUREGAN EVENS UP SERIES WITH MOOSUP

(Special to The Bulletin)

MOOSUP, Oct. 18 — Wauregan bunched hits behind errors here today and won from Moosup 7 to 1 in the second game of the series between these two clubs. This victory for Wauregan evens up the series at one victory each and the third and deciding game will be played at Moosup next Sunday. The game today was an easy victory for the Wauregan club as McCarthy proved to be no puzzle to the Wauregan batters who secured 14 hits off him. Flodman who pitched for Wauregan allowed only three scattered hits and at no time in the game was in danger of being beaten. The score:

NO PRACTICE FOR CONN. AGGIES TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Oct. 18—The Connecticut Aggie football squad will not be given its customary Monday afternoon respite from practice tomorrow, as Coach Dole has cancelled it in favor of an early start in the preparation for the Tufts game, which will be played at Medford next Saturday.

Four games have been played by the State college eleven to date, three of which resulted in defeats and one a victory. Against Massachusetts here yesterday, Connecticut was unable to cope with the strong running attack of the Bay Staters, and went down to its third successive defeat in as many weeks, this time by a 13-0 score.

With Tufts, Manhattan, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Rensselaer yet to be played, the Connecticut eleven will be faced by strong opposition each Saturday for the remainder of the season.

Working with a small squad of twenty-four men, Dole has been handicapped this year by an unusually large number of injuries to his players, which has kept some of his best men on the sidelines when they were needed most. Yesterday's contest with Massachusetts was a gruelling one, and injuries, the exact extent of which have yet to be determined, were received by several members of the squad.

Admitting that the Bay Staters showed a powerful running attack yesterday, Coach Dole was not satisfied with the defensive work of his team in its attempt to check the Massachusetts onslaughts. In the first half the Bay Staters made sixteen first downs, while in the second half they were able to negotiate only two against the same starting lineup. Work on defense will be long and intense this week, and work will be directed towards correcting the various faults in play that cropped out yesterday.

SAYS GRANGE IS GREATEST PLAYER ON GRIDIRON

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Frank Sommers, who has been identified with football as a star player, coach and scout for 23 years, now believes all the stories written about Harold "Red" Grange, Illinois super-player, are true and that Grange's admirers haven't gone far enough in their praise.

Sommers, scouting the Illinois-Iowa game for Pennsylvania yesterday, was stunned by Grange's amazing trick of grabbing the opening kick-off and running 80 yards for a touchdown.

Sommers scouted the first three games Illinois played this year and will be back for the thriller between Michigan and Illinois at Urbana Saturday for which 68,000 tickets, the capacity of Illinois $2,000,000 stadium, have been sold.

BALL PLAYER INJURED IN AIRPLANE CRASH

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Marvin Goodwin, former manager and star pitcher of the Houston club of the Texas league and recently sold to the Cincinnati Nationals, was seriously injured, when an airplane he was piloting fell into a trial spin and crashed 200 feet to the ground at Ellington field today.

Both of Lieutenant Goodwin's legs were broken, the left one in several places. An x-ray was taken to determine if his skull was fractured, but apparently it was not.

Goodwin is a first lieutenant in the army air service reserve and was a flying instructor during the world war.

All New Britain Wins

NORWALK, Conn., Oct. 18—The All New Britain eleven defeated Norwalk, 7 to 0, in a professional football game here today. Behrer intercepted a forward pass and raced 40 yards to a touchdown while Barklow kicked the goal for the extra point.

PIRATES WILL BE CONTENDERS IN NATIONAL LEAGUE FOR SEVERAL YEARS

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(A. P.)—There was a lingering note of future defiance in the dread of Bill McKechnie's conquering host as the retreating steps of world's series teams echoed faintly tonight along the corridors of major league baseball.

For Pittsburgh was unwilling to stop in acclaiming its National League heroes as a great club which had been good enough and game enough to beat Walter Johnson and a sterling Washington machine. The city of smoke and Honus Wagner tonight could look beyond the glory of a smashing triumph and see the beginning of a new diamond reign, and athletic dynasty supplanting the five-year National League rule of John McGraw's Giants, swept along on flying feet of Max Carey, under the propulsion of Hazen Cuyler's powerful stick, and supported by the sturdy defense of Traynor, Wright, McInnis and Smith.

In the series just completed, Washington, with a team of rejuvenated cast-offs, rallied back from a glorious past enough of skill and power to check for a spell. But the hand of fate had merely written a gallant finish to the career of a veteran machine which was compelled to step aside to permit vigorous, ambitious youth to rush by.

A new order of things was decreed and Bill McKechnie rises to command the baseball decks with a baseball battalion which Pittsburgh has every right to expect will continue to rule the baseball realm in spite of a sharp challenge from an ever-jealous Giant, a redland host well fortified with good pitching, a threatening Boston Brave, and four other protesting pursuers.

In spite of the home run hitting which prevailed in the recent series, baseball critics are agreed that the jack rabbit ball has gone from the game—at least until popular fancy calls for another orgy of home run clouting. The record-breaking total of circuit clouts this year, coupled with injuries to players, decreed its passing, and in the change, a Pittsburgh team which combined enough old baseball and enough new baseball to profit by the move at a crucial period of the race appears well equipped to tide the crest of National League competition next summer.

In addition to being one of the youngest teams, in point of average age, to attain the highest pinnacle on the diamond, McKechnie's team this year was also the fastest in baseball and the hardest hitting outfit in the National League. With a frequency which recalled the Giant machines of a few years ago, when McGraw annually obtained a corner on the National League speed market. And in the end, the speed kings from Pittsburgh outdistanced the whistling clout so readily that the Pirate klan, next spring will hold a big advantage over their field if the jumps of the "rabbit" have been sufficiently shortened to bring back baseball to the plane it occupied prior to the circuit smashing epidemic.

The winter league will have plenty of trades and line-up shifts to discuss this winter, and the Pirates will not be altogether left out of the round table discussion. The left side of McKechnie's infield is expected to be kept intact, with Traynor and Wright at third and short but the Pirate chieftain will have to do some tall thinking about first and second bases.

Selection of regular players for both positions will call upon McKechnie to decide between youth and ambition on one side and the steadiness of two veterans who saved him in the crisis of both the National League race and the world series, on the other. Critics generally admit it was the bracing influence of Stuffy McInnis at first base which enabled the Pirates to pull themselves together and rescue the series, while Johnny Rawlings, Giant hero of bygone days, unquestionably saved the club in the closing weeks of the pennant drive of the Buccaneers through the east.

Moore and Grantham are younger than Rawlings and McInnis. On the other hand the latter are recognized as great money players. They came to McKechnie's rescue at the crucial hours of the season but he may decide now that the younger pair should get the call, because he owes it to them and the club to prepare for the future.

Carey is the outfielding veteran, yet he is the fastest man on the team and one of its greatest offensive threats. Max indicated this year, in spite of his fifteen years as a major leaguer, he still has a long stretch of baseball ahead of him before Barney Dreyfuss will be driven to the ivory grounds to match Cuyler and Barnhart.

NEW RECORD FOR SEAPLANES IS EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18—(A. P.)—A new world's speed record for seaplanes is generally expected in the Jacques Schneider international races to be held at Bay Shore park, Baltimore, under the auspices of the Flying club of Baltimore next Saturday, when the United States will defend the cup it won two years ago.

All the planes entered by the American army and navy and Great Britain and Italy the only contenders, are described as capable of much greater speed than those which established the previous records.

The cup was won in 1923 for the United States by Lieutenant David Rittenhouse of the navy, at Cowes, England, with an average speed of 177.38 miles an hour. Should the United States win three times in succession, the cup would remain permanently in its possession.

MULLIGAN'S TEAM GETS BREAK AND WINS

WATERBURY, Oct. 18—George Mulligan's state champions, the Waterbury Blues, won their fourth straight game of the season here today when they defeated the Rochester Jeffs of the National Professional Football League by the score of 7 to 6. Eddie Hunsinger, Notre Dame end of 1924, recovered a fumble on the Rochester 45 yard line in the first period and he ran to the goal line for the lone Waterbury touch down. Stuhldreher kicked the goal. A long forward pass, Smyth to Lynch for 40 yards in the third period gave the visitors their lone score. The kick after touchdown failed and the visitors lost an opportunity to tie the count. The Blues outplayed the highly touted visitors in all stages of the game.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 18—(A. P.)—The Gran Premio Nacional, Argentina's turf classic, was won today by Dr. Jorge Mitre's unbeaten colt Macon. The race was at 2,500 metres, (a little more than a mile and a half), and was worth $40,000; time 2 minutes 36 3-5 seconds.

MICHIGAN LEADING ELEVEN IN WESTERN CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, Oct. 18—(A. P.)—Michigan emerges tonight as the most dangerous contender for the 1925 western conference football title as a result of Saturday's games, perhaps the toughest day the "Big Ten" will know this season.

Illinois, Wisconsin and Northwestern went to defeat, leaving Iowa, Minnesota, the Wolverines, Ohio State, Chicago and Purdue in the race. Chicago and Ohio, however, have a tie to mar their record.

The genius of "Hurry Up" Yost, and Amos Alonzo Stagg, both past the half century mark, was revealed in their victories, but the 21 to 0 triumph of Yost's Wolverines over Wisconsin was the more impressive.

The Wolverines won with the breaks similar to those they met from Illinois last year when Harold "Red" Grange demoralized Michigan by grabbing the opening kickoff and running 95 yards for a touchdown. In the first half minute Michigan scored two touch downs in three plays, leaving the Badgers stunned and broken and George Little, former aide of Yost, losing to his old master in his first conference game.

Yost, in Benny Friedman, introduced a star that may give Grange a thrilling afternoon when Illinois and Michigan meet Saturday. On the second play of the game, Friedman threw a pass that gained sixty yards for a touchdown and on the third play caught a kickoff and ran 85 yards for a touchdown.

Chicago probably has the greatest defense in the country if its showing against Northwestern means anything. Northwestern's good attack was simply smothered. Chicago's attack has power but lacks deception and against Pennsylvania Saturday it may not be able to make unbroken gains.

Iowa, figured to upset Illinois by line superiority, made good, revealing its new star, "Cowboy" Nick Kutsch, who scored all of Iowa's points in two field goals and later a touchdown in the final two minutes of play. The game left no doubt that Grange is the "Red" of 1925. "Cowboy Nick" qualified as one of the undoubted stars of the conference.

The fighting spirit of the Iowans will be a big lift to them against Ohio State Saturday.

Northwestern may be in for a disastrous year, for Ralph Baker, the Purple star halfback, undoubtedly will be in a semi-crippled condition all season.

Ohio won from Columbia, as the western conference had figured and continues to look like one of the real contenders for "Big Ten" honors. Indiana evidently has recovered from the lacing Michigan gave them as demonstrated by its stand against Syracuse. Minnesota, by its clean cut victory over Wabush, the team which started out by defeating Purdue, promises to figure prominently in the conference results when it gets going. Purdue did not have enough competition from Rose Poly to get a real workout.

HERRUPS BEAT ASHLAND IN CLOSING GAME

At Ashland Park Sunday the Ashland A. A. lost their final game of the season to the fast Herrups of Hartford, 9-2.

"Ginger" Cleary pitched winning ball for Hartford allowing but five hits and fanning twelve. Stanley started for Ashland and was hit rather hard. He was relieved by "Spike" Liberty in the sixth who held the visitors to three hits and fanned four.

Ashland scored their only runs in the eighth when "Bill" Liberty tripled to deep center and scored on Robertson's grounder to Webb, who threw wild to first and Robertson went to second on the play. He scored on "Spike" Liberty's single to right. The score:

DRAKE IS BEATEN IN MISSOURI CONFERENCE

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 18—Drake toppled from its pinnacle in the Missouri Valley conference before a determined onslaught of the Oklahoma sooners at Norman, Okla., Saturday. The bulldogs, with two victories to their credit, were decided favorites before the game, but failed to endanger the Oklahoma goal. The score was 7 to 0.

The Drake team defeat leaves Missouri and Ames, neither of which had valley games yesterday, tied on top of the list, each with one game and none lost.

The Kansas Aggies, crubbed Kansas University 14 to 7. It was the third Aggie victory over the Jayhawkers in 25 years.

Washington and Oklahoma, A. and M., the conference trailers, played a 0 to 0 tie.

Nebraska and Missouri played nonconference games while Ames and Grinnell were idle.

SEVERAL UPSETS IN SATURDAY'S FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Staggering under a succession of shocks which spared only a few of the gridiron elect, eastern football today gazed out upon a tangle of shattered hopes, tumbled idols and ruined records after a week-end of stunning pigskin disasters.

Saturday's games marked the first big series of eastern major clashes, and scarcely one of them fulfilled the expectations of those who had indidedly freely at the dope bucket. The winning streaks of seven major elevens were broken: for the first time in years not a single member of the "big three" — Yale, Harvard and Princeton—was able to put across a victory; Notre Dame, national champions of last year with a 16-game winning streak, went down to their worst defeat in recent years before a plie-driving army assault; only three major elevens none of which has yet faced a foe of like calibre, were left, with the goal lines uncrossed.

The most severe blow fell here against the Knute Rockne eleven; at New Haven, where Yale went down before Pennsylvania, to her first defeat since 1922, and at Cambridge, where Harvard, brightened by a display of remarkable defensive power against Middlebury the week before, washed rudely to the damp turn by Holy Cross 7 to 6.

Rockne came east predicting defeat for his champion Indiana eleven, yet thousands bound by the spell of his football magic, refused to look for anything but another Notre Dame miracle against a heavy, experienced and powerful army. But even Rockne himself probably did not bargain for quite as great a show of strength as the cadets displayed to a colorful throng of 65,000.

Displaying the most relentless offensive of any team in the east this week-end and putting forth a defense which cut down every attacking move of the mid-western team, the McEwan eleven did about everything it attempted, and did it well. The entire forward row crashed through Notre Dame on almost every play and toward the end the South Bend team's backfield was felled so quickly not even a forward pass could be gotten away. On the other hand the cadets punctuated their plunging attack at unexpected periods with well - timed aerials attempts and completed four of their five throws.

Dartmouth, Cornell and Syracuse, still to be scored upon this year, were not hard pressed, although the latter bested Indiana, 14-0, largely as he result of favorable breaks. All three teams still have their first severe struggle to come and the Ithacans may probably not get theirs until they face Columbia Oct. 31 at the Polo grounds. Syracuse looks to add further to its already long string of touchdowns in a game against Providence next week. After which they will tackle the rugged Penn State outfit. Dartmouth, However, has a Harvard foe keyed for revenge next week and their clash will be one of Saturday's outstanding tilts.

Defeat for Columbia's strong eleven at the hands of Ohio state, 9 to 0, still further narrowed the list of unbeaten eastern elevens. Only Pennsylvania, army, Dartmouth, Cornell and Syracuse of the major elevens have now won all their games, although Colgate, Lafayette, Princeton and navy by tying their games yesterday, remain undefeated.

The defeat of Harvard at the hands of the Crimson's old Worcester rival carried a stunning jolt for the Cambridge men, in spite of the fact that Holy Cross had been threatening for several campaigns. The crimson was able to win by only a single touchdown in 1923 while in 1924 the Harvard margin was a mere field goal. Holy Cross had given little sign of its strength in early season games but Holy Cross against Harvard has always been a tartar and yesterday the Worcester warriors finally went "over the top."

MASS. AGGIES PROVE TO TOUGH FOR CONN. AGGIES IN SATURDAY:S GAME

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Oct. 18—The Connecticut Aggies went down to their third defeat in as many weeks Saturday, when the powerful Massachusetts Aggies eleven downed the Storrs team by a 13-0 count.

Play on Gardner Dow field on the annual alumni homecoming day, the game drew the largest crowd of the year at the state college. Hundreds of Connecticut alumni and former students were present for the contest, as well as a large delegation from the Bay Path institution. Many eastern Connecticut alumni and friends of the college were present, also.

Paul Bitgood and Gerard Allard, of Danielson and Putnam respectively, were two eastern Connecticut boys who played for the storrs team. Bitgood started the game at left guard, his regular position, and played the entire game. His work was of high order, especially in the last half, when the Connecticut team more than held their own with the Bay Staters. Allard went into the game in the last half, playing right halfback, where he showed to advantage.

In defeating the Storrs team Saturday M. A. C. made up for the defeat sustained at the hands of Dole's aggregation last year, when the Nutmeg eleven triumphed with a 12-10 score. The Bay Staters had been pointing for Saturday's game, and as the final result showed, their efforts were well rewarded. Connecticut's aerial attack, which accounted for the victory last year, was checked at every turn Saturday by the alert M. A. C. backfield men. Evidently Coach Gore had coached his men behind the line on forward pass defense, for many of the Nutmeg Aggies overhead heaves were intercepted, thus stopping Connecticut's most powerful weapon of offense.

Massachusetts displayed a powerful running attack, one that was easily the strongest seen here this season. A crushing off-tackle play, and an equally crushing drive through guard, was in a large part the entire M. A. C. offense. Now and then a reverse play that went outside the end was used for variety, and a short forward pass, tried when the Bay State running attack was stopped on the Connecticut ten yard line, was good for the second Massachusetts score.

Winning the toss, the Bay Staters elected to receive at the cast end of the field. Starting with the first play, the M. A. C. line bucking attack got under way, and successive first downs carried the ball past midfield and into Connecticut territory. Moberg and Hilyard ripped through the line and off the tackles of the Nutmeg forward wall in this march, and a sure score seemed imminent.

Backed up against their own goal line, the Connecticut defense held strong however, and the Bay Staters could not score. Connecticut punted out to the forty yard line, and once more the M. A. C. team started a drive for the goal line of the Storrs team. Once more Coach Dole's men threw back the Amherst ball carriers, and the quarter ended with no score, though the Massachusetts team constantly threatened the Storrs goal line.

All the damage, at least from the Connecticut standpoint, came in the second period. Unleashing a running game that was not to be denied, M. A. C. started a march down the field that ended only when Sullivan crashed across the Connecticut goal line for the first touchdown of the game, putting his team in the lead by six points. Captain Jones was hurried by the Connecticut team as he attempted to kick the goal after the touchdown, and his try went under the cross bar. With the score 6-0 against them, the Aggies elected to receive, Schofield catching the kickoff and running it back to his own twenty-five yard line. Connecticut's attempts at rushing the ball were effect

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Solitary Reaper

Behold her, single in the field,
Yon solitary Highland lass!
Reaping and singing by herself:
Stop here, or gently pass!
Alone she cuts and binds the grain,
And sings a melancholy strain;
O, listen; for the vale profound
Is overflowing with the sound.

No nightingale did ever chant
More welcome notes to weary bands
Of travelers in some shady haunt,
Among Arabian sands;
A voice so thrilling ne'er was heard
In springtime from the cuckoo-bird,
Breaking the silence of the seas
Among the farthest Hebrides.

Will no one tell me what she sings?
Perhaps the plaintive numbers flow
For old, unhappy, far-off things,
And battles long ago:
Or is it some more humble lay,
Familiar matter of today?
Some natural sorrow, loss or pain,
That has been, and may be again?

What'er the theme the maiden sang
As if her song could have no ending—
I saw her singing at her work,
And o'er the sickle bending—
I listened motionless and still;
And, as I mounted up the hill,
The music in my heart I bore
Long after it was heard no more.
—William Wordsworth.

The Woods in Winter

When Winter winds are piercing chill,
And through the hawthorn blows the gale,
With solemn feet I tread the hill
That overbrows the lonely vale.

O'er the bare upland, and away
Through the long reach of desert woods,
The embracing sunbeams chastely play
And gladden these deep solitudes.

Where, twisted round the barren oak,
The summer vine in beauty clung,
And summer winds the stillness broke
The crystal icicle is hung.

Where, from their frozen urns, mute springs,
Pour out the river's gradual tide,
Shrilly the skater's iron rings
And voices fill the woodland side.

Alas! how changed from the fair scene,
When birds sang out their mellow lay,
And winds were soft, and woods were green,
And the song ceased not with the day!

But still wild music is abroad,
Pale, desert woods! within your crowd;
And gathering winds, in hoarse accord,
Amid the vocal reeds pipe loud.

Chill airs and Wintry winds! my ear
Has grown familiar with your song;
I hear it in the opening year,
I listen and it cheers me long.
—Longfellow.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

There are a number of unusually good letters on the Wide Awake page this morning and it was quite difficult to pick out the prize winners for this week. Practically all of the letters were carefully written, the penmanship was excellent and the subjects chosen by the young writers are interesting. The prize winning letters are judged according to the neatness of the letter itself, the penmanship, the spelling and the subject chosen.

One thing we all should strive to acquire is skill in whatever we undertake to do and this is achieved by first resolving to do things well. Think not only of what you are going to do but also of what you are doing. Oftentimes what you are going to do depends upon how well you do what you already have in hand.

The pathway of life is made easier by good habits of the mind and the young folks who realize this are better equipped for life's tests than those who do not. As a final word, be neat, be prompt, be thorough and be sincere in what you do. It pays!

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

History of Windham County

Dear Uncle Jed: The charter granted to the Connecticut Colony by Charles II in 1662 included what is now Windham county. The first settlement was made in 1686 and by 1726 Windham county was established with the county seat at Windham. There were eight towns at that time. Churches and schools had been built and militia organized.

Congregationalism called the "standing order" was almost the universal creed. It's Sabbath began at sunset on Saturday and ended on sunset Sunday.

Turnpikes connected the towns, lands were cultivated, mills and tanneries were built.

The people were poor and few. No towns except Windham had more than one hundred families.

There were a few Negro slaves and Indians. During the 20 years following the organization of the Windham County association in 1700 the population greatly increased. New lands were cleared and further resources developed. The church and civic life was first and fundamental. The town was the unit of civil government; the meeting house a place of town meetings, often threatened by hostile Indians.

In the French and Indian war the people in Windham county suffered greatly. After the revolution the social and home life changed also with added facilities and conveniences. A greater interest in education was shown, libraries, high schools and academies were established.

The introduction of the carding machines made the production of the woolen goods easier. Cotton factories were established.

On July 26, 1820 the county seat was changed to Brooklyn. The coming of the railroad encouraged manufactures and business enterprise.

My Pets

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought you might like to know about my pets.

I have quite a few pets including pigeons, a dog, calves, cats and guinea pigs.

The guinea pigs names are Bessie and Billie, one is a white Peruvian and the other a brown English Cavie.

Many people call them rats but they are vegetarians, living chiefly on grass and vegetables such as carrots, beets and turnips. People say potatoes will kill them. They also will eat hay and grain and sometimes stale bread.

I keep mine just for pets but some people sell them to hospitals where many are used for experiments.

It is quite a job to keep them in the winter as they are quite subject to pneumonia if they are in a draft or exposed to the rain or snow.

One winter I kept a guinea pig for some friends and as it had been kept near the furnace and I kept it in the barn it was suddenly taken sick and died.

I think guinea pigs make very interesting pets.

My First Fishing Excursion

Dear Uncle Jed: I remember my first fishing excursion as if it were but yesterday. It was a still sweet day of early summer, the birds sang merrier than before.

My uncle who knew by long experience where the best haunts of pickerel, considerately placed me at the most favorable point. I threw out my line as I had so often seen others and waited anxiously for a bite. Nothing came of it." "Try again," said my uncle. Suddenly the bait sank out of sight. "Now for it," thought I; "theres a fish at last." I made a strong pull and brought up a tangle of weeds.

I looked to my uncle appealingly. "Try once more," he said. "We fisherman must have patience. Suddenly something tugged at my line. Jerking it up I saw a fine pickerel. "Uncle," I cried, "I've got a fish."

"Not yet," said my uncle. As he spoke there was a splash in the water, my hook hung empty from the line. I had lost my prize.

Overcome by my great disappointment, I sat down and refused to be comforted. My uncle refitted my bait and putting the pole again in my hands, told me to try my luck once more.

"But remember, boy," he said with his shrewd smile, never brag of catching a fish until it is on dry ground. I've seen older folks doing that in more ways than one, and so making fools of themselves. It's no use to boast of anything until it's done or then either for it speaks for itself.

A Little Stranger

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you a story about the little strangers.

Not very long ago, in one of our cities out west a policeman was sitting on a box in front of a store. He felt something crawling up his legs. He caught it and held it up in his hand. He did not know what it was. At first he thought it was a rat. But he had never seen a rat like this one. He took it to the police station and kept it for awhile.

One day, a policeman was passing a fruit store. He looked in the window and saw in a small glass show case a nest of seven baby animals just like the little stranger at the the police station. He went in and asked the store keeper where he got them. "I found them in a bunch of bananas that just came from South America," he said.

Fight With a Wildcat

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would try my luck at winning a prize. I am going to write a story about a wild cat. The name is a fight with a wild cat.

One day a fisherman counted his chickens and found a number of them missing. He said, I must find the thief. So he hid in the coop that night and about twelve o'clock in walked the wild cat. He was about to grab a chicken when the fisherman fired a shot at him. One leap and the wild cat fell to the floor dead.

Playing School

Dear Uncle Jed: I wrote to you to tell about my summer's vacation. I had a very good time in my vacation. My sister and I played school. I was the teacher and she was my pupil. When she was in school, she would do whatever I asked her. I had a little table for my desk. I had many books and pencils. When the bell rang she would come to school. The first thing I would do, would be to see if her finger nails were clean and if her hair was combed. Then we would go along with our school work. They were reading, spelling, arithmetic, history and geography. She did pretty well.

Two Cats and a Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: I have two cats and a dog. They can do many tricks. One cat is yellow, the other is black and white. My dog is black and striped with brown. He is a bull dog. His name is Buster. He is very mean. He barks at every one who comes to my house. He likes me very much. He follows me all around my house. He does not go to the village. He stays near the house.

My Vacation

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would tell you about my vacation I spent on a farm this summer. I rode on loads of hay and rode horseback, picked berries, and had a fine time. I hope I can go again for vacation. I am going to school now.

I like my school and am in the third grade. We have 18 scholars. I carry milk and mail to a neighbor every day that has no one to do errands for them. So you see I am quite a busy boy.

GEORGE ROGER, Age 7.

The Indians

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the second time I am writing to you. I am going to write about the Indians.

The Indians lived in America before the white men did.

There were no houses, no fences, no roads, no gardens, such as we have now.

There was only great woods, plains, swamps, and paths that were made by the Indians. The Indians used bows and arrows to fight with.

The Indians did not live in the same place all of the time.

They liked to move from place to place. When at war they painted their faces to make themselves look fierce.

The Indian girls are very fond of jewels. The women do most of the work.

They cook the food, make the clothes, and plant the corn. They also put up the wigwams and take them down. An Indian woman is called a squaw and the baby is called a papoose.

The Indian baby has a funny cradle. It is made of skin with a flat board at the bottom.

The mother carries it on her back with the baby in it. The Indians wear clothes made of skins of animals. Their shoes are made of deer skin.

They are called moccasins.

They are taught how to hunt, fish, and to be brave in war.

My Pet Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my second story to the Wide Awakes. I thought I would write about my pet cat. My cat is yellow and white and is a male cat. He has yellow eyes too. His name is Rusty. He is very faithful. My pet cat is a very good hunter. He will catch mice and rats and will bring them to me before Rusty will eat the same that he has caught. He came from New London when he was two months old. Rusty's mother was black, yellow and white. She had three other baby kittens besides him. She had one yellow kitten besides Rusty and I do not know what color the other two were. My pet cat will jump upon my father's shoulders and will sit down and will begin to purr. When he stands upon his hind legs he can look over our kitchen table. Sometimes he will cuff himself. When he hears our cat fighting with neighbors cats Rusty will run for a hiding place. He generally goes on top of the roof of the house and stays. When we let out our hens and chickens he likes to chase them. I think he is a very faithful cat, don't you?

Hunting Bears

Dear Uncle Jed: I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story. One day a man went hunting. He saw a little bear in its home. He took the bear and ran away with it. The mother bear happened to see him go. She began to growl and growl till he dropped the little bear. The mother went and picked her little one up and brought him home.

Visited Dairy Farms

Dear Uncle Jed: During vacation I went on a trip with my mother and father and brother. We went to Moorlavel farm, the place where I was born. There the ice-house is in the same building as the dairy. They have a tractor to pull the plows and harrows. Thew have two big silos. Next we went to Farmington and there we ate our lunch. At that farm we saw a bull eleven years old. There we went to Avon. There we saw five big bulls. At that dairy we saw a man bottling milk. He had a machine under which he put a row of bottles. He turned a handle and the milk ran into the bottles. Then he had something to put caps on the bottles. Then he sprayed them with water to wash them off. Then he put on little paper covers fastened on with a little wire on top of it there was "This milk is sold as certified milk." Then we went and saw the alfalfa crops. Some alfalfa was growing in sand. They raise some tobacco also. After looking around a little more we went home, getting home about seven o'clock.

Fire Prevention

Uncle Jed: Every year New England sets apart one week called Fire Prevention Week. It is done mainly to impress upon the minds of the public the need of preventing fires. Like a wolf on some prey it devours when it sees an opportunity.

Some one has asked why they always choose some week in autumn for spreading this alarm. It is a question that requires thought. My own ideas are because a tiny spark when given draft while placed or thrown on destructable material it will soon have a flame large enough to burn a whole block.

Secondly the leaves bidding goodbye to their summer home. The tree, descend to the earth and dance to the merry music of the wind. Some might carelessly drop a cigarette with a lighted end into the gutter. The winds help these sparks to scatter among the leaves and some times hundreds of acres of timberland perish under the hands of fire. Thousands of other reasons may be suggested and all prove true.

Children may help to carry out this plan by putting out every match after it is used, but to keep a good distance away from it lest they be tempted to light it.

A Pet Chicken

Dear Uncle Jed: I am eleven years old and in the fifth grade. I am going to tell you about my chicken. Its mother died and I took care of it until it would follow me around the yard and in the house. Every time I sat down it would jump up in my lap, and cuddle down. It got killed in the door.

Christopher Columbus

Dear Uncle Jed: Once upon a time there was a man and his name was Christopher Columbus. He was a great admiral. He was the first to cross the Atlantic ocean. The Atlantic ocean was then called the sea of Darkness. It was said that it was full of monsters and other terrible creatures. But Columbus did not believe it. So Columbus went to the king of Portugal, but he would not help him. So he then went to the king and queen of spain. They would not help him the first time. But he went the second time and got help. Columbus made three more voyages after this one. They fitted out three ships and a few men for him.

The names of the three ships were, the Santa Maria, the Nina, and the Pinta. Ninety persons set out with Columbus on his memorable voyage. They had been persuaded to go. Columbus sailed first to the Canary Islands. His men said that Columbus was crazy and wanted to throw him overboard and go back to Spain. Columbus sailed under the Spanish flag.

Our studies in school are reading, arithmetic, history, spelling, and English. We are all learning how to save money. There is a man from the bank who comes around every week and he collects the money we have saved and puts it in the bank for us.

Are Saving Their Money

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about our school. We have a boy in our school room who went around the class locating places on the map of North America. His name is Henry Roberts. He did it in 1-2 a minute.

The bank man comes to school every Tuesday teaching us how to save our money. I think it is very nice because lot of little children spend their money on candy, so that way they save it. Our room has $4.90 saved up. The seventh and eighth grades have $5.39 saved up. We are going to try and beat them next week. I wish you were able to come and see us. We send love to you and your family.

About Wheat

Dear Uncle Jed: In our school we are studying about wheat. The United States raises more wheat than any other nation. We supply about one fifth of all the wheat grown in the world.

Wheat is classed as winter wheat or the spring wheat, and it depends on whether it is planted in the fall or spring. It is also classed as hard or soft.

There are three different types of wheat. The winter wheat has three and so has the spring wheat.

The damp climate produces the soft wheat, and the drier climate produces the hard wheat.

Flour is made from the hard wheat and macaroni is made from the macaroni wheat. Winter wheat is planted in the fall it lives through the winter and ripens the following summer.

About two thirds of all the wheat grown in the United States is of winter varieties. About seventy per cent of all the spring wheat is grown in the United States.

For planting wheat the best seed should be selected. The seed should not be planted too deep or too shallow but just right, so it will grow perfect. The wheat should be planted in rows, running north and south and east and west. So the winds can not hurt it. The wheat should be cut when it gets ripe. Some people leave their wheat until it is ripe enough to scatter. After being cut it should be spread so it will dry quickly.

The Arab

Dear Uncle Jed: The Arab lives in the Sahara desert. The Arab has a dark skin. The Arabs are part of the white race only they are sunburned. The Arab sees the great running bird called the ostrich. Our teacher showed us an ostrich egg. It was about as big as a baby's head. A fresh ostrich egg is a treat to them. They see snakes and lizards. They have gardens and in them they have wheat, orange trees, figs, and dates. They boil locusts and dry them in the sun. They weave cloth out of camel's hair. Out of this they make their homes. They have mats on the floor. They have swords and spears, knives, forks and spoons. They put all these things on the camel's backs when they want to move. The camels have little pads on their knees. When they are going on a long journey they store up food in the hump in their back which they live on. The women and girls have to work in the garden and take care of the home and pick the dates and figs.

My mother says she thinks there's some rabbit in him, because he runs like a rabbit. He is half angora. He is blue with a white shirt front. I got him on Labor day. My father brought him home in a paper bag. He chases his tail. When I am writing he jumps up into a chair and then jumps onto my paper. My mother says we are getting him into bad habits because he will only drink warm milk.

MINISTER SAYS SECRET OF CARE FREE LIFE IS IN GOD

CHICAGO, Oct. 19 (AP)—The secret of a carefree life is to put it in line with God's purposes, declared Dr. Henry Howard of Melbourne, Australia, in an address on "Don't Worry," opening the nineteenth season of the Sunday Evening club.

"Christ's cure for a worried life is explained in His words: 'Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things (what you eat and drink and wear) shall be added to you,'" Dr. Howard said. "Everyone who has stood up to life has felt its worry, stress and strain. But the way out from worry does not lie along the line of escape from work.

"The birds and flowers to which Christ referred as carefree, are among the busiest of God's creatures. The work translated 'toil' does not mean work,' but work plus worry. First of all stand right with Him. This will swing life into harmony by putting it on the rails of God's permanent way, and everything life needs will come along the lines of fulfilled relations to Him as Master and Lord.

Sleep or Go Hungry

You cannot know the future may
Add to the troubles of today;
Sufficient, therefore, let it be
To meet the troubles that you see..
—Buster Bear.

"My!" said Peter Rabbit to no one in particular, as he watched Buster Bear stuffing himself with beechnuts. "My! I never did see such greed."

Buster Bear stopped abruptly and swung his head around so as to look straight at Peter. "What was that remark you made, Longears?" inquired Buster in his deepest, rumbliest, grumbliest voice.

"Nothing," said Peter hastily. "That is, nothing personal, Mr. Bear. What a wonderful lot of beechnuts it takes to fill you up."

"It isn't a matter of filling me up," replied Buster Bear. "It's a matter of getting enough fat under this black skin of mine."

"Humph," said Peter, "I should think that you would be afraid of getting too fat. I can't imagine anything more uncomfortable than being too fat."

Buster chuckled right out loud. "I don't think you need worry, Peter," said he, "and I'm sure I don't worry. I can't remember ever having been quite fat enough. You see, the fatter I get the better I'll sleep. Fat and sleep go together. So because I want to sleep good I want to get fat. You see, with we bears in the winter it is a case of sleep or go hungry."

"No, I don't see anything of the sort," retorted Peter. "What has sleep got to do with going hungry?"

"Well," said Buster, "if you are asleep you don't know that you are hungry, do you?"

"No-o," replied Peter.

"But if you are awake and hungry you know it, don't you?" continued Buster.

"Well, if next winter I am awake I certainly will be hungry and winter is no time to be hungry," replied Buster Bear.

"Nobody knows that better than I do," retorted Peter. "I should think if a little fellow like me can stand it, a great big fellow like you would be able to stand it."

"Did it ever occur to you, Peter Rabbit, that the smaller the stomach the less it takes to fill it?" demanded Buster. "There is nothing, truly nothing, for me to eat in winter. I've got to do all my eating beforehand. If I sleep right straight through I don't know any discomfort until spring. Goodness knows there is enough of it then! But if I wake up in the middle of winter I can't go to sleep again because I'm hungry, and I'm hungry because I can't go to sleep. So I'm laying in all the fat I can right now. It isn't greed at all. It is just plain everyday common sense. As between sleeping and going hungry, it is me for the sleep every time."

"But if you are awake and hungry you know it, don't you?" continued Buster

"You ought not have any trouble getting fat that fall," declared Peter.

"Right, Peter! Quite right," replied Buster. "Some years I have to keep traveling all the time to get enough food and then I walk the fat off as fast as I put it on. But this year there is plenty to eat everywhere, and getting fat is no trouble at all. I certainly ought to sleep well even if the winter is long and hard."

"Do you think it is really going to be" asked Peter anxiously.

"I don't know anything about it," replied Buster. "What is more, I don't care. I will simply sleep so much longer if it is a hard one. My, these beechnuts are sweet." Buster resumed his search among the leaves and paid no more attention to Peter Rabbit. Buster was getting ready for winter just as much as were the Squirrel cousins.

GROWTH OF TRADE WITH NEW NEIGHBORS

The trade of the United States with the new political divisions established as a result of the World war has made a remarkable growth since the appearance on the commercial map of the world. From Azerbaijan, which heads the alphabetical list, to Ukraine and Yugo Slavia with which it ends, all have shown a remarkable interest in the manufactured products of the United States and a desire to send their raw material in exchange therefor. Our own official figures show an increase of over 60 per cent in the dollar value of our trade with these 20 new political divisions since the beginning of the fiscal year of 1920. From Esthonia, Latvia, Lithuania, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Hungary and including Germany, Russia, Belgium and Roumania in which new boundary lines have changed their population and commercial activities, and including also the British, Belgian and French possessions in Africa which were enlarged by the "Mandated" German colonies, the demand for American merchandise has advanced.

This increase in the trade with these new countries is the more interesting, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York, in the fact that several of the newly established countries are distinctly "Interior" areas with no frontage upon tide water yet our trade with them which necessarily crosses the Atlantic, has steadily grown since our first record of trade with them. With Czecho-Slovakia whose commerce necessarily crosses adjacent countries in reaching tide water, our commerce has grown from 10 million dollars in the fiscal year of 1920 to 35 million dollars in the fiscal year 1925. With hungary the exports are much larger than in 1920 while the imports from Austria also show a remarkable gain, amounting to 3 1-2 millions in 1925. From Poland which now reaches tide water through the free port of Danzig the imports of 1925 are 10 times as much as in 1920. Our trade with Poland since the beginning of 1920 has aggregated more than a 100 million dollars.

With Germany whose area and population were somewhat reduced at the close of the war the trade of 1925 was approximately 300 million dollars against 250 millions in 1920. With Russia which shows a slight decline in area and population the trade of 1925 is 67 million dollars consisting chiefly of exports to that country which exports now go for the most part across the north Atlantic to the new port of Murmansk in northeastern Russia, being connected with the interior of that country by the Kola-Petrograd Railway constructed during the war. Most of our trade with Russia now occurs with the section geographically designated as "European Russia" with which our trade in 1925 was approximately 63 million dollars against less than 1 million dollars with Asiatic Russia, formerly reached through the port of Vladivostok. The total trade with Russia since the beginning of 1920 has been about 250 million dollars. With Finland our trade since the beginning of 1920 has exceeded 100 million dollars and with Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania our trade in 1925 was about 7 1-2 million dollars.

RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE TO DISCUSS MANY TOPICS

NEW YORK, Oct. 19 (AP)—The eighth national conference of the American Country Life Association will be held at Richmond, Va., October 27 to 31. The general subject of the conference will be "Needed Adjustments in Rural Life Today."

The list of subjects for discussion includes: What are the "better business" requirements of American agriculture? What is the farmer's real relation to "big business?" Why does the farmer pay more taxes than his city cousin in proportion to income? What readjustment would give country boys and girls educational facilities equal to what city schools afford? Why should the problem of the country physician and the country hospital be growing worse? What should be done with an alleged surplus of rural church buildings, and with uneducated ministers?

Among those who will participate are Dr. E. G. Nourse, Institute of Economics, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Clarence Poe, editor, Progressive Farmer, Raleigh, N. C.; Professor Carl C. Taylor, Dean of the Graduate school, North Carolina States College; Dr. C. J. Galpin, United States department of agriculture; President Kenyon L. Butterfield, Michigan Agricultural college; Prof. R. E. Hieronymus, Illinois State agricultural college, President J. B. Reynolds, Ontario Agricultural college, Guelph, Canada; Sam Higginbottom, principal of the Agricultural Institute of Allahabad, India.

Chasing a Bear

Anyone who has seen a bear walk knows how slowly he seems to move, and his run is a shuffling, lumbering gait that is comical to witness, unless he happens to be running after you. But a bear moves pretty fast, notwithstanding appearances, and the grizzly, which looks to be clumsier than the brown or the black bear, can cover ground faster than the average horse.

A western sheep rancher was riding in the foothills when he saw a big, awkward silvertip. He had a rifle, but was not certain he could kill the bear at one shot and knew that he would get into trouble if he missed. So he gave a regular cowboy yell, and the bear started away in alarm.

The man gave chase, at the same time keeping up the piercing yell, and he soon noticed that the grizzly was getting farther away. He continued the chase for nearly two miles, until the bear disappeared in the mountains, and he had not gained a foot.

In going back over the trail he noticed places where the bear had made jumps of 15 to 20 feet, and the ground had been cut up by his claws, so that it looked as if a harrow had been run over it.

CHAMBERLAIN CONGRATULATED LUTHER AND STRESEMANN

BERLIN, Oct. 18.—(AP)—The German delegation headed by Dr. Hans Luther, the chancellor, and Gustav Stresemann, the foreign minister, reached Berlin from Locarno today. The ambassadors of Great Britain and France, the Belgium minister and other diplomats, as well as members of the cabinet greeted the returning delegates at the station.

As it was not known to the general public when the train would arrive there was no manifestation of any kind, but Lord D'Abernno, the British ambassador, at the request of Austen Chamberlain the British secretary of foreign affairs, congratulated Chancellor Luther and Dr. Stresemann on the success of the conference and expressed Mr. Chamberlain's joy at the spirit of honesty and integrity shown by the German delegates.

"To the German government," he said, "will always be accorded the honor of taking the initiative which led to the Locarno negotiations."

After stating that Mr. Chamberlain regarded Locarno as the turning point in European history, Lord D'Abernon voiced the hope that the friendly relations begun between the German and British delegations would mean a new relationship between the two nations.

REVERSIBLE CLOAKS ARE POPULAR AT MONTE CARLO

MONTE CARLO, Oct. 18.—(AP) — The reversible dress is the novelty of the season. By an ingenuous arrangement of large ornamental buttons the dress may be easily turned inside out or outside in. Usually one side is white and the other is a beige shade; or black and white, or blue and black are used with excellent effect.

Reversible cloaks for evening and day combined have achieved remarkable popularity here. A demur maiden swathed in black at the casino may turn in a twinkling into a gorgeous vision in sparkling gold. Reversible hats, too, have appeared, straw or felt composes one side, silk or soft material the other.

So a morning affair, suitable for wear with tailor mades is slipped off turned inside out, and reappears as a shady georgette model, trimmed with straw, quite the thing for a garden party. The matter of brims has also been provided for, thus enabling a close-fitting clotche to be transformed into a picture hat.

Operations on men and women abroad, between the ages of 50 and 70 have convinced him that it is successful.

Danger Ahead!

What has this child to look forward to?

WHEN your child mopes and doesn't want to play, has headache upset stomach, sleeps poorly, gets low marks at school, don't ascribe it to natural conditions—Something's wrong—watch your child carefully—(Remember constipation is a bad habit and difficult to overcome in later years). Give him a good medicine—not something harsh—give him Beecham's Pills — contain no calomel — not habit forming, gentle but thorough.

Children like Beecham's Pills much better than fussing with a bottle and spoon. The child who protests against ordinary medicine will take Beecham's Pills readily because the pill is easily swallowed, has a tasteless coating and does not stir up the stomach

It's bad enough to neglect yourself, but infinitely worse to neglect your child. Beecham's Pills are particularly desirable for children because they are guaranteed free from calomel, coal tar derivatives and other dangerous ingredients. Beecham's Pills are purely vegetable—millions of boxes are sold yearly for the relief of constipation, biliousness and sick headache in man, woman and child. Particularly good for children —equally good for grownups.

TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S CONSTANCY

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Tribute to President Coolidge's constancy as a church attendant and as being the sort of "living apostle of Christ the country needs in every community" was paid by the Rev. An elder in the New York church Dr. Pierce said, asked him prior to his sermon if the president would be in his pew this Sunday.

WITNESSED THE RECENT DISORDERS IN PANAMA

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—(AP)—Passengers arriving today on the steamship H. F. Alexander from the Pacific coast told of witnessing the Panama City disorders of last week. Some of the passengers said they were asleep when the rifle firing broke out.

The trouble started from a "tenant's strike" against high rents.

Captain George H. Zeh, commander of the H. F. Alexander, termed the disorders a "full-fledged insurrection." Passengers from the ship who were sitting on cafe verandahs when firing began fled to the steamer. None of them was injured.

The more vanity some people possess the easier it is to make them happy.

ANOTHER NEW LONDON HOME ENTERED AND ONCE MORE BY THE CELLAR ROUTE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Oct. 19—Another daylight burglary was reported Saturday afternoon when the residence of Mrs. J. B. Collins, 8 Brooks street, was entered, the thief securing between $35 and $40 and a leather fold, containing valuable papers and having the inscription, "J. B. Collins," on the outside of the fold.

Mrs. Collins left her home during the early afternoon, locking both the front and rear doors but she failed to secure the cellar entrance. The crook entered the place through that entrance and ascended the stairs leading to the living apartments. The money and leather fold were found on a table and taken, but other articles of value were not disturbed, indicating that the crook was intent upon making a hasty commission of his crime rather than conducting a search for additional plunder and, perhaps, be caught in his thieving by Mrs. Collins, who absented herself from the place less than an hour. The break is the fourth daylight robbery perpetrated within five days.

Mrs. F. M. Warner, 30 Pleasant street, complained to the police late Saturday afternoon that her garage had been broken into and that tools and a blowtorch had been stolen.

An automobile owned and operated by John Shea, 17 Vietz street, and a car owned and driven by Albert Oman, of South Windham, were in collision on Bank street Saturday night. The damage to either machine was not great.

Maurice O'Rourke, 26, a sailor attached to the United States coast guard patrol boat, 10, was arrested about 6 o'clock this morning charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. O'Rourke went to the residence of Dorothy Lewis, 607 Main street, about 5:30 o'clock and attempted to gain entrance. The Lewis woman refused to admit O'Rourke with the result that the sailor started to force an entrance. The Lewis woman communicated with the police. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman George Laboue who were assigned to the complaint, found O'Rourke at the house when they arrived there. O'Rourke was placed under arrest and lodged in a cell at the police station.

L. H. Frenette, 21, a sailor attached to the United States coast guard patrol boat, 10, was arrested Saturday night on Church street by Patrolman Edward Daniels charged with intoxication and disorderly conduct. He will be given a hearing in the police court Monday morning.
